100 KILLED IN ARSENAL BLAST

HUNDRED YEARS' WAR FOR LEGAL REFORM TOLD

Long Struggle Won by England.

The Tribune herewith presents the first installment of an article by Prof. Edson R. Sunderland of the law school of the University of Michigan on the history of the English struggle for the reform of legal procedure and the character of the remarkably efficient system by which England now administers justice through the courts. Other installments will be printed in The Sunday Tribune week by week. It will be seen that the subject is one in which laymen should be as keenly interested as lawyers. The article has been prepared under the auspices of the American Bar association, which contends that, unless the public is willing to do its share in co-operation with the legal profession, this generation in America is not likely to enjoy the benefits of a system of legal procedure comparable in efficiency to that now in effect in England.

BY EDSON R. SUNDERLAND.

The progress of civilization has always realized itself in the development of specialized social functions, and the process has produced a highly complex organization of interrelated social groups. Each of these groups has definite interests of its own, which always appear more or less antagonistic to the interests of other groups, so that the history of society has consisted of a perpetual struggle of group against group for power and privilege. No other group occupies a position in the social structure of such potential power as the legal profession, for it controls the operation of the laws by which all groups are subject. The physician deals with a single social group, the physically unwell; the clergyman deals with the communicants of the church; the banker deals with those who employ credit; the teacher with those who wish to acquire wisdom. But the lawyer holds in his hand the worldly destinies of all.

Most Highly Unified.

The influence of the legal profession is increased by the further fact that it is the most highly unified of all the social groups. This results from the circumstance that it employs a standardized technique which every member is compelled to use. In the middle ages the same thing could have been said of the clergy. Ecclesiastical practice tolerated no departure from approved rituals and sacraments, and the uniformity of ceremony contributed much to the solidarity of the church as a social institution.

With the disintegration of Catholic supremacy this uniformity disappeared, for rival ecclesiastical groups, differing as widely in their ceremonial forms as in their theological doctrines, multiplied and prospered. But in the field of the law no such development has been permitted to occur. The state has insisted upon keeping control of the mechanism for administering justice, making it a public monopoly, and it has pursued the policy of rigidly prescribing rules to govern the practice of the courts.

All Learn Same Rules.

All the lawyers in the state are therefore forced to become familiar with the same rules of procedure, to follow the same sequence of steps, to use the same technical language, and to think in the same logical formulæ. Such uniformity in training, conduct, and ideas could not fail to produce a class with a highly developed group consciousness.

The monopolistic nature of a technique prescribed by law has, moreover, the tendency to produce resistance to change. Those who employ it compete with one another only within the limits of the established rules. No one is allowed to outbid his competitor by offering a new remedy or by using a superior procedure. The question of new rules, therefore, never becomes a professional problem in the strict sense of the term, for it is normally outside the scope of professional activity. Individual success in practice suffers no apparent loss from the use of a defective system, because the handicap operates equally upon all competitors.

Self-Interest Is Lacking.

Accordingly, immediate self-interest offers no convincing reason for leaving the familiar paths and undertaking a struggle with new problems. Furthermore, the lack of experience with any other technique makes it difficult for the bar to see defects in the current system or to appreciate their seriousness if pointed out. Not until inefficiency reaches a point where it threatens to drive away business does the unreasoning group instinct scent

BOBBY GAINS TRIPLE CROWN BY 1 STROKE

Joe Turnesa Second; Four Tie for 3d.

BY MORROW KRUM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., July 10.—Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., Atlanta's beloved amateur golfer, won the American Open Golf championship at the Scioto country club today after one of the most courageous uphill struggles of his spectacular career.

Bobby finished the 72 holes with 293 strokes, an average of 73¼ for each eighteen holes. This was one slender point ahead of the second man in the great contest, but it was enough, and Jones now holds the American open, the American amateur, and the British open championship at one and the same time. Who shall say now that he is not the world's greatest golfer? And no one ever before held these three titles.

Turnesa, Young Pro, Is Second.

The second man in this great struggle on the Scioto links was Joseph Turnesa, 23 year old pro who minds the golf shop of the Chackamaxon Golf club in Elmsford, N. Y. Turnesa had a total of 294 for the 72 holes.

In third place were "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, Chicago, Leo Diegel, New York, Gene Sarazen, Flushing, N. Y., and Johnny Farrell, Mamaroneck, N. Y., all of whom finished with 297.

From there on came the field, the great players who spent too much time in Scioto's rough and missed too many puts. Hagen, MacFarlane, Smith, Diegel, Farrell and many others of great links fame might just as well have stayed at home as far as the championship proper was concerned. They share in small prizes, but this tournament belonged to either Jones, Mehlhorn, or Turnesa all the way.

Climax of a Day of Thrills.

Jones' victory came as a smashing climax to a day of thrills and superlatives. It came after the dope had been upset more than once, after Mehlhorn, the two day leader, had fallen by the wayside, after Turnesa had led from the fifty-fourth hole to the sixty-ninth and even after O. B. Keeler, Bob's Bobswell, had given up.

Jones did not have his name at the top of the score list until the seventy-first hole. At the end of the first round he was two strokes behind Bill Mehlhorn, at the end of the second round, six strokes behind Mehlhorn, who led at that time. At the fifty-fourth hole, Jones was three strokes behind Turnesa, who had forced his way to the front over Mehlhorn.

Four Down at 63d Hole

At the sixty-third hole, the turn of this afternoon's round, Bobby was four strokes behind Turnesa and everybody had given up expecting, hoping, praying the Atlanta lad would crash through.

Then, with but nine holes to play and a lead of four strokes to overcome Bob put down his head and made the last spurt that brought him home one lean wallop ahead. He caught Turnesa, who had broken, on the seventieth hole. He passed him on the seventy-first and he put the title in the ice box on the seventy-second.

Bobby Gets His Cup.

As this is being written there is a crowd of 4,000 persons on the lawn in front of the club house. Bag pipes played by pipers from Scotland are marching around a small cleared spot. On a table in the middle of that cleared place is a squatty silver cup, the national open trophy.

Officials are waiting for the pipes to cease. They come forward as the tune dies. Jones, his light hair parted in the middle, follows modestly. The photographers demand poses.

William Fownes, president of the U. S. G. A., makes a short speech. He hands the cup to Jones.

"To the greatest fighter of the game," says Bill. A roar from the crowd, a few words—modest, shy words—from Jones. Another roar, and it's all over. Jones goes to the clubhouse with the national open cup in his arms. It's the second time he has won it.

Greatest in Golf History.

Jones, who is shy, quiet, modest, and hates a fuss, is pronounced here the greatest golfer of all history. No

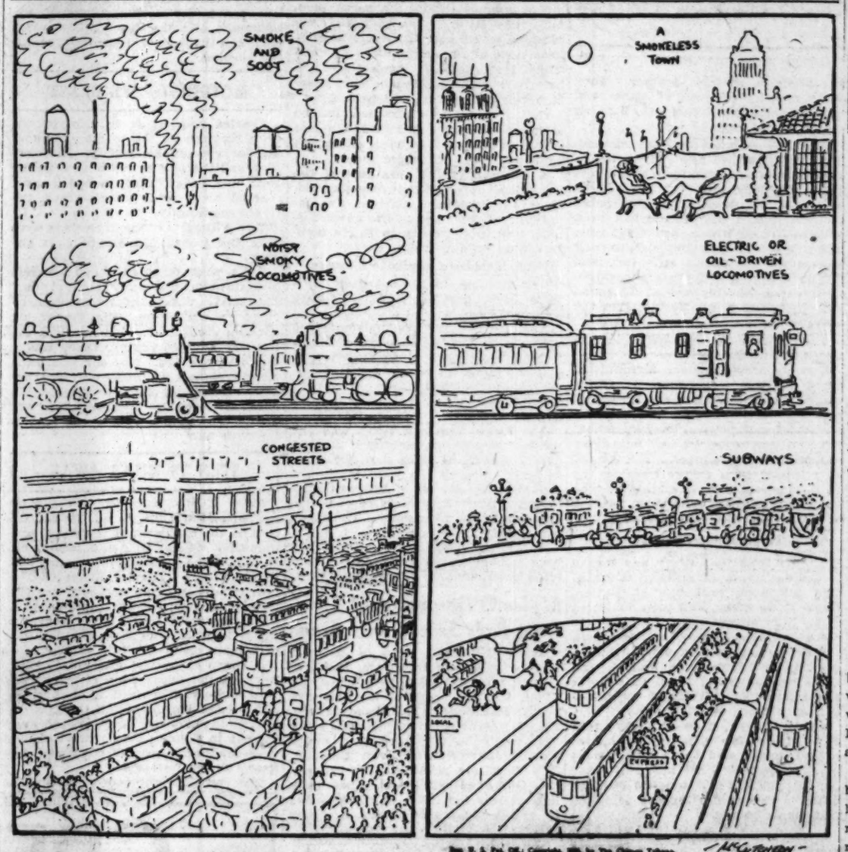
ONE OF CHICAGO'S DREAMS OF THE FUTURE



THE PRESENT. THE FUTURE.

NAB GIRLS FOR MASH NOTES TO POLICE CAPTAIN

Rose Halik, 22 years old, and her sister, Ella, who is four years younger, are stenographers. But they didn't write enough letters to satisfy them in business hours. In their spare time it is charged, they wrote love letters to a handsome police officer, Capt. Richard Gill of the Lawndale station, which explains why they are in the psychopathic hospital.

The captain was annoyed by the letters. Other persons who received missives from the sisters said they adopted a threatening style in their writings. This led to general complaints, according to officers at the station.

Yesterday the girls, who live at 2647 South Millard avenue, a block from the Lawndale station, went in to see the captain. They took him a box of candy. Capt. Gill, annoyed by so much attention, took them into custody and summoned City Physician D. J. Jones. The latter recommended that they be held at the psychopathic hospital for examination.

MORON ATTACKS WOMAN ON WAY FROM CHURCH

Seized by an armed man as she was on her way to her home at 3903 North Hermitage avenue last night after attending a religious meeting, Mrs. Marian Gudell, 28 years old, was dragged into an alley, attacked and robbed of $2.

When the moron released her, Mrs. Gudell fled to her home. She was hysterical and suffering from the rough treatment she had experienced. Members of her family took her to the Ravenswood hospital, where physicians pronounced her injuries serious.

COUNTY HIGHWAY POLICE RAID TWO VILLAGE RESORTS

County highway police early this morning began a series of raids on notorious resorts in villages near Chicago, which, they say, are to continue until the country towns are cleaned up. The first raid was made on "Mike de Pike" Heitler's Burr Oak resort at 355 Burr Oak avenue. The raiding force was led by Sergt. George Ulrich of the Highway police, and Lieut. James O'Brien of the detective bureau. Four women and eight men were arrested. Henry Kimmel was booked as keeper.

Lieut. L. J. Laird of the Morton Grove station raided the Harlem tavern in Stickney, said by the police to be one of Al Caponi's resorts. Ten women and fifteen men were arrested there. Louis Constintio was slated as the keeper.

Illinois Bars Student Cars; Cites Grades

Urbana, Ill., July 10.—[Special.]—Contending that student automobiles are detrimental to scholastic standing, contribute to moral delinquencies, and involve a constant and deplorable waste of time, the council of administration at the University of Illinois today decided to forbid student cars at the state school, effective Sept. 1.

No undergraduate will be permitted to operate any motor vehicle during the session unless he has from the council of administration a specific permit based upon demonstrated necessity or special convenience. A student who lives with his parents or guardian must present from such parents or guardian a written request for a permit.

Notify Parents of Edict.

A letter citing five reasons for their drastic action is being mailed by the council of administration to parents and guardians of all students scheduled to attend the university next fall.

The reasons:

Scholastic standing of most students having cars has been below average.

Owning of cars has involved a constant and serious waste of time.

There have been numerous accidents, involving considerable damage and critical injuries.

There are constant violations of laws governing motor traffic, and a wholly unnecessary and dangerous congestion of streets adjacent to the campus.

The use of cars has contributed to moral delinquencies.

500 Students Affected.

The letter appeals for the cooperation of parents, stating that "students in general have absolutely no need for an automobile."

The letter further states that at the beginning of the school year for the last three years a letter to parents and guardians has cited the dangers created by students having cars, but that conditions have caused the council to come reluctantly to the belief that it is necessary to pass mandatory regulation.

Stray Police Shot Hits Woman; Seriously Wounded

Four men, supposedly holdup men, were riding slowly around St. Mary's church at 32d and Mossprat streets last night when a squad from the Deering street police station approached. The men fled and the police fired at them. One of the bullets from their pistols struck Mrs. Agnes Zblewski, 26 years old, 1024 West 32d street, in the abdomen. She was standing at 32d and Morgan street, two blocks away. At St. Paul's hospital it was said her condition was serious.

Vivid Stories of Disaster Told by Survivors

New Foundland, N. J., July 10.—[United Press.]—"It seemed as if the whole world was burning," was the way Allison J. Hunter, United States Marine corps, described the explosion at the Lake Denmark arsenal.

Hunter, a truck driver at the Marine barracks, arrived at the New Foundland inn this evening with nine marines and fifteen women and children, refugees from the explosion which, he believed, completely wiped out the naval arsenal and may destroy the army depot.

"As we drove away there were more explosions," he said. "I can't tell how many there have been but there are 75 storehouses on the reservation; two magazines filled with TNT; about 20 filled with black powder; and a lot of ammunition and other sorts of storehouses.

"I think they all blew up or they will before it's over."

From the frotn porch of the New Foundland Inn, where Hunter was talking, the flames from the burning arsenal 18 miles away, could be seen shooting high amid the rolling billows of thick, black smoke. Explosions were continuing and could be felt at New Foundland.

"As near as I know there were between 75 and 85 marines stationed at the arsenal," Hunter said. "There were two sailors and seven officers. Capt. O. P. Dowling, U. S. N., was the naval commandant of the arsenal and Capt. B. H. Frank commanded the marines.

"I couldn't say how many might have been killed but there must have been many.

"When I left people were running as fast as they could and in every direction. Many were women and children.

"My wife lives a mile and a half from the naval station and I haven't seen nor heard of her. She doesn't know where I am and there is no way for me to find her."

TELLS OF ESCAPE

Paterson, N. J., July 10.—[Special.]—A graphic story of his escape from the explosion was told by James H. Weaver, a 19 year old marine stationed at the depot who was brought to the General hospital here tonight suffering from cuts and bruises.

Weaver, whose home is in Birmingham, Ala., was brought to the hospital by Motor Vehicle Inspector Harry Barclay who found him and two other marines on a road about three miles from the depot. The two others were not seriously hurt and were not taken to the hospital.

"I had just returned to the barracks after a leave and after putting on denim was about to go outside when I heard the depot fire alarm ring," Weaver said. "Everybody started to run to the post assigned to him for such emergency.

"As I started down a hill, there was a great roar. The magazine had exploded. Everybody around me was knocked down. Shells, burning debris and all sorts of stuff went flying about. A fellow named Brundage—I don't know his first name—had been doing kitchen police duty and had on rubber boots. When the big explosion came he was lifted clean out of his boots and thrown about 15 feet in the air.

"When I climbed to my feet Brundage and I and another marine whose

BULLETIN.

Dover, N. J., July 11.—(Sunday.)—(AP)—In a statement to the Associated Press this morning, Capt. O. C. Dowling, U. S. N., commandant of the navy munitions depot, said he had no way of checking the number of casualties before daylight and that he expected the fire which followed the explosions to rage for hours.

Dover, N. J., July 10.—(Special.)—A series of terrific explosions caused by lightning striking a magazine at the United States naval ammunition depot, Lake Denmark, N. J., six miles north of this town, late this afternoon, shook the country for thirty miles around, tore houses from their foundations, hurled automobiles off the highways and darkened the sky with twin barrages of burning debris and smoke.

The loss of life cannot be estimated accurately. Estimates tonight ranged from 75 to 150. Hundreds were injured and made homeless. All roads leading to the naval reservation have been closed and military and state police guards prevent any one from approaching it, as high explosive shells are still exploding and the fire which followed the first explosion has not burned itself out.

Fire at Army Arsenal.

The flames swept the scant half mile separating the naval depot from the Picatinny army arsenal, where shells are made for the army, and reached there at 8 o'clock tonight. Maj. Norman Ramsey, commander, had ordered his enlisted and civilian personnel to evacuate the place soon after the first explosion began to scatter shells on the arsenal grounds.

Soon afterwards the thousands of shells stored at the arsenal began to thunder forth their own detonations and these mingled with the explosions from the naval depot throughout the night. At midnight the seven square miles which the reservation comprises presented a sad scene of desolation.

Like Flanders Field.

There was not a building left standing on the naval depot grounds and only one or two near the Dover road end of the army reservation. The ground looked like a shell swept field in France and the nearby towns had been evacuated as the civilians used to evacuate the areas back of the war lines.

Two towns are known to have been wrecked. One of them—Mount Hope, two miles from the depot—was devastated. The other—Rockaway—was badly smashed by the series of explosions.

More than a dozen fires started in these two towns as a result of the exploding shells dropping among the houses.

It also is reported the little town of Hibernia has been destroyed, but no communication can be had with it.

Refugees Flee Scene.

Hundreds of refugees fled on foot or by any means of transportation they could find from the entire district. The roads were full of fleeing men, women and children.

Mixed with the fugitives were scores of injured. The general hospital here is filled with patients, most of them civilians, and a number of them have been taken to the Memorial hospital at Morristown.

The number of those who suffered lesser hurts is legion. The offices of the fifteen physicians in Dover have been filled with a never ending stream of patients and the Moose and Arcanum halls here and the Elks' home have been converted into emergency hospitals.

Dowling in Command.

The naval ammunition depot is commanded by Capt. O. C. Dowling, the other officers being Lieut. H. C. Schrader, Lieut. Comm. E. A. Brown of the medical corps, and Capt. R. H. Clark of the marines. The depot was manned by a force of sixty-one marines which today was swelled by twenty sailors from the New York navy yard who were taking a gunnery course. There were also three other sailors who served as pharmicists. The number of civilian employes at the arsenal was undetermined tonight.

The depot itself contains 200 magazines, which are filled with TNT, dynamite, and various other high explosives and shells and torpodoes. The buildings are widely separated about the reservation and it had been supposed that if the contents of one of them should explode the resulting fire could not spread to the others.

Two Magazines Intact.

Fear that two large magazines on the army arsenal grounds in which was stored 90,000 pounds of black powder and 50,000 pounds of TNT might explode any moment, kept many persons living in nearby towns and villages up all night. It was feared that if these magazines exploded they would wreck scores of homes in the vicinity.

At 2 a. m. officers from the arsenal said that the magazines were as yet intact and that they did not know whether they would explode or not. Shells were constantly exploding in various parts of the grounds, they said, and it was feared that some of these might set the magazines off.

Corps of state troopers drove through the town of Wharton and other small villages near the Picatinny arsenal ordering families to get out into the streets.

Dowling Tells Story.

Capt. O. C. Dowling, who was badly injured by the first explosion, gave this account of what occurred:

"I was in my quarters with Mrs. Dowling," he said, "when at 5:25 o'clock the fire alarm rang. Some one had seen a wisp of smoke curling from the roof of one of the magazines and sounded fire call.

"I jumped into my automobile, which was in front of my quarters, and drove directly to the magazine from which the smoke was issuing. The magazine was filled with TNT depth bombs. When I was within two or three hundred feet of it there came a terrific explosion which hurled me out of my car.

Buildings Demolished.

"The exploding T N T set fire to another magazine which set fire to one containing smokeless powder. When this exploded it set off some high explosive shells and when these began to let go it meant the demolishing of practically every building on the reservation.

"There was nothing we could do to fight the fire, we could only run before it."

Shortly before midnight it was said that thirty-four of the marines stationed at the naval depot had been accounted for. Several of these men were taken to the Dover hospital, while others received treatment at the American Legion and Elks' emergency hospitals.

Gen. Drum Arrives.

Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum arrived with troops from Fort Lockwood and a medical detachment, under Col. Freeman, and took charge of the army's part of the situation. Two companies of marines from the New York navy yard also arrived with a detachment of troops from the 16th infantry at Governor's Island.

Gen. Drum, after inspecting the Picatinny arsenal, said he did not believe the larger magazines there would explode. He also said that after talking with the marine officers he was confident that many of the marines now reported as missing will be found to have escaped to the woods and would report today.

Lieut. Bott and two of the enlisted men on duty at the army arsenal were reported missing after they had started out at 6 o'clock last night to search for casualties and have not been seen since.

Lightning Hits Depot.

The lightning which started the disaster struck squarely on the main building of the naval depot.

The lightning bolt struck one of the five magazines, each of which contained 2,000 pounds of powder, and immediately after the first explosion Capt. O. C. Dowling, commandant, ordered out his men to fight the fire which followed. Five minutes later they were caught in a second terrific explosion.

The first definite word to reach outside the reservation is a dispatch from Chief Pharmacist's Mate Prescott, which was sent to headquarters of the Third naval district in New York. It said:

"Naval ammunition depot at Dover struck by lightning at 5 p. m. Apparently twenty people are saved. Survivors at Newfoundland in charge of Gunner George Cipp."

Newfoundland is a small hamlet near Lake Denmark.

There really were two main explosions. After the first one, when fire call was sounded, Private Bretson Nye of Fostoria, O., with 12 other marines dashed out from his barracks and was caught in the second explosion. Nye with four marines and a civilian employé rushed to Lake Hopatcong and rowed across it to safety.

Hurled from Barracks.

When the first explosion came, Sergt. Downing of the army, on duty at the arsenal, was hurled out of his barracks. His barracks is approximately one and one-half miles from the first of the navy magazines which let go.

Downing started at once for the navy reservation and met two army officers also bound there. Three-quarters of a mile from the scene of the first explosion they found a young woman unconscious in the road and recognized her as a Miss Fleming. A motorist fleeing from the explosion took her to a hospital, where her condition was found to be critical.

Mrs. Maude Houman Harris, wife of Capt. Harris, who was officer of the day at Picatinny arsenal, was seriously injured when the walls of her home collapsed and she was caught among the debris. Soldiers released her.

Boys Are Injured.

Two sons of Sergt. Chris Vogt at the arsenal also were seriously injured by the collapse of their house and were taken to the hospital. The boys were 6 and 12 years old, respectively.

Dilbert Burris, engineer in the arsenal power house, and William Skews, the fierman there, said that the explosion caused the walls of the power house to collapse. They fled and were uninjured.

The explosion was the signal for many scores of persons to rush toward the scene to attempt rescues. They were met by columns of flame and smoke and the clouds of burning splinters and charred wood.

Still the rescuers hurried onward. They distinguished new sounds, the irregular muffled explosions which told them that the high explosive shells stored at the depot were now going off and that a new terror had been added to those which they must face. With the sky growing darker and darker as the debris rode fast and far on a high wind, came a new impediment on the highways. This was the number of people fleeing from the surrounding towns.

Then came the exploding shells hurtling through the air.

The rescuers knew the ammunition depot site; they knew there were fifty magazines filled with every variety of explosive including the five which were filled with powder. They knew that the Picatinny arsenal a half mile away offered an equal danger. The intended rescuers were driven back by the U. S. troopers and state troopers who would not let them venture on for fear of increasing the death total.

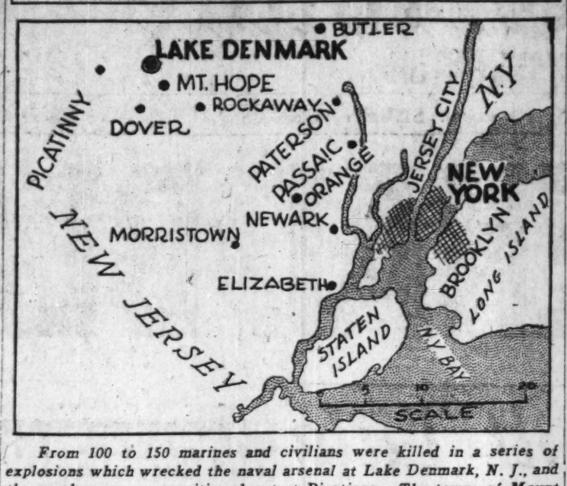
Turn to Aid Civilians.

Then it was that every one turned to the assistance of stricken civilians. The telephone exchange at Butler, thirty miles away, had been subjected to an intermittent rain of debris. At Pompton Lakes, an equal distance from the depot, houses rocked with the explosions, windows were broken, and there was a strong smell of sulphur and gunpowder. Windows were broken at Orange, 30 miles away.

At Rockaway, a small village four miles from the depot, the houses rocked crazily and there was general panic among the inhabitants. Screaming women and children fled into the fields to escape the timbers tumbling from their houses.

Store windows in the towns of Morristown and Dover were shattered and many houses badly damaged.

When Arsenal Blasts Left Wake of Dead



From 100 to 150 marines and civilians were killed in a series of explosions which wrecked the naval arsenal at Lake Denmark, N. J., and the nearby army ammunition depot at Picatinny. The towns of Mount Hope and Rockaway, a few miles from the scene of the disaster, were wiped out. The dead and injured were taken to hospitals in Dover. The force of the explosions was so great that debris was hurled to Orange and Butler, N. J., 30 miles away. Windows were broken in these and other distant cities.

OFFICERS INVESTIGATE

Washington, D. C., July 10.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. Clarence V. Williams, chief of army ordnance, and Brig. Gen. V. L. Ruggles, assistant chief, prepared to leave tonight for the army arsenal at Picatinny, reported destroyed in the explosion which wrecked the naval arsenal at Lake Denmark, N. J.

Telephonic advices from Maj. Norman D. Ramsey, commandant of the arsenal, said that several buildings at the army arsenal had been badly damaged by projectiles, but that there had been no explosions there.

His advices from the Picatimmy arsenal, Ruggles said, were that the ammunition stores there were in continual danger from the succeeding explosions at the naval depot.

The army arsenal, Ruggles said, contains approximately 10 per cent of the army's stores of ammunition. The seven hundred workmen employed there, he added, had quit work at noon and most of them had gone to their homes in nearby towns. There were only half a dozen soldiers and a dozen officers stationed on the reservation, along with three superintendents and less than a dozen guards.

Additional advices to Gen. Ruggles from Picatinny arsenal said that fire had broken out there in gun cotton, stored in boxes outside the warehouses, but that it was not believed explosions would result. While at that time none of the ammunition at Picatinny had exploded, projectiles had been falling and all persons were keeping clear of the army magazines.

Gen. Ruggles was informed that no estimate could be made on the loss of life or property damage, as no one could get near the danger zone.

A checkup of the personnel at the navy depot revealed that fifty-nine marines, one captain of marines, five naval officers, four men of the naval hospital unit, and twenty to thirty civilians were on duty there.

High Explosive Shells in Storage.

Considerable high explosives were in storage, part of it of a "death charge" form.

The navy department experienced difficulty in getting accurate information from the scene of the disaster. It also attempted to get up a list of personnel at the depot, but up to late tonight had given out only a few names.

The Lake Denmark plant was the navy's largest ammunition storage depot, comprising more than 500 acres of land. During the war it was extended by an addition of 183 new buildings and other extensions of considerable magnitude were made. The depot was purely a storage plant.

The army arsenal at Picatinny has been established for 40 years and contains large amounts of ammunition.

Myles O'Donnell and Two Pals Seized with Guns

Myles O'Donnell, head of a bootlegging syndicate in Cicero, and two companions were taken into custody by Lieut. Michael Grady of the detective bureau last night at 1722 Loomis street. All were carrying revolvers. The other men are John O'Connor, 1127 South Kostner avenue, and John Devorak, 1169 West 19th place. Rivalry between the O'Donnell gang and other bootleggers was the cause of the shooting in which Assistant State's Attorney William H. McSwiggan was killed.

name I do not know started to get to safety. With the shells whizzing around and burning debris falling near us, the experience was a touch of hell.

"Brundage and I and the other fellow went across the hills and were nearly three miles away before Brundage discovered that he had been blown out of his boots and was traveling in bare feet. I ripped off his shirt and bound it around his feet so that they would not hurt him so much.

"We had not gone very much further when Inspector Barclay, who had heard the explosion, found us. Brundage and the other fellow went back and Inspector Barclay took me to the hospital."

MOTORISTS SEE BLAST

Charles Nathan Jr. of Morristown went through all the towns surrounding the scene of the tragedy. In Dover he found the city of 14,000 in a panic. Residents feared that if the main naval arsenal blew up it would wreck the whole community.

Two witnesses of the explosions were Max and Henry Mindlin of East Orange, N. J.

"We were driving in our automobile through the army reservation," Max said. "A thunderstorm seemed right on top of us. We saw a big flash of lightning. Then, before the thunder stopped rolling, there was a terrible explosion. Our car was overturned; we got up, badly cut. Another blast rolled us into a ditch. We crawled down to Picatinny on our hands and knees with shells shrieking over us."

SEEN 15 MILES AWAY

NEW YORK, July 10.—(AP)—Frank A. Gale, Montclair, N. J., tonight described the explosion of the naval ammunition depot at Lake Denmark, N. J., as he witnessed it from Oak Ridge, N. J., 15 miles distant. The first indication of an accident was the appearance over the Sparta mountains, which separate Oak Ridge from the valley in which the arsenal is located, of a huge cloud of white smoke.

A sharp explosion, deafeningly loud, followed the appearance of the cloud. Immediately afterward a thundering rumble and hissing shook the ground. A brilliant cloud of flame spread over the sky in the direction of the arsenal. A second and heavier explosion followed almost immediately.

The rumbling continued without intermission until some forty minutes later, when a third explosion spread another brilliant flame across the sky.

The rumbling continued for almost two hours after the first explosion, punctuated at brief intervals by sharp reports as of bombs and mines.

Mr. Gale said that the villages of Oak Ridge and Newfoundland suffered little damage from falling debris, as they were protected by the mountain ridge, but he said there may have been many deaths among the children in summer camps in the vicinity of the arsenals.

The Western Union telegraph operator at Dover, N. J., four miles from the arsenals, told Mr. Gale that the town of Dover suffered little damage, also due to a protecting ridge intervening. The operator, Mr. Gale said, reported that he "had accounted for one hundred dead among the military stationed at the arsenals and inhabitants of near-by towns."

Mr. Gale said that persons dwelling within a radius of 15 miles of the arsenals were leaving as rapidly as possible because of reports that there still remained a large magazine at the naval ammunition depot which had not yet exploded, but which was expected to go at any minute.

Another Florida Bank, Deposits $1,000,000, Closes

Kissimmee, Fla., July 10.—(AP)—The Bank of Osceola County of this city, with deposits of more than $1,000,000, failed to open its doors for business today.

COOLIDGE RETURNS EMPTY HANDED FROM FISHING EXPEDITION

Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 10.—(AP)—Fishing claimed President Coolidge again today, when he jumped into a boat to try his hand on Lake Osgood before the summer White House.

Although accompanied by Oscar Otis, caretaker of White Pine camp, and guided to the best spots on the little sheet of water, no luck rewarded their efforts and Mr. Coolidge returned empty handed shortly before noon. He then went to the foot bridge before the camp and practiced at casting.

Rain, which fell at frequent intervals during the day, made little difference to the President or to Mrs. Coolidge, who, during clear spells, walked about the shore of the lake with the white collies.

In the afternoon Mr. Coolidge turned his attention to government business and the latest mail from Washington as a heavy thundershower raged outside.

The first trip of any distance from the camp will be made by the President and Mrs. Coolidge tomorrow, when they plan to attend morning services at the First Presbyterian church of Saranac Lake, 13 miles away.

The first visitors of the summer were received at the executive offices today. They included Representative and Mrs. Burgess of North Dakota and former Representative Francis of New York City, who was a luncheon guest of Secretary Everett Sanders. No visitors, however, went to White Pine camp.

DURKIN CRINGES UNDER 35 YEAR CELL SENTENCE

Faces New Murder Trial and U. S. Charges.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK

Martin James Durkin, no longer the hero of a national Odyssey of inflated adventure, but rather the convicted murderer of Federal Agent Edwin C. Shanahan, sentenced to spend his next 35 years in the penitentiary for that murder, lay on the bunk in his cell at the county jail last night almost immaculate.

Every now and then, however, he attempted to brazen out the effects of the jury's verdict which had been announced to him yesterday morning in Judge Harry B. Miller's court.

"God, I'd rather those guys had sent me to the gallows than to the pen for 35 years," he cried. "Either I was guilty or not guilty. God knows I wasn't guilty of murdering Shanahan.

He Has a Headache.

"But I don't want to think about it anymore," he said. "I've had a terrific headache ever since they brought me back from court."

Then, stretched out on his narrow steel cot, he turned to read what the newspapers had to say about his sentence.

As he lay there, denying his guilt in one murder, tentative plans were going forward to send him back to the defendant's chair, this time for the murder, Oct. 28, 1925, of Police Sergeant Harold Gray. Sergt. Gray was shot down at the home of Betty Andrews Werner's uncle, Lloyd Austin, 740 Englewood avenue, during an unsuccessful attempt to capture Durkin.

Silent on New Trial Plans.

Assistant State's Attorneys Michael Romano and Louis Blumenthal, whose six weeks' prosecution of Durkin won the conviction, declined yesterday to say definitely just how soon the state proposes to place Sergt. Gray's alleged killer on trial. But it is understood that the plan was to try this case if the verdict in the Shanahan case was less than life.

And, to make assurance doubly sure that Durkin will not soon be out on the streets, there is the federal charge, or rather sixteen of them, for alleged violation of the Dyer act, which forbids interstate transportation of stolen automobiles. Conviction in each instance carries a maximum penalty of 5 years' sentence in a federal penitentiary and a $5,000 fine.

U. S. Warrants Hang Over Him.

"When Durkin goes to Joliet," Federal Agent James D. Rooney, Shanahan's partner, explained, "he will be followed by those sixteen warrants. They cannot be served on a man under state sentence, but should Durkin for any reason be released from Joliet, these warrants would be served and he would immediately be placed on trial."

Prosecutor Blumenthal, at the time the verdict was read, was not disposed to comment on the judgment of the twelve men. Later Prosecutor Romano admitted that he was disappointed, on behalf of the state of Illinois, that a hanging verdict had not been returned.

"But I am happy," Mr. Romano declared, "that this jury, by its verdict, took the first and most important long step in placing Durkin, the murderer, in the position he really should occupy in the minds of law-abiding American citizens."

Move for New Trial.

Attorney Eugene McGarry, court appointed counsel serving Durkin without fee, was not in court when the verdict was returned. His associate, Attorney Roland Libonati, also appointed by the court, made a motion for a new trial. Judge Miller set next Saturday morning as the time when he will hear arguments on the motion.

Both defense counsel predicted that in the event of an adverse ruling next Saturday they will carry the case to the Illinois Supreme court.

Mr. McGarry announced last night that he had received information regarding the whereabouts of Harlow George, the missing defense witness. He said he would argue that if George were found his evidence should be heard in a new trial.

After the verdict came in Mrs. Hattie Durkin, the defendant's mother, moaning incoherent sentences and flinging herself about hysterically, had to be led from the courtroom.

As for Betty, she was not in the courtroom or in the crowd that packed itself about the entrance to the Criminal court building, eager as baseball fans waiting for the score. She spent the night at the home of a friend, Mrs. Vera Crockette 6215 Princeton avenue.

Betty to Wed, But Not Werner.

About the time the verdict came in it was impossible to reach Betty at her friend's home. Later she emerged from seclusion long enough to deny emphatically that she is planning to wed Arthur Werner, the father of her 2 year old son, Jackie.

"After waiting this long, I'm certainly not going to marry him now," she said. Previously she had denounced him as a deceiver.

Having thus summarily disposed of Werner as a possible husband, Betty admitted that she is really going to be married. It will be about Aug. 1, she said, though she refused to give the name of the man.

Durkin, the itinerant lover, didn't have Betty in the courtroom to rejoice at the verdict, nor did he have his legal wife, Irma Sullivan Durkin of Cornell, Ill., there to pity him. Irma, complacent in new clothes, a new bob, and a new job, gave two days of her time to the trial, but that was several weeks ago. She hasn't been heard of since then.

Mrs. Shanahan Absent, Too.

Another woman, too, was absent yesterday morning when the verdict was brought in. She hadn't missed a day of the trial; she has said the least of any one in the room and she has followed, with pathetic attentiveness, every word of evidence. That woman was Mrs. Minerva Shanahan, the young widow of the slain Edwin Shanahan. Informed yesterday of the verdict, she cried as she explained:

"I still feel justified in wishing they had sentenced that man to hang. But I am so glad he is out of the way, for a while at least, and no other woman's husband is in danger."

TWO MORE TOWNS ADDED TO SPEED TRAP QUIZ LIST

Markham and River Forest on Grill.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

New reports received by Charles J. Mueller, assistant state's attorney in charge of the Chicago crusade against speed traps, yesterday added Markham and River Forest to the list of villages which will come up for detailed investigation when the state inquiry into automobile law enforcement practices is resumed tomorrow. On Friday the villages of Broadview and Niles were named for investigation.

At the same time, it is expected that scores of the questionnaires mailed to persons arrested in Mount Greenwood and to victims revealed in the first study of Broadview police and court records will be returned to the state's attorney's office to be submitted as grand jury evidence.

Get Report on River Forest.

The reports in the case of River Forest allege that arrests in that village last month jumped to 413 as compared with 79 in June of 1924 and 267 in the same month last year. The majority of these arrests were said to be for traffic violations. Fines collected last month in the village were reported to total $2,670 as compared with $1,392 in June a year ago and $920 in June, 1924.

The report added that police magistrate fees during the month approached $1,000 as a result of the work of the village's motorized police department. C. M. Atkinson is chief of police and Arthur Rossman is police magistrate.

The figures given in the report will be checked against the records on police and court books when they are brought to the prosecutor on grand jury subpoenas, according to Mr. Mueller, and all motorists arrested will be asked to fill out the official questionnaire for evidence of extortion or the collecting of illegal fees.

Arrests Heavy in Markham.

In Markham, it was reported to the state's attorney, as high as 45 arrests a day are made by the motorcycle police under command of Chief H. J. Morley, despite the fact that the village is newly incorporated and exists principally in lots offered for sale.

Forest Park, another village controlling traffic west bound from Chicago, added its name to the "fair play" traffic territory in Cook county yesterday when Paul R. Witt, justice of the peace, called in Chief Fred Licht of the vilage police department and two of his sergeants and instructed them in the just administration of motor vehicle laws.

With all of the available evidence questionnaires dispatched, Prosecutor Mueller and two detective sergeants made a tour of villages in the northern part of the county yesterday morning to check up on traffic signs erected along the main highways and to watch the actual operation of police systems. They found numerous warning signs half hidden by grass and weeds along the roadside and many stretches of road where a visiting driver could not be expected to know when he had passed village limits.

This highway condition, together with the volume of evidence which condemns the traffic control system sanctioning collection of fees for the arrest and trial of motorists in villages, will be cited for immediate state action under the new traffic control law. The law, passed by the legislature in June, 1925, directs the state highway department to erect uniform speed limit signs along all state highways built through villages and to regulate all traffic on these roads.

MINE CONVICTS SURRENDER, END ONE DAY SIEGE

Threat to Eat Mule Is Unavailing.

Lansing, Kan., July 10.—(AP)—Mutineers in the mine of the Kansas penitentiary here capitulated early tonight and came to the surface.

The convicts, 375 in number, who had remained in the mine since yesterday, defying prison officials, gave in without having gained their demands.

The surrender came after the mutineers were advised that Gov. Ben S. Paulen would not intervene in their behalf, but would leave the situation to the judgment of Warden M. H. Mackey.

The governor's answer was communicated to the prisoners, who had induced one of the thirteen prison guards, captive with them in the mine, to telephone to the warden the five demands.

Demands of The Men.

These demands were:

Liberation of men held for disturbance earlier in the week.

Immunity for the present mutineers.

Transfer of prisoners to a new cell house.

Three square meals a day.

Publication of the acceptance of their demands with picture and signature of the governor.

A copy of such newspaper to be dropped down the mine shaft.

For reply, Warden Mackey told the mutinous prisoners they could stay below ground as long as they wish.

The mutineers were at the 730 foot level where they had blocked the hoisting cage with heavy timbers.

"They are down so deep they can't dig their way out," Warden Mackey said. "And I guess if we wait long enough they will get hungry and be willing to come to the surface."

Threaten to Eat Mule.

The mutineers had told the warden that unless food was lowered to them before 6 o'clock tonight they would butcher one of the thirteen mules in the mine nad barbecue it for the evening meal. The mine is equipped with an underground kitchen and dining room.

"Some of the mules have been in the mine for fifteen years," said the warden, "And I guess they will be pretty tough eating."

Air was pumped to the mine from the surface ever since the mutiny started. Prison officials did not shut the air off as this would have worked as much hardship on the thirteen hostage guards as on the men.

Plenty of Entertainment.

From that time on until the close Saturday night, local convention officials have planned something almost every hour of the day and most of the night for the visiting brethren. Boat excursions, band concerts, business sessions, baseball games, horse races, dinners and dances are among the many features of each day's program.

The balloon take off from Grant park in the section bounded by the inner and outer drives, and Monroe street to Jackson boulevard.

One hour later the Convention Trophy Yacht race will be run off, the start and finish being at the Van Buren street gap.

On Wednesday morning a score of drill teams will compete for prizes at Soldiers' field, a total of $1,000 being given for winners.

At 4 p. m. Ex-Governor John K. Tener of Pennsylvania, chairman of the memorial committee will turn the building over to the order and the acceptance address will be made by Judge Atwell.

Grand lodge officers were entertained at a dinner and dance last night at the Edgewater Beach hotel. A score of those high in the order, with their wives, attended.

BISHOPS ASK METHODISTS TO BOYCOTT FAIR

Philadelphia, Pa., July 10.—(AP)—A nation-wide endeavor to have Methodists boycott the sesquicentennial exposition because its gates are open on Sunday was under way today.

Headed by Bishop Joseph F. Berry, senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, the plan calls for sending letters to 4,000 ministers of his denomination, signed by himself and seven other bishops, urging the clergymen to advise their congregations never to go near the exposition as long as it remains open on Sunday. The first of the letters were to be mailed today.

Bishop Berry declared that he represented 50,000,000 Christians—"God-fearing people, who regard this iniquity as an insidious attack on the traditional American institution—the holy sabbath."

REPORT TRUE BILLS VOTED IN ELECTION FRAUD

Rumor Only Precinct Officials Named.

Investigations of vote frauds in the April 13 primaries came to a hectic recess over the week-end yesterday. The day's developments included these:

FIRST—Reports that the special grand jury under Special State's Attorney Charles A. McDonald had voted indictments against several precinct judges and clerks of the 20th ward, where the most widespread vote thievery yet uncovered occurred.

SECOND—Completion of a recount of 93 precincts, including the entire 20th and 27th wards, most of the 22d, and scattered precincts in other wards, which show combined discrepancies of 155,655 votes in the total gains and losses for all candidates in the Republican primary.

Put More Men to Work.

THIRD—An order by County Judge Jarecki, under whose jurisdiction the recount is being made, to put five more teams to work tomorrow for a recount of votes in the Democratic primary. Twenty teams are working on the Republican recount.

FOURTH—An order by Circuit Judge Hugo F. Friend for a recount of five precincts in the 4th (stockyards) senatorial district, where State Representative Arthur J. Rutshaw [Rep.] is contesting the nomination of Elmer J. Holmgren.

FIFTH—Indications that the special grand jury will also delve into the mystery of the killing of Assistant State's Attorney McSwiggin. Police Sergeant Anthony McSwiggin, father of the slain prosecutor, was questioned by Mr. McDonald.

Loses in Own Ward.

The recounters yesterday opened the ballot boxes from nineteen precincts of the 22d ward, where Sanitary District Trustee August W. Miller (Crowe-Barrett) and West Park Commissioner Rudolph Mulac (Deneen-Lundin) are the rival Republican committeemen. Mulac was a defeated candidate for county commissioner and lost 75 votes by the recount of his own ward yesterday. He gained eight votes for a net loss of 67.

While they also sustained combined losses heavier than their total gains, candidates on the Crowe-Barrett ticket won a distinct advantage over the Deneen-Lundin slate in the recount of the 22d ward. The following table summarizes the situation in this ward so far:

Candidates.	Gains.	Losses.	Net Loss.
Crowe-Barrett	832	1,047	215
Deneen-Lundin	302	1,115	813
Independents	340	498	158

Table of Gains; Losses.

The following table shows at a glance the results of the recount so far, indicating how the rival tickets—counting thefts and errors for and against all candidates—were affected by stolen votes and spoiled ballots:

Candidates.	Gains.	Losses.
Crowe-Barrett	17,460	72,283
Deneen-Lundin	15,211	33,709
Independents	10,237	6,746
Totals	42,917	112,738

With considerable show of resentment at the freedom with which vote thievery has been charged as a result of what the recount shows on its face, Assistant State's Attorney Joseph P. Savage, Crowe-Barrett nominee for county judge, yesterday pointed out the cause of many losses for his ticket in the 27th ward.

Savage Explains.

"Several hundred ballots which the precinct judges failed to initial have been classed as spoiled ballots," he said. "In addition, 195 more ballots on which voters used the old-time stickers to vote for a candidate for state senator have been so classed. Most of those ballots were voted for our ticket."

While the county judge has no legal jurisdiction over a recount affecting that office, Judge Jarecki is permitting the checkers to include the Trude-Savage vote in the recount. In the 93 precincts opened up thus far Savage gained 153 and lost 1,548 votes for a net loss of 1,395.

Municipal Judge Daniel P. Trude, the Deneen-Lundin candidate whom Savage defeated by 22,000 votes, has gained 757 and lost 301 for a net gain of 456. All told, Trude has narrowed the margin betwen himself and Savage by 1,851 in the recount to date.

No Higher Ups Named.

A cloak of secrecy was thrown around the grand jury and no details of the reported indictments were obtainable. It is believed that only judges and clerks and none of the higher ups from whom they are presumed to have taken orders have yet been named in the early indictments.

THOUSANDS LAY FLOWERS ON S-51, SALUTE ITS DEAD

New York, July 10.—(AP)—A bright page was added to the tragic history of the submarine S-51 today.

Beneath a blistering sun and retarded by transportation strikes, thousands made their way to Brooklyn navy yard to strew flowers on the rusted, gashed and barnacled hulk in which 33 officers and men met death.

Her silken flag still fluttered at half mast, marines paced silent guard at her sides. On the deck was a huge wreath of flowers navy yard employés had put beside a smaller one placed there by Lieut. Com. Richard E. Byrd, the north pole flier.

All of the eighteen bodies have been identified. The task, however, was difficult. It is expected that relatives will provide private funerals.

The final roll call accounted for all of the crew of thirty-six except seven. Navy officials believe no trace of these may ever be found.

Three of the seven missing men were officers, among them Lieut. R. H. Dobson, commander of the S-51, who was last seen on the bridge as the vessel sank.

Others unaccounted for are Lieut. Harlow M. Pine, Lieut. T. A. Glass, Walter E. Lawton, electrician mate, Oscar J. Milot, fireman, Ralph E. Cassidy, gunner's mate and Brudy D. Lindsay, engineman.

MAYOR TO BOOST CITY WHEN HE TALKS IN DENVER

Mayor Dever will leave tonight for Denver, Col., where he will speak Wednesday night at the national convention of the American Bar association. The convention opens Tuesday and will be in session all the week.

The mayor said that his address will center on the need for reform in judicial procedure, especially as it concerns the speeding up of justice by quicker impaneling of juries and modernization of laws for criminal cases.

"I expect to do a little boosting for Chicago on the side," the mayor said.

Ekern Holds Automobile Election Posters Illegal

Madison, Wis., July 10.—[Special.]—The use of posters attached to automobiles in political campaigns bearing only the words "Vote for (name) for (office)" violates the state election laws, according to an opinion by Attorney General Herman L. Ekern to Theodore A. Waler, district attorney of Pierce county. In another opinion to Mr. Waller, the attorney general held that affidavits to nomination papers may be signed by an elector not a resident of the same ward as the signers of the nomination papers.

L. H. Armour Is Permitted to Leave Hospital Again

After several weeks of intermittent illness for stomach ulcers, Laurence H. Armour, wealthy packer, was permitted to leave St. Luke's hospital last night and return to his Lake Forest home. His condition was said to have improved greatly in the last few days, although he returned to the hospital Thursday after having been at home for four days. John J. Mitchell, banker, is still at the hospital and will be for several days, although greatly improved.

HOT HUNT FOR RADIO MAN IN McPHERSON CASE

Mexican Mayor Calls Kidnaping Tale False.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., July 10.—[Special.]—Investigators into the Aimee Semple McPherson mystery today struck the warm trail of Kenneth Ormiston, elusive radio operator whose one time close friendship with the woman evangelist, whose puzzling movements during the check up on her disappearance have made him much sought as official witness.

Three bands of deputies are seeking Ormiston. Each group has a grand jury subpoena signed by presiding Judge Arthur Keetch, so that the subpoenas will be binding in any California county.

The public got one flash into the mysterious activities of the radio man when a telegram failed to find Ormiston at the Riverside hotel, Riverside, Cal., this morning and, instead, became public.

The telegram was sent by Chandos R. Bush, attorney of this city, and read, "Ormiston: Certain parties are looking for you. Say nothing. Go dumb."

Bush Pleads Ignorance.

This afternoon Bush denied he knew what the message meant, or that he knew Ormiston. The attorney said he had been retained by certain persons, instructed to wire the message to Ormiston, and that his instructions included where to address the wire. He refused to say who retained him.

The sister of Mrs. Ormiston, a Miss Peters, is known to live in the Riverside locality. Mrs. Ormiston is in Australia, where she went after threatening to mention Mrs. McPherson in a divorce suit against the radio man.

Calls Her Story Absurd.

Mayor Boubion of Agua Prieta wired a statement declaring Mrs. McPherson's narrative of escape on June 22 from a shack 25 miles south of the international line between Douglas and Agua Prieta, was "absurd and impossible." Boubion's statement charged that "Mrs. McPherson drove to Agua Prieta in an automobile the night of June 22. She drove seven miles east of the city, where the machine let her out to walk around a little. Then she reëntered the machine and drove back toward Agua Prieta, getting out near the slaughter house, east of the town, and then walking into the town. I have had hundreds of men checking on her movements and the assertions she made, and I believe I can prove to the Los Angeles grand jurors that Mrs. McPherson was never held prisoner in the Mexican desert."

ROBBED OF $225.

Young Stevenson, colored, 1611 Cambridge avenue, reported to the Hudson avenue police last night that he had been robbed of $225 by two colored men, armed with revolvers, who halted him on Ogden avenue near Clybourn avenue.

TREASURY OFFICIALS DENY PLAN TO MODIFY FRENCH DEBT TERMS

Washington, D. C., July 10.—[Special.]—Constantly recurring reports from France that the United States is planning to modify the terms of the debt funding agreement again were declared without foundation at the state department today.

The department refused to comment on reports that American bankers will arrange a loan to France before the ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement. It was stated that as far as the department is informed, the presence in France of Benjamin Strong, governor of the Federal Reserve bank of New York, has no official significance.

It was recognized, however, that Mr. Strong and Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England, who are at Antibes, France, will be parties to any international financial arrangements which may develop in connection with the stabilization of French finances.

French Lift Ban on Anti-Debt Parade; 'No Insults to U. S.

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 10.—All official opposition to the French veterans' demonstration against the Mellon-Berenger accord for the funding of France's debt to the United States was withdrawn this afternoon. Minister of the Interior Duran accepted assurances that the 20,000 or more paraders will not do anything which might prove disagreeable to Americans.

The veterans promised they would not carry any banners giving the parade to Washington's statue an outward semblance of a political affair, although its purpose is apparent enough. The veterans agreed to organize an impromptu police corps to force absolute adherence to the carefully drawn rules for the demonstration.

Police to Plan Close Guard.

Similar protests will be held elsewhere in France. At Nice the veterans' groups have called a monster mass meeting at the Place Du President Wilson.

Due to the presence of tens of thousands of Americans in Paris, which is at the height of the tourist season, the police are taking all precautions to prevent an incident that might result in a serious disturbance. They will attempt to maintain utter silence along the line of march as a precaution against observations that might prove to be firebrands.

Caillaux Modifies Demands.

Joseph Caillaux, who wanted to be dictator of French finances until January at least, pulled in his horns today. With only a frail majority supporting him in parliament early this morning, Premier Briand's ambitious finance minister modified the demands which he will make upon the chamber of deputies Friday for power to apply his curative measures during the summer.

M. Caillaux had counted on a strong majority, until the Socialists and Nationalists established an offensive alliance which almost beat him. Relying on this majority, he had submitted five projects asking for dictatorial rights until January. Now he has set the time limit for October, and has added long and polite explanations of just what he plans to do with the powers.

HOUSE OF DAVID DIVIDED AGAINST SELF, BILL SAYS

Detroit, Mich., July 10.—[Special.]—Benjamin Purnell, so-called King of Israelite House of David, self-styled "Seventh Messenger of Heaven" and "the son of God on earth," is now concealed in the colony near Benton Harbor and never was absent from it except for short intervals since he "disappeared" in February, 1923, according to Mrs. Eliza Bamford, a former member of the colony.

With Arthur Wright and his wife, Florence Elizabeth, also former members of the colony, Mrs. Bamford has filed suit against Purnell, his wife Mary, and the House of David association seeking to recover more than $30,000 and demanding the dissolution of the colony.

Wright and his wife charge further that after warrants had been issued against Purnell on statutory charges they were present in the candy kitchen of the colony when raids were made by state officers and gave them each candy and that later the "raiders" were fêted and entertained in the House of David.

The bills also charge that the colony has been divided, due to a quarrel between Purnell and his wife. They state that Purnell has declared Mary Purnell is not his wife and that there is now nor ever was a "spiritual union" between them. The bills further charge that Purnell has ordered all pictures of his wife taken down and pictures of Myrtle Tulk, his attendant since she was 12 years old, substituted.

The complainants further ask that the colony be dissolved, a receiver appointed, and an injunction issued to prevent the transfer of the colony's property.

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION WILL AID DALE'S DEFENSE

Asks if He Will Accept Financial Help.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Muncie, Ind., July 10.—[Special.]—The American Civil Liberties union, which financed the defense of John T. Scopes in the recent Tennessee evolution trial, now has its attention focused on the case of George R. Dale, editor of the Muncie Post-Democrat, victim of the Ku Klux Klan.

Dale, 59 year old publisher of a little Democratic weekly here, is sentenced to the state penal farm, a sentence which has been affirmed by the Indiana Supreme court in its "the truth is no defense" decision and he must go behind the prison walls unless money to take his case to the United States Supreme court is forthcoming.

Hayes May Defend Him.

The Civil Liberties union this morning telegraphed Dale from its New York headquarters, indicating that Arthur Garfield Hayes, counsel for the organization, who figured so prominently in the Scopes and Lady Cathcart cases, might be ready to take up the case of Dale.

The telegram was signed by Forrest Bailey, secretary of the union. It asked for a copy of the Supreme court decision and a complete statement of the facts from Dale and concluded:

"Do you desire financial assistance for an appeal to the United States Supreme court?"

So Dale, with the high walls staring him in the face, has taken heart again. He says he will reply at once, setting forth his case and sending the Indiana Supreme court decision, but he was not prepared to state just what he will do about the implied offer of assistance in carrying up his case on appeal.

Must See Attorney.

Before Dale replies to that he said he must see his attorney, William Oelpeau Rooker of Indianapolis. He says he has had numerous offers of financial help; letters of encouragement and of congratulation for his fight against the hooded invisible empire, and he must be guided by the lawyer in what he does.

In the meantime Judge Clarence W. Dearth of the Delaware county Circuit court, who originally sentenced Dale, granted newspaper men an interview in which he said that unquestionably Dale had been guilty of contempt of court when he sentenced him and that so far as he was concerned, his only wish in the whole matter was to let the law take its course.

Dearth Gives Views.

Judge Dearth had his stenographer sitting throughout the interview taking down all questions and answers. He gave his views in general; told of what he is doing at present to clean up the booze and vice and gambling in Delaware county and added that while he did not court help from Dale he would accept any information Dale wished to give him, just as he would accept information from any one else.

"The newspapers had it that I had asked Mrs. Dale to use her influence with her husband to help me clean up the situation," Judge Dearth said. "That is not true. I sent for Mrs. Dale on another matter, and we talked of that, but that was all."

The judge denied that he is, or ever was, a member of the Ku Klux Klan, although locally it is said he is. He said also that the newspapers were wrong in criticising him for his sentence of Dale.

"The newspapers are wrong on that. We should have freedom of the press, but when the press interferes with the courts it is attacking one of the fundamentals of the principles of our government.

No Klan in Sentence.

"There was no klan in that sentence; the klan had nothing to do with it. And certainly Dale could not get a change of venue or a trial by jury. He had committed contempt of this court and it was this court that should have, and did pass on his case."

Then Judge Dearth told of his campaign against prostitution in Muncie.

"Why," he said, "we had a good many of your Chicago girls down here. It got so bad they would solicit on the streets and by tapping on their windows. It had to be stopped."

Indianapolis, Ind., July 10.—[United Press.]—The fight of George Dale, Muncie newspaper publisher, to escape what he terms "persecution by the Ku Klux Klan," will be carried to the United States Supreme court, it was learned today.

Dale is under sentence of imprisonment at the Indiana state penal farm for contempt of the Delaware County court and the sentence has been upheld by the State Supreme court.

The fact that Dale will appeal to the United States Supreme court was confirmed when it was learned that the State Supreme court had ordered preparation of a complete record of the case.

The commitment order, which normally would have been sent to the Delaware County court more than a week ago, has been withheld, ostensibly to allow Dale his liberty pending the latest appeal.

GOV. FERGUSON HEARS LAWYERS IN PONZI CASE

Austin, Tex., July 10.—[U. P.]—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson heard today the extradition case of Charles Ponzi, Boston money manipulator, wanted in Massachusetts as a "common thief," and withheld decision pending further evidence to be taken later this month.

Aided by her secretary, Ghent Sanford, Mrs. Ferguson went into session with Assistant Attorney General Shrigley of Massachusetts, seeking Ponzi's return, and attorneys for the wizard. Former Gov. James Ferguson was not present.

Shrigley, characterizing Ponzi as "a dangerous man," asked that extradition proceedings be allowed with speed, added: "This man (Ponzi) has openly boasted to me that as long as Gov. Ferguson is the governor of Texas he will never be taken out of Texas."

INDIANA PRESS, CHICAGOANS GIVE TO HELP EDITOR

Indiana newspapers came to the support of George R. Dale, Muncie editor, yesterday with a plea for funds from the Hoosier press to appeal the "truth is no defense" decision of the Indiana Supreme court to the United States Supreme court. The appeal was made by Thomas S. Adams, chairman of the executive committee of the Indiana Republican Editorial association.

Three Chicagoans—Dr. Waldo G. Poehner, Charles S. Wharton, an attorney, and David Lipman, operator of a millinery department at 160 North Michigan avenue—also came to the aid of the Muncie editor with checks to carry his case to the highest court in the land. Dr. Poehner gave $25, Attorney Wharton sent $10, and Mr. Lipman's check was for $5.

"If the newspapers can be muzzled by judges, God help the American cities and the rights of citizens," Attorney Wharton said.

Mr. Lipmar., in asking that his check be forwarded to Dale, said:

"I hope that tolerant Chicago will find thousands of true Americans ready to contribute to a fund as a protest against the lack of Christianity and Americanism of klan-ridden Indiana."

BYRNE, WHO SENT HOFFMAN TO JAIL, QUITS U. S. POST

John Elliott Byrne, federal prosecutor whose efforts sent Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman and former Cook County Jail Warden Wesley H. Westbrook to jail, yesterday announced his resignation from the staff of District Attorney Edwin A. Olson.

ELLIOTT BYRNE.

An announcement of Mr. Byrne's decision to leave the government service came as a surprise inasmuch as he had been proceeding with plans to prosecute Sheriff Hoffman, Westbrook, Terry Druggan, Frankie Lake, and other defendants in the Druggan-Lake jail scandal case.

Mr. Byrne will resume private practice. It was rumored that two other members of Mr. Olson's staff will join Mr. Byrne in the formation of a new law partnership but announcements of other resignations were not made yesterday. Mr. Byrne's resignation becomes effective on August 15.

SUBWAY SERVICE IMPROVES AS STRIKE SPREAD

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—The Interborough Rapid Transit company continued today to improve its service on its subway lines and to maintain practically full service on its elevated lines, despite the spread of the strike to employés of its motive power department.

The reports on the strike action taken by the members of Local No. 1 showed that 104 had struck and 167 remained at work. In addition, it was said at the offices of the company three of the day men, who had struck, had informed the company that they would return to work tomorrow.

Power Maintained.

According to reports to the company, the number of motive power men on strike was only a part of the men of Local No. 1 of the motive power department, consisting mostly of those employed in the power sub-stations and a few on the two main power houses of the company in West 59th street and East 74th street.

Strike Fails to Spread.

The threat of James F. Walsh that the strike of his group of power men would tie up the entire Interborough system was not borne out by developments. There was no failure of power during the day. Frank Hedley, president and general manager of the company reported that the company maintained a 74 per cent service during the morning rush hour, an increase of 4 per cent over the day before.

As the traffic is comparatively light on Saturday and as there is no real evening rush hour as there is on other week days, the Interborough had no difficulty in its afternoon subway service, aside from a few derangements of schedules by the opening of wider gaps than customary between trains.

select their life mates. It proves their incompetence to engage successfully in the marriage relations."

The judge criticized the recent amendment to the Illinois divorce laws providing that divorced persons may remarry immediately after the decree is signed. The amendment was made because many persons had been marrying within the year limit and their children were illegitimate.

"Better a few illegitimate children than a great number of illegitimate marriages," said Judge Brothers. "As it is now, persons may be divorced in the morning and be married in the afternoon by the same judge. The laws of marriage have become jazz compositions. Marriage seems to be a mere amusement of which the parties tire very easily.

"The morals of present day women with their short skirts and painted faces may have something to do with the situation. Women now paint like the Indians. They are going backward instead of forward. When they meet a man, their dress suggests an invitation for him to leave home."

NOBILE, POLAR ACE, ON HAND AS HORSE SHOW ENDS

Flyer and Dog Steal Steeds' Thunder.

BY MILDRED JAKLON.

Maj. Gen. Umberto Nobile, accompanied by his diminutive dog, "Titina," stole some of the thunder of the horses and riders at the closing session of the Lake Forest horse show at Onwentsia yesterday afternoon. He appeared in the arenas after filling a luncheon engagement at the club, where he and his 5 Italian companions, members of the crew of the dirigible Norge, which crossed the pole, had been entertained.

It was society's last opportunity to see the famous flyer as he left last night for New York from where he sails, on July 24, for Italy.

Many Children on Hand.

The smart crowd of riders and spectators at yesterday's show disclosed a larger masculine contingent than it had on the opening day, and there was not such a summery appearance to the boxes, whose occupants were wearing many white and gay colored sports coats. Numerous children, looking like so many bright, chubby butterflies, were present for the excitements and thrills of the show, and there were two children's events to add to their pleasure. Little Gwendolyn Bowen, the Joseph T. Bowens' young daughter, performed beautifuly on her own horse "Joffre," winning third prize in the children's saddle horse class and proving that she is worthy to follow in the footsteps of her proficient equestrian parents.

Louise Mitchell, driving "Ceylon Mist," from the John J. Mitchell stables, in the "ponies in harness" class, was an engaging sight in an orange leather coat which billowed out behind her as she rode, and a matching hat of the same bright hue. Others of the riders were the Chase girls, Libby and Janet, who were mounting entries from a great number of stables, Mrs. Austin H. Niblack, who drove, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, William A. P. Pullman, Miss Frances Hamill, Miss Alicia Patterson, Miss Jane Morton, and Capt. and Mrs. Dirk Van Ingen.

Dave's Friend Present.

Mrs. Lucius Ordway, just recently returned from Europe where she is reported to have received a great deal of attention from the prince of Wales, was the guest of Mrs. Noble B. Judah. She was wearing a white coat over a cornflower blue outfit, and a blue hat of the same shade.

Others who wore the fashionable and becoming white costumes were Mrs. Roland R. Boswell, Mrs. Harry B. Clow Jr. (Josephine Dunham), Miss Ruth Keeley, Mrs. Walter Paepcke, and Mrs. John E. Holland Jr. (Lydia Hibbard), who was an unsually attractive figure with a huge black hat and a gay nasturtium colored print under her wrap.

Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, who was piloting her two cherubic and fair-haired young daughters, wore a green raincoat over her henna sports dress.

Some of the Box Holders.

Others in the boxes included Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, who had with her her daughters, Mrs. Laurence Williams and Miss Beatrice Kirk, the Cyrus McCormicks, who are with the Leander McCormicks; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra J. Warner, who were accompanied by their daughters, Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy Jr., and Miss Jane Warner; Mrs. Charles H. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, Miss Daisianna Smith, who was much preoccupied with her lively wire haired terrier; Miss Hester White, Mrs. Russell Kelley, Mrs. William R. Odell Jr., Mrs. Clarence F. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mitchell, the Charles Edward Browns, Junior and Senior; Mrs. Scott Durand, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Reynolds, Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mrs. C. W. Dempsy, Mrs. Edward F. Swift, Mrs. John H. McIlvaine, and Mrs. Benjamin H. Marshall.

Mrs. Gilbert E. Porter III. wore one of the most striking costumes in the whole gay scene, a crepe gown, slashed with futuristic prisms in pink and pencil blue shades. Mrs. James Minotto was again an interested spectator, as also were Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter Jr. (Eleanor Bradley), and Mme. Dimitri Ivanenko, who was watchfully hoping for no repetition of her handsome husband's spill on the previous day.

The big horse show dinner at Onwentsia for members and exhibitors followed the close of the show, with about 300 guests present. Alice Home hospital and the Lake Bluff orphanage are to receive the proceeds from the affair.

Yesterday's Winners.

Following are the winners in the different events:

Class 19, model hunter, won by Birchwood, owned by E. J. Lehmann.

Class 4, horses in harness, won by Montpelier Corinne, owned by O. W. Lehmann.

Class 14, pair of hunters and jumper, won by E. J. Lehmann.

Class 13, ponies in harness, tandem, won by Braishfield and Lois Fire Lass, owned by John R. Thompson.

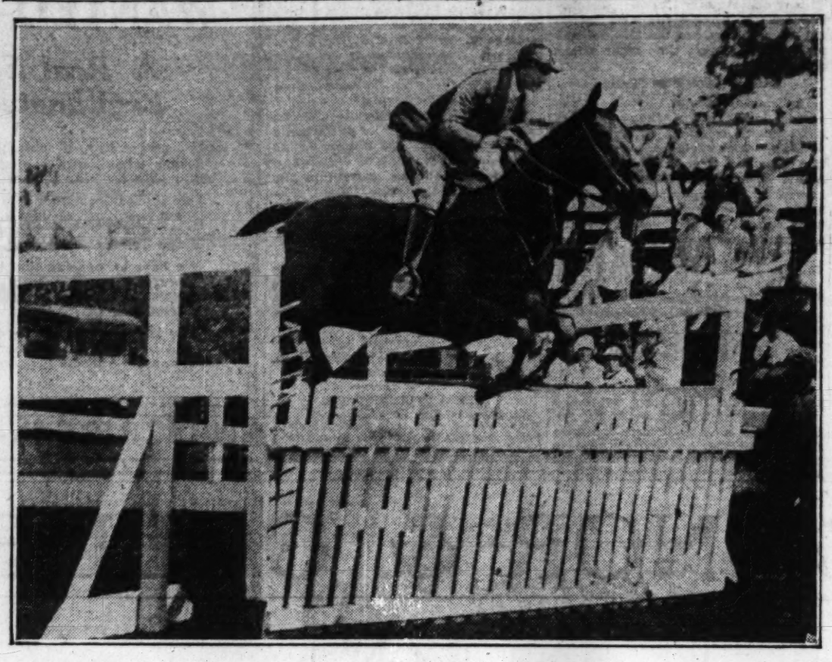
A "RAPID FIRE" RIDE AT LAKE FOREST



Miss Jane Morton is shown performing a fancy leap on Rapid Fire at the closing day of the Lake Forest horse show yesterday. The show was attended by many prominent in society, in addition to Maj. Gen. Nobile, designer of the Norge. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"Insults" Italy's Laws; Jailed for Eight Months

ROME, July 10.—(AP)—Camillo Fedele, a stone cutter, has been sentenced to 8½ months' imprisonment for making insulting remarks concerning Italy's constitutional institutions.

Vice Conditions in Detroit Bared by Rockefeller Survey

Detroit, Mich., July 10.—[Special.]—Blame for Detroit's vice conditions, described as worse than any in any other city in the country, is placed at the door of a complaisant police department and an indifferent prosecutor's office by the Rockefeller Foundation report, made public today.

The report is an indictment of laxness on the part of law enforcing agencies as well as a searchlight which flashed into the remotest corners of the city's bad lands.

"It may be interesting to note," the report says, "that more violations were discovered in one month in Detroit by three investigators than the same men have been able to uncover in the city of New York in the last six years."

Survey for Other Cities.

The survey, financed by the Rockefeller Foundation, is one of several that has or will be made in metropolitan cities throughout the country. Since the report was made, but not published, a group of prominent Detroiters, called the "committee of 100," including the mayor, have met and pledged themselves to make a campaign against conditions.

"The rapid growth of Detroit and the failure of its police department to enforce laws against prostitution," the report says, "have attracted prostitutes and their male agents from all over the country. These underworld characters have accepted Detroit as a sort of haven, where they can operate openly, without fear of the authorities.

"One of the unusual features about Detroit's vice problem is that within a mile radius of Cadillac square, an area which embraces one of the main business sections of the city, prostitution flagrantly flourishes. House after house in this section harbors prostitutes."

Tour Town in Limousines.

The report then describes the familiar members of the underworld sisterhood, who tour the downtown boulevards in limousines, beckoning customers.

"Night after night street walkers are to be seen openly accosting men in these neighborhoods," the report adds. "A uniformed officer is seldom in evidence. The few times when a uniformed officer was seen he was in conversation with a group of two or three women in front of one of the biggest downtown hotels. Several instances are cited in which women solicited men while talking to policemen."

In this connection the report outlines the operation of the police tipoff systems and says:

"The student police are, according to informants, in most cases above reproach. These young men are eager to secure a permanent position on the force and therefore are afraid to accept money from the prostitutes. Their superior officers are, however, in a position to give out advance information concerning raids and at the same time divert the activities of the student police. It is to the leaders of the squad that these women contend that they pay their money for protection."

Pay Exorbitant Rents.

Exorbitant rents are paid by this vicious element for apartments and flats, the report alleges. Landlords and lessees, it is charged, indirectly share the women's earnings.

The ease with which women or liquor may be obtained is mentioned in a paragraph which states "any person may approach a cab driver or bellboy and without hesitancy the go-between will direct him to a house of ill-fame with a note of introduction."

Practices prevailing in certain night clubs are censured in the report. Suggestive dances are given, the report says, and liquors served with no effort at secrecy even when uniformed police are present.

The report blames the automobile for a large percentage of juvenile delinquencies. Interviews with women of the underworld, their report reveals, show that "thirteen out of 100 were in an automobile when they first started on the downward path."

Members of the police vice squad are described as being of "low grade mentally and exceedingly unintelligent."

JULY 1901 — Twenty-Five Years of Success — JULY 1926

You Cannot Get What Franklin Gives in Any Other Car!

You cannot get what Franklin gives you in any other car! The latest demonstration of this truth is the amazing 25th anniversary feat of July 1, when 185 Franklins in 185 different parts of the country each ran 100 miles in low gear without the slightest sign of overheating!

This conclusive proof of air-cooling's superior dependability, stamina and efficiency is further corroborated by its recent successes in aviation. Byrd's freezing North Pole flight and Cobham's torrid London-Capetown flight were both made with air-cooled motors. And six of the ten government air-mail lines have chosen air-cooled engines!

But total freedom from cooling work, worry and expense is only one of Franklin's advantages. There are many others—just as easy to demonstrate. And they all are based on exclusive structural differences which are just as easy to explain and as important to know!

You cannot get Franklin comfort in any other car! No other car has its exclusive full-elliptic springs—its wonderfully flexible chassis frame—its exact balance and even distribution of weight. Come in and let us show you that these features make the bumps and jars magically disappear—produce the smoothest-riding car you ever tried!

You cannot get Franklin easy handling in any other car! No other car has its freedom from all unnecessary weight—its scientifically designed steering-gear—its sure, quick, non-skid transmission brake. Come in and let us show you that these features take the usual strain, worry and fatigue out of driving!

You cannot get Franklin speed over the road in any other car! No other car has the comfort to take rough roads without slowing up—or the ease of control to permit continuous driving without tiring out. Come in and let us show you the smooth-flowing power that goes with this—and what it means in actual miles and minutes!

Nor can you get in any car, no matter what its price, such striking and enduring style—higher quality—or longer life. 75% of all Franklins built in 25 years are still in active service today!

But even these facts and figures cannot make you realize what the Franklin will give you. Only a real ride and drive can do that. Come in and make the motoring discovery of your life—today!

185 STOCK FRANKLIN CARS ALL OVER COUNTRY COMPLETE AMAZING TEST!

100 miles in low gear without stopping the engine. Maximum time allowed—ten hours.
185 Franklins participated at 185 points from coast to coast.
The average time was 8 hours 6 minutes.
The gasoline average was 6.85 miles to the gallon—equal to 24.83 miles in ordinary high gear use.
The oil average was 1.46 pints to 100 miles—equal to 2000 miles to the gallon in ordinary use.
Weather conditions included rain, slippery roads, temperatures ranging from 58° to 140°.

Official Observers Accompanied Each Car

Franklin figures show that 15 m.p.h. in low gear is equivalent to 54.3 m.p.h. in high gear. Realize the severity of this test from that.

IS A REVISION OF THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION AT HAND?

If the four states of New York, Maryland, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island should pass appropriate resolutions congress will be bound to call a convention for the amendment or revision of the federal constitution.

That is a rather startling bit of information which has been emphasized by Representative Cuvillier of New York in a letter to Senator Borah and brought to our attention by Mr. John W. Matson, a Missouri reader who doesn't like the possibilities of the situation. No more do we. We do not find either in the political leadership or in the body politic of the United States at this time encouragement to believe a constitutional revision would do much but mischief.

The constitution has its faults and would be the better for some amendment, but the respect, apparently, of a considerable proportion of our citizenry for its fundamentals—which do not require amendment—seems to us so inadequate that we cannot be quite sure they would not favor the repeal of the bill of rights. The prohibitionists have no respect for the conceptions of human liberty embodied in the guaranties of the first ten amendments, and there has been up to recently no such reaction against the excesses of Volsteadism as a free and vigilant people ought to show. It is true that such reaction is growing, but there has been too much evidence that the present generation does not know when it is well off for a prudent observer to welcome an overhauling of the constitution at this time.

Yet one of our contemporaries, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, seems to incline to the convention as a way out of the prohibition mess, and if amendment could be confined to ridding the constitution of that statutory excrescence, the 18th amendment, and to making some modernizing alterations, as in the time of convening congress and the inauguration of the President, and in the mechanism of amendment, we might welcome a convention. But the delegates could not be limited in their activities and, belabored as they would be by vociferous reforming groups, could we be assured they would leave the fundamentals alone? The moralistic reformers have no respect for the character of the constitution as a framework of government and vehicle of controlling principles. We have met none and heard from none that had any conception of the vital distinction between a constitution and a statutory code, and they might contrive through coöperation to revise the constitution by making it a receptacle of reforming devices which would have no more place in our basic law than the sumptuary regulation fastened upon it as the 18th amendment.

We should be glad to be convinced that this is a fear far fetched. Meanwhile the facts cited by Mr. Cuvillier point to another need for a clarification of our amendatory law which has not been sufficiently discussed. The applications for a convention go as far back as 1890. Are they still binding upon congress without later reaffirmance by the state legislatures, if four additional states join them, making the required two-thirds? Can they be withdrawn before congress acts upon them? The ratification of an amendment cannot be withdrawn even though the three-fourths are wanting. Senator Wadsworth's proposed amendment of Article V provides that until three-fourths of the states have ratified or more than one-fourth have rejected an amendment, any state may reverse its previous action. Also a rule should be established for the lapse by time of applications from the states for a constitutional convention. The present judicial rule is that such action survives for a reasonable time, and in one case seven years has been held to be reasonable. But the time should be fixed and a state should be empowered to withdraw an application at any time before the required two-thirds have been made.

THE DRY HONORARIUM.

Congressman Upshaw of Georgia says it is all right for congressmen to take an honorarium from the Anti-Saloon league for promoting prohibition. Mr. Upshaw has taken them and we gather is wiling to take more.

The gentlemen who have had these connections with such promotion seem inclined to prefer honorarium to pay roll. What a precinct worker gets for delivering in a political campaign is known as dough. What a reformer gets for influencing political action could not be so described without offending the finer sentiments inherent in such work.

Honorarium is clothed in respectability. It is divorced from all idea of bargaining. It even indicates a touch of reluctance on the part of the recipient. Mr. Upshaw revealed that in one transaction when he asked the director of the pay roll to observe what a good gate the speech had drawn and in sending a check for it to be guided by his conscience. Honorarium self-evidently is attached to an act of grace. It goes with a deprecating cough and is quite in the odor of righteousness. It is a tip in a silk hat.

THE WEST AND THE WATERWAY.

The postponement of action on the Lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway is a crowning instance of the manner in which urgent and essential western interests are treated by congress. The waterway was made the victim of malicious misrepresentation and of a stupid blindness to national welfare and, while western representatives were largely responsible for the misrepresentation and shared in the bad policy, the failure to act was the result of the west's want of effective and vigorous coöperation at Washington.

The lesson should come home to us. Even before the next session the west should set about putting its house in order. Our means of coöperation are in existence, but they should be organized without further delay. The west has major interests of which it is fully conscious. Its differences are not essential. We must thrash them out at home and when we move on to Washington we must move united and with a program assured of adequate support in western opinion and representative strength.

We urge that steps be taken as soon as practicable for the creation of a western chamber of commerce, and if advisable any other agency in which all major economic interests of the west will be properly represented.

MAKING GOOD CITIZENS.

One of the most serious failures of duty by congress, and it is a persistent failure, is to provide sufficient funds for the citizens' military training camps. The secretary of war has called attention to this failure by his public statement that "applications for the establishment of units of the Reserve Officers' Training corps are now on file in the war department from over fifty high schools and colleges; the war department has neither the personnel nor the financial means to approve these applications."

He further says that "between 1921 and 1925 over 217,000 youths applied for the training afforded by the C. M. T. camps," but facilities for only 127,000 had been provided.

Thus 90,000 American lads who wished to prepare themselves to serve competently in the defense of their country were denied the privilege through the shortsighted parsimony of our government.

THE TRIBUNE, as our readers well know, is in favor of a general system of citizen training as a required service. It believes in general compulsory training, not only as preparation for the ordeal of war but as preparation for the citizenship duties of peace.

We are told we must not have compulsion. The late President Wilson, in one of his pre-war addresses on defense, said truly that our American reliance was not upon a great standing army but upon "a citizenry, trained and accustomed to arms." But our reliance has not squared with our practical measures. In fact, we have had to rely when war came chiefly on a citizenry untrained and unaccustomed to arms, and our neglect of our own assumed principle of national defense has cost us tens of thousands of precious lives, to say nothing of heavy expenditures of money in unnecessary sacrifice of the one and emergency waste of the other.

But we must not be compelled to train. Well, we are not. Except for the peace at any price pacifists we all assume that the volunteer principle shall be the alternative, whether we think it sufficient or not. But then comes congress and makes it impossible for thousands of volunteers to get the training, and recently we have had remarks by Mr. Coolidge which indicated anything but a favorable or well considered judgment of military training. We are willing to provide money for a junket to Geneva to take part in a farcical conference on world disarmament, but we deny our patriotic youth the privilege of preparing for the defense of their country.

The insufficiency of provision made for training is doubtless to be charged in some degree to the passion for economy in fields not profitable politically. But also organized pacifism has something to do with it. It has an influence out of all proportion to what it really represents and it ought to be offset by the press and by patriotic organizations. The peace case for military training is not sufficiently urged and as no wars are on our horizon at the moment this puts training among the things safely postponable.

But military training is a physical, moral, and mental training which is beneficial to youth in peace as it is necessary in war. Secretary Davis speaks of its value in teaching self-respect and self-reliance, in building healthy bodies and healthy minds, in promoting democracy and broadmindedness in our relations with others, and in the inculcation of a virile American citizenship, and he quotes the president of the University of Washington as a record of personal experience: "I might tell you that I don't believe I ever stood up straight in my life until I took military training. I might tell you that it was as a cadet on long hikes that I first sensed great responsibility for the care of others under me. I might indicate that it was military training which first developed my sense of the importance of human coördination and cooperation, of getting big things done by team play or mass work where they couldn't be gotten by individual actions. These are only a few of the great character lessons which may be garnered from the military department. I speak about them somewhat passionately because I know from personal experience what military training can do for you."

Military training is greatly needed in this country, though we may not have another war in a century. It is needed to keep our country in a condition which will not invite affront, but it is also needed for its moral and physical benefits to youth. Far from turning youth away from the camps, it is the duty of the government to encourage them to come.

THE "NORMAL" CRIMINAL.

[St. Paul Pioneer Press.]

Not more than 5 per cent of the criminals in this country can be considered in any way irresponsible, according to the conclusion of Dr. Louis E. Bisch, the psychiatrist who has made an exhaustive study of the criminal mind. The statement is the more impressive, inasmuch as Dr. Bisch admits that he began his study convinced that the man who commits a crime "must have a kink in him somewhere."

Having decided that 95 per cent of the persons who commit crimes commit them in the full knowledge of what they are doing, Dr. Bisch has some frank words to say about "the absurd overindulgence and coddling of criminals." He is in favor of any restriction, outside of out and out cruelty, which will make the criminal realize he is being punished and not merely "temporarily inconvenienced." The shortening of sentences for good behavior and such indulgences as special diets for wealthy prisoners are specifically mentioned by the psychiatrist as things which should disappear from American prisons.

THE UNSPANKED GENERATION

[By the Rev. W. B. J. Gratz, D. D., Bitter Epworth Herald.]

Did you ever know of a boy or girl coming voluntarily to father or mother, saying, "I want to be spanked. And as long as father can spank harder than mother, let father do the spanking." Of course, you never heard of such an incident, nor are you likely to. We speak of the unspanked generation as though it were to blame for not getting spanked. Not the spankee, but the spanker is responsible.

When the youth of today learns in the movies lessons in banditry, petting, free love, and divorce, who are the teachers? The picture business is not in the hands of young people. They are not permitted to select what films shall be shown nor are they given a place on any boards of censorship, if such there are. Why should young people be criticized for reading books and magazines written and published by an older generation or condemned for crowding the theater and other places of amusement that they had no part in developing? Instead of condemning the flappers of 14, 15, and 16 years of age, let us call to repentance the flappers of the ages where the figures are reversed, the flappers of 41, 51, and 61.

Finding fault with the younger generation has always been a favorite indoor sport, though perhaps never indulged in quite so strenuously as now. An obvious answer to the question, Why are young people not as good as they used to be? is, They never were. The other query, What ails our youth? can best be answered by asking, What ails our parents? What ails everybody? We are all of us, old and young together, in the same muddle that has been brought about by many and unexpected changes that have caught us unprepared. Like children on Christmas morning, we have found ourselves suddenly surrounded with toys so many and so bewildering we have not been able to adjust ourselves to them. We have not learned how to use the wealth, the leisure, the powers, nor the inventions that have suddenly become ours. Without defending everything young people do, it can be said that much of the criticism hurled at them is ridiculous and unfair.

We have come through a period of ultraliberalism. For some time it has been the vogue to sneer at the Puritans and ridicule discipline. Parents have been told to reverse the Bible injunction, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," and substitute for it, spare the child and let the rod spoil. Parents have been told they were not to prejudice the child in favor of religion or any particular moral code, but to let him grow up and choose for himself. But the mind of a child is a garden. If in that garden is not planted the right sort of seed, it will grow nothing but weeds.

The picture, however, is not as dark as some critics would have us believe. There is gloom enough to make us glum, but there is gleam enough to make us glad. After the civil war this country had a moral and religious backwash that encouraged pessimists. But out of that same period came the youth movement which was the saving of that day and is the promise of tomorrow. There were then formed the young men's and young women's associations, the student volunteer movement, the Christian Endeavor society, interdenominational in its activities; the Epworth league of the Methodist Episcopal church, the Baptist Young People's union, and several other denominational organizations.

At this very time a youth movement taking a somewhat different development, but working with and through the various groups already mentioned, is forming an outlet for enthusiasm and giving an opportunity for training and instruction which is going far towards counteracting the allurements of a selfishly indulgent life and an aimless drifting.

There is a social world which regards the good old summer time not only as its period of relaxation but of flirtation and, too often, of dissipation. This group knows but little of what is going on among an earnest, sober minded, even, at times, hilarious multitude of young people who are members of or in affiliation with the churches. The utilization of the summer time by the Christian forces of the country is, we think, the most outstanding achievement of our day. It must be reckoned with in any estimate that is to be made of the moral and religious attitude of young people.

The viewpoint of the church is more healthy and normal than in any previous era. Young people are treated as young people possessing exuberant natures, wanting fun, desiring to mingle socially with the opposite sex, but withal inspired by earnest purposes to intellectually and morally improve. This principle is carried out in our cities by means of the now popular daily vacation Bible school wherein the boys and girls are taught patriotism, team work in play, skill in hand work, together with a knowledge of the Bible. It is practically the universal custom for churches having boy choirs to give them outings at some well selected camp. Philanthropic agencies, which are largely inspired, directed, and financed by church people, are providing fresh air, recreation, and wholesome food for a host of children of the ill-favored sections of our cities. But the most creative, significant, and definitely religious movement is that of the young people who attend institutes, camp meetings, and summer camps of various kinds. The boys in the camps under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. will number this summer more than 100,000. A published report from various denominations indicates Baptists will have 65, Episcopalians 72, Roman Catholics 84, Presbyterians more than 100, and Methodists about 150 such gatherings. It is estimated about 250,000 young people will this season attend these summer meetings.

In returning to the subject of young people generally we are certain our colleges have been in many instances misrepresented and even slandered. It is not surprising where 500 to 15,000 young people are gathered in one institution there should be some irregularities. The same things happen among young people who are not in college. Certain carefully prepared reports indicate that among thousands of these students there is a new interest in religion. Many are studying the New Testament and are seeking to live the Jesus way of life with all its social, economic, national, and international implications.

There are certain values possessed by youth as such that must be cultivated if a better civilization is to builded. The dreamers of today become the achievers of tomorrow. The glory of youth is it dares to undertake the things the conservative age says cannot be done. The very lack of experience with which youth is chided is one of its strongest assets. We suffer from the leadership of those who have been defeated so often they have surrendered their ideals. The glory of youth is that it is undefeated and knows nothing about the things that cannot be done. Whatever may be said about the merits or demerits of prohibition, it must not be forgotten it was the young people meeting in a Christian Endeavor convention fifteen years ago who first raised the slogan, "A saloonless land by 1920!" Many of these young people probably did not then believe the result would be achieved. Certainly most of their elders did not believe it. But they felt it ought to be done, and therefore the young people said, "It will be done." A warless world is still a dream, but it is the young people of ideals, rather than the older people, who are the depositories of practical wisdom that believes it is a possibility. In his book, "The Science of Power," Benjamin Kidd says: "O, you blind leaders who seek to convert the world by labored disputations! Step out of the way or the world must fling you aside. Give us the young. Give us the young and we will create a new mind and a new earth in a single generation."

CARE OF THE FEET.

A CORRESPONDENT who writes with authority tells us of his experience in the care of the feet. He started with a knowledge of the anatomy of the foot, he knows something about mechanics, and he has had military experience.

CORNS.

The corn question is a simple one.

A corn is a thickening of tissue due to friction. As a rule it has a purpose, or comes near having one. The purpose is to protect some underlying tissue.

It is easy to remove corns with a corn plaster. All corn plasters are substantially the same in chemical constitution, though they are variously dyed and flavored. Buy any corn plaster one fancies and apply it according to directions, and the corn will be removed.

But corns always return after removal if the shoes rub the corn area. On the other hand, if the shoes worn are amply large and do not rub the corn area, the corn will not return. If the shoe is changed, and one that does not rub is worn, corns will disappear and remain away whether they are removed by plasters or not.

The same principles apply to soft corns. A soft corn is caused by rubbing together of the sides of the toes. The only new element is the sweating between the toes. In some cases this sweating, so called, is due to ringworm. What has been said of pressure and shoes as a cause of hard corns also applies to soft corns. The shoe must not crowd the toes together, nor push them to either side. There must be plenty of room.

To overcome the sweating it may be necessary to treat the ringworm, or to use a weak formalin foot sweating wash, or to wear sandals or porous cloth shoes for a while.

CALLUSES UNDER THE FEET.

An even thickening of the skin of the sole of the foot does not cause painful calluses. Mexican boys who walk barefooted on pebbly ground and among cactus and briers do not have painful calluses. Painful callus is due to uneven thickening of the skin of the sole of the foot. In a sense, the simplest way to cure it is to go barefooted, and, in that way, to thicken the skin evenly on all parts of the sole. But for most of us that is not practical. As a rule, the same result can be accomplished by wearing shoes with an inside sole that does not give. When the sole of the foot slides evenly and freely over the level, smooth, firm inner sole of a proper shoe, either there is no thickening or the thickening will be uniform. It may be necessary, in the beginning of the firm sole cure of calluses, to assist by periodic filing, and sandstoning the harder part of the calluses.

INGROWING NAILS.

An ingrowing nail is one that sets catacornered on the top of the end of the toe. This condition results from wearing shoes that pinch together the front of the toes. Notching the nail, proper cutting, scraping and lifting the corner are all proper and helpful. Cutting out ingrowing nails is bad practice. It is not justified in one-tenth the cases in which it is done.

But nothing cures to stay cured except wearing of broad shoes. The toenail must be permitted to set straight on the toe.

DIET FOR EPILEPSY.

G. F. C. writes: A friend of mine is troubled with epilepsy.

1. Would an outdoor job be more healthy than an office position, which he is now holding?

2. There is a diet which I have heard people speak of, but when you ask about it all you get is that they don't know exactly what it is.

REPLY.

1. Yes.

2. Send a self addressed, stamped envelope and five cents for our booklet on epilepsy. This gives a diet which may be the one you want to know about.

DON'T WRAP YOUR GARBAGE.

Chicago, July 4.—[Friend of the People.]—Dr. Bundesen suggested, some time ago, that every one should wrap the garbage in paper, as it was much more sanitary to do this. Our family and a few others are doing this and the last time the garbage wagon came through the alley (about a week ago) the driver refused to pick up this paper wrapped garbage, stating that he had instructions not to take it when so wrapped, as it took up too much room, and that we would have to throw the garbage in the can unwrapped. He left without taking up our garbage. Has the garbage department the right to refuse to pick up garbage that is wrapped in paper, and is it compulsory that we stop wrapping it, or what can be done?

A. O.

The wrapping of garbage in paper would seriously interfere with its handling at the reduction plant, and for that reason cannot be permitted, the department of health being so advised. Householders are requested, therefore, to discontinue the practice.

The garbage collection division has a right to enforce its rules governing the collection and storage of garbage, and in doing so ask the helpful coöperation of those concerned.

MAY FILE SUIT.

Chicago, July 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a limit on the time one may bring a lawsuit in the federal courts of Indiana? I had a case tried in such a court in 1922 and won. Some people tell me my children, who are all under age, have a right to sue if it is not too late. M. B.

The limitation period varies with the nature of cause of action.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 11, 1861.

BUCHANAN, Va. — Messengers are just in from Gen. McClellan, who is between here and Beverly, about thirty miles east. He reports the enemy strongly entrenched less than two miles from his camp, and directs that the federal forces within a radius of forty miles shall join his column at once. Gen. McClellan's message indicates that he will attack the rebels tomorrow.

WASHINGTON.—The house passed the $250,000,000 loan bill, 149 to 5, the dissenting votes being from three secessionists and two northern traitors, Vallandigham and Ben Wood. Vallandigham made an elaborate attack on the government, one hour long, full of falsehoods and malignant treason and closed with a hypocritical resolution that it is the duty of patriots to sustain the government in its constitutional acts and defend the flag.

SPRINGFIELD.—Intelligence from Hannibal and Palmyra is that the secessionists who have been concentrating their forces in northern Missouri made an attack on Monroe station and burned it. After the conflagration Col. Smith overtook the rebels and routed them, killing several and taking many prisoners. Later they rallied and Col. Smith asked for reinforcements. Col. Grant's 21st regiment and Capt. Burnap's Yates Dragoons have been sent to relieve Smith.

CHICAGO.—According to a Washington dispatch, Maj. Gen. Fremont started to Illinois last night to assume command of the department of the west with headquarters at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS.—Col. Sigel reports that on the morning of the 5th his regiment and a part of Col. Salomon's command, numbering in all about 1,200 men, attacked a body of 6,000 rebels under Gen. Rains and Col. Parsons, about seven miles east of Carthage and after half an hour's battle silenced their artillery. In the evening the rebels attempted a flank movement and Sigel retreated toward Carthage. The town was in possession of the rebels and Sigel shelled it with great effect. Meanwhile the flanking rebels attacked and the bloodiest battle of the day was fought, Sigel's forces finally forcing the enemy to withdraw.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Seventeen persons were killed, several are dying and more than forty received serious hurts in the wrecking of an Alton passenger train from Chicago, and a live stock train near Norton early this morning. Fire added to the horror of the disaster, the coaches being ablaze a few minutes after the wreck occurred.

CHICAGO.—At 3 o'clock, 102 degrees; at 7 o'clock 66 degrees. All records in the local weather bureau were shattered yesterday by such a thermometrical performance. With a hot west wind fanning the thermometer, the mercury climbed past the previous high record of the bureau—100 degrees on July 16, 1887. For four hours it hovered above the century mark. Then in a sensational acrobatic performance it dropped to 66 degrees with a sharp veering of the wind from west to northeast.

CHICAGO.—Three hundred followers of John Alexander Dowie, led by three overseers of Zion, were drenched with water from the city mains in Evanston last night. The flood was turned on by the firemen and directed by their experienced hands, little of the liquid went to waste. The clothing of the men and women was soaked and Zion guards suffered disfigured faces in the scuffle which followed. All the Zion crusaders were taken to the police station, a crowd of 5,000 persons yelling and booing at their heels.

HAVANA, Cuba.—Gov. Gen. Wood, who has been seriously ill, suffered a relapse this afternoon, and it is reported that his condition is dangerous.

CHICAGO. — William Lorimer told 6,000 depositors of the defunct La Salle Street Savings bank that he was at the end of his string unless they—the widows and orphans who lost their money in his bank—should come to his aid. They agreed to aid him by forming an "anti-knocker" club. The meeting was held on Lorimer's call in the Second Regiment armory, 2653 West Madison street. He told the audience that he still cherishes a desire to go back to the United States senate "from which I was driven by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the newspaper assassins of character all over the country." At the end of his dramatic plea in which he said "when all the friends I knew and helped when things were different have turned against me, I now come back to you, you whom I have injured and hurt, and ask you to help William Lorimer." And those assembled by a unanimous vote declared their faith in his good intentions and agreed to help him.

BALTIMORE.—The submarine merchantman Deutschland, which was brought with a cargo from Germany by Capt. Paul Koenig, was guarded last night by a strong detachment of police. One of the directors of the North German Lloyd company declared that if the war continues for two more years there will be a regular line of submarine ships carrying freight and passengers through the British blockade.

DETROIT, Mich.—President Wilson urged peace reached by mutual understanding rather than force and defended the Democratic party as a friend of business in speeches to enthusiastic Michigan audiences.

CHICAGO. — The Roger Sullivan regular Democratic organization indorsed Maclay Hoyne as a candidate for reelection as state's attorney. The Thompson-Brundage Republicans slated James H. Lawley for president of the sanitary district and the Deneen Republicans named Charles H. Sergel for that position.

"NO RAIN IN THAT CLOUD"

[Brooklyn Eagle.]

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

In printing a week ago the request of the Chicago Forum council, that The Tribune substitute for the toast of Stephen Decatur the sentiment of Carl Schurz, The Tribune invited comments from its readers. Some of these criticisms have been printed from day to day; others follow here. They are reproduced in as full a form as space will permit, and while it is not possible to print every letter received, the ratio pro and con is faithfully represented by those appearing below.

Chicago, July 5.—The toast of Stephen Decatur is an expression of an American ideal of unity. This ideal stood the test through the dark days of a civil war. All the "hell of war," as Sherman put it, did not make the American people want to discard such an ideal. Why discard it now after it has led us so safely through such strife?

Who shall decide the right or wrong of a nation's intercourse? If my country calls in a time of need and I refuse to answer that call I become a traitor. It is then that I am in the wrong, it matters not for what reason my country called me. If there is to be any wrong done I shall find satisfaction in sharing that wrong for the sake of my country, rather than be traitor to it because of a selfish opinion. I can only decide the right or wrong of my country's intercourse by sharing in the decision of a hundred million others; then if my opinion is not sustained by their decision I must stand by them, right or wrong—that is the spirit of democracy, and democracy is the foundation of America's liberty; therefore, let us herald anew the toast of our illustrious patriot, Stephen Decatur. And let the milk fed pacificist wail; we will do our best to protect his family and home, and allow him to continue to feed upon the fruits of real patriotism!

JAMES R. KEYES.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., July 4.—If keeping Commodore Decatur's "toast" at the head of your editorial page, or any other page in THE TRIB, will help in any measure [and there are many who believe it will] to keep this country of ours from turning yellow, pink, or Red, then in the name of Washington, Decatur, Lincoln, Roosevelt, and others who have stood for the right in perilous times, nail it there, without equivocation or alteration. C. T. RAY.

Forest Park, Ill., July 5.—"The Decatur toast has been misinterpreted to imply that the individual must stultify his intelligence and conscience in regard to the public acts of the government and blindly accept them as right because they are his country's."

This paragraph from your editorial in Sunday's paper is to me an outstanding argument for the removal of the Decatur slogan from the head of your editorial page.

A newspaper with a large circulation does more to sway the thoughts and opinions of a community than any other medium. People accept and appropriate the policies and opinions on its pages. They do not stop to analyze a slogan. They take it at its face value.

During the war, the assertion of "My country, right or wrong," with the inward consciousness that she was right, brought forth that loyalty which is the core of Americanism. But now, when the world is looking toward America for leadership in peace, why cannot THE TRIBUNE lead in giving "my country" a voice which will proclaim, in words that allow of no misinterpretation, America's wisdom.

Real loyalty can only be expressed in service! The noblest service which can be rendered "my country" today is to give the world knowledge that the greatest minds, the greatest souls, the greatest publications are moving onward exultant in the task of "keeping her right!"

JESSIE LENORE BOYER.

Chicago, July 5.—Peace is a spiritual state. Religion supervises the spiritual. Conflicting doctrines disturb peace. Therefore, unity of belief among the creeds is a positive prerequisite of a true and lasting peace. Until such a world condition shall have obtained, "our country, right or wrong" is the only patriotic and reasonable maxim any United States citizen can live by.

E. LYONS.

Belle Plaine, Ia., July 4.—Congratulations on your editorial, "Decatur's Toast and Schurz." Hope you will never take Decatur's toast out of its prominent place in your paper.

GLEN G. RADCLIFFE.

Chicago, July 6.—Doubtless Decatur and Schurz were of one mind regarding patriotism. I do believe that as a column topping phrase to be read by all our citizens—"equal" but of varying capacities—that the fuller expression of Schurz is perhaps preferable in any event, but especially as the crucial need of bolstering the morale of the masses has passed, as you say.

Neither you nor I nor Decatur nor Schurz ever have believed that the official government should be unwilling to listen to new evidence even after war had been declared or should not at any time be willing to set itself right when finding itself in the wrong. The point is that the individual must be loyal to his government's position at all times as far as other governments or individuals are concerned. Even in case of war his own government might reverse itself, but not until his government acted would he do other than fight the enemy.

But now that we are at peace it may be better to have Schurz's motto at the column top. O. DIX.

Peoria, Ill., July 4.—There is no discount to Stephen Decatur's toast, no compromise, no substitute. He meant just what he said, and needed no one to tell him how to say it. He was talking about our intercourse with foreign nations. If there is any "setting right" to be done we will do it in this country, not during intercourse with a foreign country.

If the kaiser had realized the degree of unity there was in this country, when our flag was at stake, there would have been no American intervention in the world war. He thought that German sympathy was so prevalent that we could not enter the war. And that's what carried us into it. Let's not let that impression be given again—to any country. It causes war!

Stephen Decatur's toast—leave it in and at the top—AS IS, and without apology.

R. C. CASEY.

Iowa City, Ia., July 5.—As an ardent reader of your paper, I welcome with pleasure your offer for discussion on the issue raised by the Chicago Forum council in its objection to the Decatur toast. What is edifying to me is the stand taken by THE TRIBUNE in its editorial. The friendly broadmindedness it conveys is gratifying. Your editorial meets the issue as any broadminded American could wish it to be met.

It is and always should be "our country right or wrong." We are not to evade our duties of citizenship merely because of differences of opinion. Such evasion would be treason. In the liberality of interpretation of Decatur's toast, we are defending equally as well as in the interpretation of Schurz. Therefore, why change it? Wherein lies the evidence that the motto "has been so interpreted to the detriment of the sentiment for peace and international good will"?

F. B. BAXTER.

Chicago, July 6.—Human nature compels us to attempt to justify our acts, and therefore Decatur's high words are perhaps as good as any to spout when our national conscience is not quite at peace. After all, who is to determine what is right and wrong?

Our God-fearing Christian ancestors landed in America, cheated and butchered the natives who resented their intrusion. Then, out of our great goodness we suffered the "noble red man" [sic] to occupy a few plots of doubtful land. Time and again all this has been justified to the satisfaction of the white man.

THE TRIBUNE is ever haunted by bolshevik whiskers, and roars valiantly for the powers to bar the gates against the alien. Yet its inspired editorial writers cannot understand why Mexico resents our meddling in its affairs. If Mexico dislikes Americanos and their methods—well, how about a little reform movement by our troops? Quote Decatur's slogan and we would be justified.

Right or wrong, the prohibitionists are goading THE TRIBUNE into a berserk fury. The prohibitionists, perversely, maintain they are right, while THE TRIBUNE is of an entirely opposite opinion. We wonder what catch phrase Mr. Decatur would utter if he could witness the spectacle.

All in all, "Our country . . . right or wrong" does very well at THE TRIBUNE masthead. However, the same sentiment has caused comment before. Germany used the idea in the simple phrase, "Gott mitt uns." And Mussolini plagiarized a bit when he adopted the slogan, "Me ne-frego," which may be translated into the vernacular as "I don't give a damn."

HORACE A. LOVE.

Chicago, July 5.—I'm for the Decatur toast as it stands. Some good people would have us apologize for being an American.

G. T. WALKER.

Chicago, July 6.—Decatur stresses loyalty to one's country; Schurz emphasizes loyalty to the abstract principle of right. Decatur's words possess certain qualities essential to a slogan: they call men to duty and point out the value of action. Schurz's words do not qualify as a slogan: they are prosaic, they do not stir patriotic impulses, they virtually put first the doctrine that right is right. For Decatur the words, "Our country, right or wrong," electrify; for Schurz they are little more than an echo.

The Schurz formula is essentially authoritative in method. The magic formula "right is right" will save the country and guide her safely in all international affairs. What is right? Evidently prophetic insight and intuition know. A typical program for the reformer! Decatur strikes a different note. There is need for investigation, discussion, decision; and after decision, especially in a democracy, there is need not only for action but for unified action. Perhaps there is a better slogan than Decatur's; but, in my opinion, Schurz's statement cannot claim that distinction.

Prices and Quality

It is obvious that to obtain a large clientele, merchants must gain a reputation for Low Prices. Because this is so—advertising stresses—more often overstresses—price appeal with exaggerated statements and says little or nothing about the things that go to make up the desirability of merchandise—from a quality standpoint.

No matter how low the price at which we sell, and our prices are generally lower than usually found elsewhere, we see to it that quality cannot be questioned.

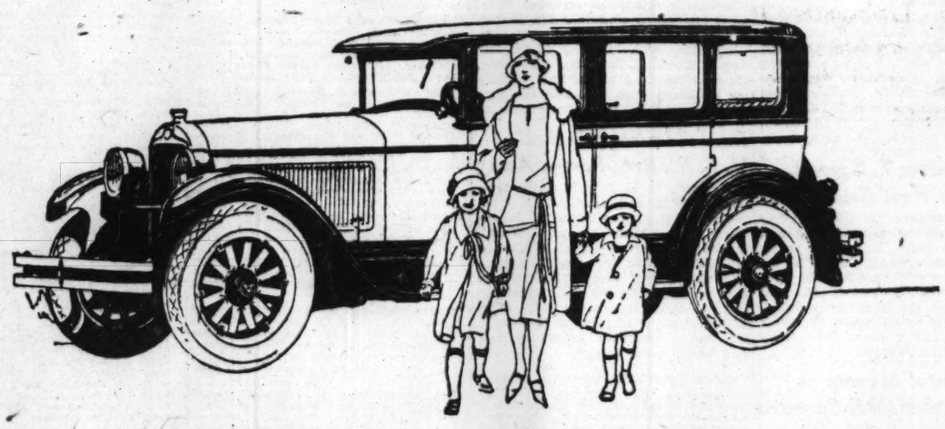
Women

Find a New Prestige, and Unequaled Ease

In driving this Beautiful Eight



Sedan

$1345

It was inevitable that the beautiful Hupmobile Eight should make special and powerful appeal to women.

With its keener sense of what is fine, the feminine mind responds even more quickly to the delight of refined performance, the precision and the ease of control, the gentle buoyancy, which characterizes this great eight-cylinder car.

For a man, it is typically masculine to be more strongly conscious of the sweeping, smooth sweet surge of power which conquers time and distance hour after hour and day after day with clock-like accuracy and matter-of-factness.

Women, also, appreciate such performance, to be sure; but they enjoy perhaps even more fully the fact that the Hupmobile Eight is to ordinary motor mechanisms, as is a hand wrought, jeweled watch to a watch of common kind.

Among motor cars, the Hupmobile Eight belongs to an aristocracy of fineness and worth and illustrious name, quite apart from mere high price, and which separates the better cars as definitely as real culture distinguishes itself from its assumption.

About the Hupmobile Eight is now centering a new prestige of motor car ownership—the prestige that comes from possession of the latest and best.

By engineers, as well as by its seasoned owners, this Eight is regarded as the highest development of the straight-eight principle.

There is little if any doubt that eight cylinders hold the final possibilities of fine motoring; and that the straight-eight principle comes closest to realizing those possibilities to the full.

In the Hupmobile, the finished performance of the engine is matched by driving control and certainty that are not surpassed.

The shifting of gears—except at a full stop—is rarely necessary. Most owners start in second gear, from a full stop, and head the line with a celerity that leaves lesser performance far behind.

Steering you do almost unconsciously. You merely guide the car—you don't push it around—and the guiding seems to require hardly more than the thought of direction.

Parking ceases to be a bugbear. You slip this Eight into a short parking space or out of it with none of the effort and fuss that is usually the case.

Inside and outside the body, there is surpassing beauty of line and design, of finish and fittings—with color-options to meet individual tastes and add to the attractiveness of the car as a whole.

Women who have never before driven with pleasure or satisfaction are finding in the Hupmobile Eight more than they had ever hoped for in any car.

In short, the woman—or the man—who sees the Hupmobile Eight, rides in it and drives it, is bound to ask seriously if a higher price could buy more or even as much in some other type, and if the lure of a lower price could compensate for less.

Not only that experienced section of American men who know great motor car performance, but the feminine element of the motor-wise as well, is granting enthusiastic allegiance to the Hupmobile Eight.

It is this great and growing appreciation of the fineness of Hupmobile as a superbly balanced automobile, as a magnificent performer, as a finer kind of fine car, which is accelerating the nation-wide swing toward the Hupmobile Eight.

WEST VS. EAST, EARLY LINEUP FOR RACE IN 1928

Agriculture and Liquor Are Chief Issues.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 10.—[Special.]—The west against the east!

That's what it's coming to in the struggle for the presidency in 1928, in the opinion of many Republican and Democratic leaders.

The east beat the west in the recent contest over the enactment of farm relief legislation in congress. But for the opposition of eastern senators and representatives the corn belt would have succeeded in putting through the Haugen bill to boost the prices of farm products on the American market above world prices. Now the corn belt is ringing with the cry that not until the west wrests control of the government from the east will the farmers be enabled to obtain a protected American market as do the eastern manufacturers through the operation of the protective tariff.

Big Fight in 1928.

While the first move in the western offensive against the east is likely to be a demand for tariff revision in the next congress the big fight between west and east, the politicians believe, is coming in 1928. The west is expected to go after the presidency in that year with unprecedented determination.

The judgment of many Republican leaders at this writing is that President Coolidge is the only easterner who stands the ghost of a chance of winning the nomination in 1928 and that if he should be eliminated, voluntarily or involuntarily, the prize will go to a westerner beyond a doubt.

This judgment also is that the delegates from the eastern seaboard and New England and the southern Negroes the President would be able to renominate himself if he should decide to be a candidate.

In the meantime the field of western possibilities for the nomination is growing larger as the west grows hotter under the collar. Here is the list up to the present moment:

Charles G. Dawes of Illinois, Vice President of the United States, 60 years old, who declares the corn belt farm relief plan economically sound.

Lowden Is Mentioned.

Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, former governor and member of congress, 65, champion of the Haugen farm relief bill.

Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, speaker of the house of representatives, 56, opponent of the corn belt bill, advocate of modification of the national prohibition law.

William E. Borah of Idaho, United States senator, 61, opponent of the corn belt bill as unconstitutional, leading opponent of the world court, opponent of modification of the prohibition law.

Hiram Johnson of California, United States senator, 59, supporter of the corn belt bill, opponent of the world court, unsuccessful candidate for the nomination in 1920 and 1924.

Farm Bloc Leader.

Arthur Capper of Kansas, United States senator, 66, champion of the Haugen bill, conspicuous in voicing western resentment of eastern domination, a farm bloc leader, a world court advocate, opponent of modification of the prohibition law.

Herbert Hoover of California, secretary of commerce, opponent of the corn belt bill, a world court advocate.

On the Democratic side of the fence the outstanding candidate today for the nomination is Gov. Al Smith of New York. Second in prominence is Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland. Both are wets. Ritchie is probably the second choice of the wet eastern wing of the party.

Hold Funeral Tomorrow for Bruce Higinbotham

Schoolmates from the Culver military academy will act as pallbearers tomorrow at the funeral of Bruce Higinbotham, son of Mrs. Natalie Blair Higinbotham Bradley of Evanston and grandson of Henry A. Blair, president of the Chicago Surface lines. The services for the boy, who was 15 years old, will be held at 3 p. m. in Graceland cemetery chapel. He died suddenly Thursday just at the end of a Culver swimming race in which he had participated. Military services were conducted at the academy Friday.

HANGS SELF IN BASEMENT.

Domestic troubles were believed to have caused Anthony Gerbik, 45 years old, 3705 North Lavergne avenue, to end his life yesterday morning by hanging himself from a rafter in the basement of his home.

WOUNDED

Police Sergeant Kazimer Wistert, who is in a serious condition after being shot by a holdup suspect he tried to question on the north side.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

POLICEMAN SHOT BY DESPERADO DIES OF WOUNDS

James Yeoman, chief of police of Hazelcrest, Ill., who was shot three times in a battle with two colored desperadoes from Paducah, Ky., died yesterday in the Ingall Memorial hospital at Harvey, Ill. Albert Judson, a policeman from Markham, Ill., who went to the aid of Yeoman, is in a serious condition and is not expected to recover. He was shot twice.

Both the Negroes were captured. One was brought down with a bullet in his head from Chief Yeoman's revolver after he had felled the chief. He was taken to the Bridewell hospital where it is said he will die.

Chief Yeoman had heard that two colored men had been firing at motorists on the road leading into Hazelcrest. He saw two men and while questioning them one drew a revolver and shot him.

As he fell he pulled his own gun and brought down his assailant. Judson, the other policeman shot, came running up, only to be met by bullets from the wounded bandit's gun.

Yeoman is married and the father of two children.

Another policeman was probably fatally injured when he attempted to question a holdup suspect at Leavitt street and Wilson avenue early yesterday. The injured officer is Kazimer Wistert, 47 years old, 5647 Waveland avenue. He is in the Ravenswood hospital with a bullet in his neck. He is married and the father of several children.

DARBY DAY AND WIFE BURY THE HATCHET, REPORT

It was reported last night that a reconciliation has taken place between Darby Day Jr. and his young wife, Mrs. Grace Bernice Lundstrom Day, now under prison sentence in California for throwing acid into Day's face. The husband is the son of Darby A. Day, wealthy Chicago life insurance man.

Appearance here of young Day, accompanied by his father, both of whom have been living recently in Los Angeles, followed hard upon the heels of a decision of the state Supreme court of California upholding Mrs. Day's conviction by a lower court and decreeing that she must serve a term at San Quentin prison.

On Friday night Day sought his girl wife out at a party and was cordially received. Day, it is said, expressed a determination to "forgive and forget," and, incidentally, to withdraw his suit for divorce.

This was corroborated by Mrs. Day through a young woman who said she was her sister last night at the home of her mother, Mrs. G. A. Lundstrom, 923 Lawrence avenue.

ARREST MAN ON FIRE ESCAPE.

Harry Gordon, 28 years old, 4446 South Michigan avenue, was arrested yesterday as he was descending from the twelfth floor of the Atlantic hotel via the fire escape. According to the police, he has a record as a house prowler.

FILIPINOS HUSH FREEDOM PLEAS; EYE THOMPSON

Talk of Compromise After Coolidge Aid Speaks.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MANILA, P. I.—July 10.—An unexpected silence on the question of independence has marked the first thirty-six hours of Col. Carmi Thompson's stay in Manila. President Coolidge's personal representative and other Americans are surprised at the complete absence of newspaper agitation, street demonstrations, and communications intended to bring this subject to his attention.

It was not mentioned when the president of the senate, Manuel Quezon, chief of the independence forces, with two associates, called on Col. Thompson yesterday, but that is considered as diplomacy and is far less surprising than the fact that today an editorial in the Philippines Herald, the mouthpiece of the Quezon forces, in commenting on Col. Thompson's public statement, purposes to pronounce it "reassuring," and instead of urging independence, discusses the possibility of another settlement of the problem.

"Clouds Lifting," Paper Says.

The editorial says Col. Thompson's declaration "is calculated to lift the clouds of suspicion that envelope the present inquiry.

"If, after going into the cause and consequences of the present difficulties between the legislature and chief executive, the President's envoy should be able to supply a satisfactory solution which would safeguard the autonomy of the Filipino people without impairing the sovereignty of the United States—two things not in any way incompatible—then, indeed, Mr. Thompson's coming to the islands may well be considered of untold benefit, both to the ruling nation and to the governed."

"That it has the ring of sincerity and has won the confidence of the officials is evidenced by the ready response in the form of pledges of full coöperation," reads an editorial in the Manila Bulletin, which is American controlled and edited.

"Doubts Fade Away."

"Any atmosphere of suspicion, doubt, and even mistrust in political and popular circles which awaited Col. Thompson," says a news article in the same paper, "faded away when he set foot on Philippine soil."

The offers of coöperation referred to include the visit of Col. Thompson with Secretary of the Interior Ventura, who is superior in the government organization to all provincial and municipal officials, including even those in the city of Manila. And an extremely warm letter, offering assistance in any way possible, was received from Mr. Batan, president of the Manila municipal board, who expressed a willingness to throw open the city books and records to facilitate the study of the operation of the municipality.

FEDERAL QUIZ FOR JENKINS ON WALTER STEVENS

U. S. Attorney to Call the State Welfare Chief.

Alleged persistence of officials of the state parole board to shield Walter Stevens, dean of Chicago's expert pistol wielders, will cause them to be taken to the federal building to explain what it's all about, District Attorney Edwin A. Olson announced yesterday.

Stevens was ordered removed to Florida a year ago to answer booze charges pending there for many months. He was seized at the gates of Joliet by federal agents before the removal order was issued, but it later developed that he was under parole and as such was a ward of the parole board, immune from other jurisdictions on offenses committed prior to his Joliet incarceration.

Parole to Expire in June.

At the time the matter was up, a year ago, it was explained that Stevens' parole would expire on June 1, and that Stevens then would be subject to the removal order.

Since June 1 Assistant District Attorney James G. Cotter has directed a barrage of correspondence at the parole board, and has received reams of replies, all of which, Mr. Cotter says, he hes concluded don't seem to mean anything except that the parole board seems interested in serving Stevens to the utmost.

Asks Jenkins to Explain.

Finally Mr. Cotter was said to have directed a telegram to Chauncey H. Jenkins, head of the state board of public welfare, asking that some specific information be given regarding Stevens' status. The reply to this request, it is said, was that the "case is under advisement."

District Attorney Olson then was said to have decided that he was confronted with a covering up program, and requested Jenkins and members of the board to appear at his office. If they fail to come in on the informal summons they will be subpoenaed, it was announced.

JARECKI NAMES F. W. BARBER FOR ELECTION BOARD

Lieut. Col. Frank W. Barber, editor and publisher of several neighborhood newspapers on the northwest side, was named the Republican member of the election commission by County Judge Jarecki yesterday to succeed Anthony Czarnecki, who resigned to accept appointment as collector of customs for the port of Chicago.

The new commissioner began his duties at once. He has not been affiliated with any of the Republican factions in Cook county, Judge Jarecki said, and has never held a public office. For a number of years he conducted a newspaper syndicate for which he wrote editorials. He is now editor and one of the publishers of the Jefferson Park weekly and the Edison-Norwood weekly.

Commissioner Barber is a veteran of the Spanish-American war and the world war. In the late war he was division inspector for the 33d division with the rank of major. He holds his present title of lieutenant-colonel in the reserve.

Former Commissioner Czarnecki, whose appointment by President Coolidge was confirmed by the senate before adjournment, assumes his new duties Aug. 1. He is one of the new federal jobholders in Illinois selected by Senator Deneen. He succeeds former State Senator Clarence F. Buck who has been named by State Auditor Nelson to have charge of the auditor's Chicago office.

CHILEAN FLAYS CAL AND KELLOGG ON ARICA STAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BALBOA, Canal Zone, July 10.—Former President Alessandri of Chile arrived here this morning from New York and left late today for Chile. He hurled brickbats at President Coolidge and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, declaring in an interview with THE TRIBUNE:

"I cannot understand how a people as great as the Americans could select a man so incapable of fulfilling so important an office as Mr. Kellogg. He is altogether lacking in intelligence and has not the remotest idea of what the Tacna-Arica problem is all about.

Assails Coolidge, Too.

"He is incapable of comprehending the principles involved, and the same applies to President Coolidge. I conferred with both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Kellogg and found them without the slightest idea of what the Tacna-Arica problem means."

When questioned on his opinion of the Washington negotiations he said: "Everything is finished now." He concluded that Chile always has believed the land hers and will continue to believe so.

Peru Moving Troops, Report.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 10.—While disquieting reports from Tacna-Arica announce that Peruvian troops are assembling at Tarata and that 1,000 more Peruvians have left for Lima from Tacna-Arica, the families discarding their effects and maintaining silence on orders of the Peruvian government, it is believed that the Chilean government is preparing to announce a settlement by disposing of Tacna-Arica entirely to Bolivia. In exchange Bolivia would give financial compensation to Chile and Peru and make a tariff and railroad treaty with Chile.

The Chilean government is negotiating with Bolivia, determined to settle the dispute by having bankers loan Bolivia sufficient to compensate Chile and Peru, and with the balance to open up Tacna-Arica. It is understood that all the governments have approved the plan.

4 DIE FROM HEAT; COOLING SQUALL KILLS 1 IN GOTHAM

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—After causing four deaths and numerous prostrations, New York's heat wave ended suddenly late today in a squall which also took its toll of life.

Although it lasted only a minute, the squall was terrific enough to uproot trees and topple telegraph poles in New Jersey. A skidding auto was blown against a truck in the Bronx, and Mrs. Betty Feltman of Brooklyn was killed in the collision. Her husband escaped.

The mercury had climbed to 94 degrees at 4 o'clock. A fourteen degree fall was registered thirty minutes after the storm broke.

Storm Breaks Capital Heat.

Washington, D. C., July 10.—A driving electric storm swept Washington tonight bringing the first real relief from the two-day heat wave. Wind that accompanied the downpour ripped branches from trees and caused minor damage.

IOWA FARMERS IRKED MAINLY BY LAND VALUATION

Forced Deflation Sales Cut Prices.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 10.—[Special.]—While other states and the political world in particular are echoing with "What's wrong in Iowa?" many optimistic folks out here in the corn and bacon belt are raising the interrogation "What's right with Iowa?" They furnish the answer themselves, and it is to the effect that evidences are abundant "that agriculture is growing in prosperity." But they point out, there is a deep rooted trouble with the farmer in that he buys in a sellers' market and sells in a buyers' market and is eternally facing the greatest gamble in the world, namely, a fluctuation in the price of his products that sometimes ranges 200 per cent and higher in a twelvemonth.

Land Values Cause Unrest.

Right there is one great reason for the agrarian unrest. The farmer is intensifying his job as producer. Agriculture has been climbing to a higher basis as a business enterprise. The farmer has been taking the surface fluctuations, good crops and prices one year and indifferent the next, without much kicking, but the decrease in the value of his land, his capital, has caused a deep soreness of spirit. The basic complaint in the corn belt revolt is that the industrialized east is antagonistic to the idea that the farm industry needs to be put on a parity with factory and mill industries.

Tentative figures just out indicate Iowa's total farm gross income in 1925 was between $700,000,000 and $712,000,000. It was somewhat larger than in 1924, which was the best year since the 1920 slump. The decrease in the price for corn which brought gloom last fall and winter has measurably been made up by the high price for hogs and the good prices for cattle. In 1925, some 1,000,000 more hogs were marketed than in 1924, but they brought in 65,000,000 more dollars.

Loans Cut Down.

One fact pointed to is that in December, 1920, at the peak, Iowa banks owed the Federal Reserve bank $98,636,000. On May 20, this year, this had been cut to $8,215,000.

In April, 1923, the borrowings from the War Finance corporation were $24,000,000. Now they are less than $115,000.

Only about 5 per cent of Iowa farms are excessively mortgaged and some 40 per cent of the 212,000 farms in the state are not mortgaged. In the smaller communities the traveler hears from farmers that those who own their farms without excessive incumbrance and who did not plunge into high priced acres during the 1919 land boom are prosperous, unless they grew corn last year and had no hogs or cattle to manufacture 50 cent corn into $1.25 corn in the shape of meats.

When Values Were Inflated.

In the inflation period less than 10 per cent of Iowa farms were under contract of sale or changed ownership. In some sections land went up to $400 and $600 an acre. Deflation knocked these values almost in half.

Government figures show that in 1920 the average value of land and buildings on farms was $227 an acre, in 1925 it was $149. The average value of land in 1920 was $199. Now it is $119.

The main trouble is the dull market for land. Forced sales when banks had to thaw out frozen assets have generally brought such a low price that it has been dispiriting to land owners in adjacent townships or counties. The land is as good as ever, but there is little movement, and the owner of a farm doesn't know with any exactness what he is worth.

Gilt Edged Security.

Outside capital regards Iowa land as gilt edged security. Life insurance companies have been increasing their loans in the agricultural West, and one-fourth of their loans have been placed in Iowa. A few years ago they reduced their interest rates from 5½ per cent to 5 per cent. And this in the face of the depression in 1919. They increased the maximum loan on first mortgage from $75 to $100 an acre. The practice is that the loan must not exceed 50 per cent of a reasonable land valuation. Thus the farmer who can borrow at $100 an acre from the insurance companies on first mortgage knows his land is worth at least $200. Conservative banking practice has been to base loans on the idea of land at $200 to $225.

The bank rates for loans on good security is 6 to 6½ per cent, 6 per cent being the ruling commercial rate in the larger communities. The country banks charge 7 and 8 per cent on short term loans, and 90 per cent of their business is on that basis, most of it being at 8 per cent.

High Interest Paid.

One explanation given for this is high interest rates paid on savings deposits, which in the country run 4 and 5 per cent. In the large cities it runs 3½ per cent on savings, as against 3 per cent in Chicago.

Griff Johnson of Des Moines, investment expert of the Equitable Life Insurance company of Iowa, in dwelling upon "what's right with Iowa," points out that more than 3,000 farms changed hands in Iowa last year and most of them were sales from neighbor to neighbor and many of them were at cash.

Last March in Carroll county thirteen local farmers paid $376,670 for 1,312 acres of land—all cash. The lowest price for any one tract was $233 an acre; the highest $312. A Story county farmer recently paid $260 an acre for another farm. He now owns three; all are clear, he made it all by farming. Mr. Johnson multiplies instances such as these to indicate the return of prosperity to agriculture.

Maywood Voters Approve Traction Permit Renewal

Citizens of Maywood, at a special election yesterday, approved a renewal of the franchise of the Chicago and West Towns railway, which operates surface lines in the village. The vote was 1,389 for and 113 against the proposal. Village officials and traction heads stated that a general rehabilitation of the system is to follow the voters' indorsment of the franchise.

JOYCE SERENE AS SHE'S FINED FOR SPEEDING

Joyce Hawley, the wine bath girl, merely smiled serenely and asked her publicity agent, Andrew Kelly, to settle with the court when Judge Lawrence Jacobs yesterday fined her $50 for driving past two stop lights on Michigan boulevard at 1:50 a. m. yesterday morning.

The dancer, who won her widest publicity when she testified at the bath tub trial of Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, in New York and who arrived here to fill a cabaret engagement, was arrested for speeding, for driving past stop lights, and for disorderly conduct. The latter charge was dismissed when Miss Hawley told the judge she struggled when police tried to search her.

At first refusing to admit her identity, the dancer was booked as Mary Doe, 19 years old, occupation none. Later a card bearing her name dropped from her pocket and she admitted she was Joyce Hawley. Judge Jacobs advised her to pay the fine and avoid a jail sentence.

"There's no bath with wine in it at the Bridewell," he reminded her.

TRIBUNE FUNDS TO GET AID FROM HISTORIC PAGEANT

One Thousand in Cast of Mammoth Spectacle.

Colonial dames and soldiers, pages from American history including such familiar figures and episodes as Paul Revere and his ride, Washington crossing the Delaware, Betsy Ross, the Boston tea party, and others, colorfully and dramatically portrayed by a cast of 1,000 people in the mammoth outdoor spectacle, "1776," will be staged at the Lincoln Park Arena a week from tomorrow for the joint benefit of The Tribune free ice and the Camp Algonquin funds.

Nothing that has been presented in Chicago in recent years is quite comparable to this beautiful patriotic spectacle, which will open a two weeks' engagement in the new arena, Sheridan road, Waveland, and Grace streets, tomorrow night.

30,000 Feet of Scenery.

Ushered in with the gripping dramatization of the outstanding incidents of early American struggles for independence, the evening's entertainment will move, pageant like, across the elaborate sets, which include 30,000 feet of scenery, in a series of scenes enhanced by unique lighting effects. The finale is furnished by the burst of fireworks, accompanying the reënacting of the revolutionary battles.

Staged by the Thearle-Duffield Fireworks company in connection with the celebration this year of the sesquicentennial of American independence, the production is historically authentic and timely. It is further augmented by colonial ballet numbers and circus acts.

Parking Space for 5,000 Cars.

Protected parking space has been arranged at the arena for 5,000 cars. General admission tickets will be fifty cents, with reserved seats at $1.10. Tickets are on sale at all leading hotels and clubs, with special box offices in the Garrick theater lobby and at the arena. The Tribune funds will share in the proceeds of the spectacle Monday night, July 19.

It's a good show and a good cause. Get your tickets early.

CITY COLLECTS $81,376 ON BOND OF EMBEZZLER

The Southern Surety company yesterday gave City Controller Martin J. O'Brien a check for $81,376, which settled the city's claim against Henry Wulff, alleged to have embezzled $90,000 from the city collector's office several years ago.

The payment is the result of a decision of the Supreme court, which held that the company was liable for the amount, even though it was on the bond of Age Zylstra, who at the time of the defalcation was city collector.

Wulff was bonded for $15,000, which was paid upon his conviction, but Zylstra's bondsmen refused to pay the difference between the employé's bond and the amount of the embezzlement until the case was decided by the courts.

Still more hot liners by Chicago Stutz owners

THERE are lots more where these came from. But if we printed all the good things that Chicago owners say for The NEW STUTZ we might be accused (again) of "disturbing the industry".

Anyhow, we'll risk these three more testimonials to The Car of the Future, for the benefit of those who have no personal acquaintance among NEW STUTZ owners.

I wish to take this opportunity to tell you how greatly pleased I am with my NEW STUTZ Vertical 8 sedan. I took delivery of it last Friday, and ever since then, wherever I went the people have stopped and admired it. Mechanics who have seen it have crawled under it and everybody says it is the best looking automobile they have ever seen.

As far as the performance is concerned, I have never ridden in a finer-riding automobile. As for driving, it is the easiest car to handle I have ever driven. The steering is wonderful.

I am indeed greatly pleased and happy to own this NEW STUTZ and I wish to thank you for taking care of me so promptly on delivery.

I have driven my car about five thousand miles and certainly am satisfied with the performance of The NEW STUTZ 8. My wife thinks it is the easiest car to handle that she has ever driven. I myself think there is no other car on the market that can perform like The NEW STUTZ 8, or has such riding qualities.

Two things I like about the STUTZ—its quick get-away, and its remarkable four-wheel brakes.

Gentlemen:—

After driving the new Straight Eight Stutz a month I feel inspired to write and tell you that, in my opinion, you are not doing the car justice in your advertising. I mean that you are "under-claiming" its superiority over other automobiles.

For many years I have "fussed and cussed" around in various makes of motor car—most of which were fairly passable (and several of them were exasperatingly "passable" just when I did not want to be passed) and, without wishing to overstate matters, I merely wish to say that I regard my new Stutz as "the perfect car."

It has a wonderful pick-up; it has an understandable mechanism and in the soft purr of its motor there is the real siren call of the road and the open highways. As yet I have not fully tested its speed but there have been times when I "let her out" a bit, when I could not help but believe that under her haughty hood there is power, a flexibility which would, if encouraged, make me eligible to wholesale rates in any fair speeders' court—if any such.

Not only have I fallen in love with the car but also with the fascinating figurehead on the radiator cap—surely the effigy of Cleopatra or some of her "fast steppin'" sisters of the exotic Orient.

The riding qualities of the new Stutz however, are the real factors that have given me the Stutz complex. Over rough spots in the road and the cobble stones of traffic she rides so easy and luxuriously comfortable that she has supplanted in my affections that only other perfection of vehicular comfort of my experience—to wit: my first perambulator.

Very truly yours,
Paul S. Warden

HUNDRED YEARS' WAR FOR LEGAL REFORM IS TOLD

England Wins Long Fight with Reactionaries.

danger and prepare to assume the burden of inevitable reforms.

The problem of group adjustment is therefore in this instance a peculiarly complex one. Compare it with the simple problem of the medical profession! Legislation does not in the slightest degree prescribe the methods to be employed by physicians or surgeons. Established practice crumbles instantly before a new discovery. Regularity counts for nothing in the face of actual results, and professional ingenuity knows no limits except the limits of the human mind.

Has Constant Incentive.

Every member of the group has a direct, constant and powerful incentive to strive after new processes and to employ them at once in the service of society. The community of interest between the medical group and the public is so obvious that aside from a few prohibitions against malpractice and incompetence the adjustment is almost frictionless.

Can a parallel adjustment between the bar and the public be brought about? Is there in the mutual relations of these social groups a sound basis for the evolution of remedial rights? If so, where is the motive force? Will the public take the lead and either devise a technique of its own to be forced upon the bar, or compel the bar, in order to escape that calamity, to cooperate with it in the development of a more adequate system of practice? Or will the bar take the lead, and with a social vision which recognizes the ultimate identity of interest between the contending groups, admit the justice of popular complaints, emancipate itself from the petty tyranny of stereotyped ideas, and cheerfully assume whatever temporary burdens may result from a reconstruction of procedural processes?

Public Forces English Reform.

England has just completed a century of struggle for procedural reform, and it is to the energy and determination of the public, and not to the leadership of the bar, that the credit for the present English practice is due.

Nothing in the legal development of modern society is more dramatic than the long war of liberation waged in England against the tyranny of inherited legal traditions. The nineteenth century opened upon a legal system which had inspired the most extravagant eulogies from the bench and bar. The sonorous and resounding phrases of Blackstone still echoed throughout the realm, extolling "its solid foundations," "its extensive plan," "the harmonious concurrence of its several parts," and "the elegant proportion of the whole." (4 Blackstone Comm. 443.) Legal writers still found it difficult to speak with moderation of a system "so wisely contrived, so strongly raised, and so highly finished." Against the chorus of professional praise had been raised the almost solitary voice of Bentham, but it was a voice crying in the wilderness.

Gradually Awakened to Crisis.

Only gradually did the British people awaken to the real character of the crisis which was approaching. When the Edinburgh Review was launched in 1802, judicial procedure was a matter of no critical interest whatever to the general public. (1 Edinburgh Rev. 461, January, 1807.) By 1824 the same Review was able to observe that "Legal matters are at this time among the most fashionable topics of conversation. All the newspapers abound with reports of trials, and all their readers freely talk over both the merits and the points, the form and the substance, the preparatory process and the ultimate decision." (30 Ibid, 171, March, 1824.)

Six years later we find it asserting that "The all-important subject of judicial reform has, of late years, happily occupied almost the undivided attention of thinking men, in every part of the country." ("Law reform—District courts," 51 Ibid, 478.)

It was doubtless with grave misgivings for the future that Lord Eldon laid down the chancellorship in 1827, for it was obvious that the comfortable optimism of the legal profession had rough weather ahead. The technical refinements which obstructed justice, the multiplication of useless interlocutory proceedings, the delays which were running from years into decades, and the centralized monopoly of the privileged London bar, were being viewed by the public with serious concern as a menace to the stability of society.

Issue Becomes Clear.

The issue, at first only vaguely felt, was becoming clear and urgent. The law must be reformed because an efficient court of justice was the ultimate and only guaranty of civil liberty. Upon the effective administration of the law rested the security of the state.

"It has been well observed," said a writer of that day, "that all the costly apparatus of government—the crown—the navy—the army—taxes—parliaments—powers and privileges, are really of little other use than to maintain the twelve judges in due authority at Westminster." (45 Edinburgh, Rev. 459, Mar., 1827.)

The striking characteristic of the British revolt against the apotheosis of legal formalism was its popular origin and support. The Edinburgh Review, which seems to have led the way, continued for seventy years to argue the cause of law reform in issue after issue, with a tenacity of purpose, and unfaltering optimism, and a masterly ability which commands our unstinted admiration.

Attacks in First Number.

The Westminster Review began publication in 1824, and although it, also, was a general magazine for the lay public, in its first number it launched an attack on the Court of Chancery as a notorious scandal and took up a critical study of the rather undramatic subject of special juries. In its first ten years it published twenty-eight articles on various technical subjects in the field of procedural law, attacking and explaining with astonishing boldness and skill the anomalies in the jurisdiction of courts, the absurdities in the rules of evidence, the atrocious technicalities of pleading, the improper use of juries, specific, preventable causes of delay, the scandal of judicial patronage, the extortionate expense of litigation, and the shocking want of education at the bar. For half a century this remarkable journal was an unwavering champion of the public in its struggle for judicial reform.

In the same way the London Spectator and the Saturday Review took a strong position in support of the movement for reform in judicial procedure, and even such a magazine as the Illustrated London News found itself drawn into the fight.

Times Institutes Service.

Still more significant was the course of the London Times. In 1825 it was a small newspaper running only twelve columns of reading matter, but even at that early stage of the war against judicial abuses it considered the subject so important, and presumably so interesting to its readers, that it devoted one-third of its entire space every day to reporting the doings of the courts.

By 1850 the Times was giving its readers a little over thirty columns of news, and, of this, from six to eleven columns were filled with daily reports of the law courts. These reports were not sensational, but gave a simple and readable account of what was actually going on in the various courts of the kingdom, familiarizing the reader with the personality and professional activity of the judges and lawyers, with the nature of the procedure, the delays, the costs, the technicalities and the net accomplishments of the system.

For a hundred years the Times has maintained this extraordinary service, so that the English layman has probably been better acquainted with the work of the courts than the layman of any other country in the world.

Nor did the Times rest content with news reports on the administration of the law. Its editorial columns thundered against the abuses of the system and the beneficiaries of those abuses. Year after year it kept public attention fixed upon the vital function of the courts in a free country, and in the name of the people warned the profession and the government that resistance might postpone but could not defeat the demand of the people for an adequate system of justice.

By 1850 the Times was devoting more editorial consideration to judicial reform than to any other subject of public concern. In the single month of December in that year, for example, it had seven leading editorials on the administration of justice, averaging nearly a column and a half each, and other months duplicated that record. In the course of the long struggle it published literally hundreds of columns of editorial criticism of legal procedure, in addition to hundreds of columns of reports of parliamentary debates upon the innumerable bills by which the public attempted to secure, and the legal profession to prevent, a thorough reconstruction of remedial law.

Struggle of Two Generations.

One is amazed by the violence of the attack which the public directed and maintained for at least two generations through the press. It was not only a war against legal abuses, but a class struggle against a profession which was believed to be responsible for them.

Although, said an early reviewer, "the delay, vexation, and expense of English judicature" are very largely avoidable, yet "so successful have been the artifices of lawyers that Englishmen have hitherto almost universally believed . . . the assertion of Sir William Blackstone that these inconveniences are the price we necessarily pay for the benefits of legal protection" [4 Westminster Rev. 60-88].

The technicalities of pleading were laid to the selfishness of the profession. "Not a formality is there," says a reviewer in 1826, "which serves not as a pretext for charges; and scarcely a moment of delay which is not contrived to minister either to the ease or the profit of lawyers, if not to both. . . . Every inconsistency, every groundless distinction, leads to uncertainty, and every uncertainty to law suits, accompanied with harvests of fees for lawyers: in short, there is, perhaps, not a single imperfection in the law by the existence of which lawyers are not in some way or other benefited." [6 Westminster Rev. 40.]

Early Action Is Demanded.

Shall England, asks the Edinburgh Review, sit still and watch other nations surpass her in their legal systems? "It cannot be so forever. Old men may indeed stand in the midst and for a season stay the plague of improvement. But their night is far spent. The day is coming when there must be a vigorous and unsparing . . . revision . . . of the whole administration of justice in this country." (45 Edinburgh Rev. 481, March, 1827.)

The timid proposals of Lord Brougham, it was charged, were calculated to make the evils only worse, his chief remedy being an increase in the number of judges; the whole legal system was alleged to be a plan ideally devised for robbing the public for the benefit of the lawyers; and no reform, it was boldly asserted, would be worth while which left the profession in possession of its power over suitors. (11 Westminster Rev. 447, Oct., 1829.)

Of the character of the bar in 1833 a reviewer says: "Imagination, vigor of intellect, eloquence, large views of jurisprudence, or bare knowledge of civil law and the laws of other countries—even the customs of their own country and the laws of Scotland and Ireland—are a dead letter to the greater number of English lawyers. They are mere technical hacks. . . . The truth is that the bar, by dint of its monopoly, is a century behind all others that call themselves liberal professions." (19 Westminster Rev. 66.)

The common law bar was declared by the Law Amendment society to "produce with difficulty a crop of fifteen judges of adequate or nearly adequate capacity, and the demand for a sixteenth would be beyond the productive energies of the soil." (Solicitors' Jour. 72.)

The Encyclopedia Britannica, in its article on jurisprudence, said of the principles and practice of pleading: "This mischievous mess, which exists in defiance and mockery of reason, English lawyers inform us, is a strict, and pure, and beautiful exemplification of the rules of logic. This is a common language of theirs. It is a language which clearly demonstrates the state of their minds. All that they see in the system of pleading is the mode of performing it. What they know of logic is little more than the name." (James Mill. Encyc. Brit. Suppl., 1828.)

We have been inclined to discount the novelists of the time, such as Samuel Warren, who satirized the iniquities and technicalities of an ejectment suit in his "Ten Thousand a Year," and Charles Dickens, who exposed the Court of Chancery in "Bleak House," as representatives of current popular opinion, assuming that they exaggerated the situation under a natural instinct for dramatic effect. But it is evident that the serious reviewers of that period held opinions quite in harmony with those of the writers of fiction.

Dickens Drew Truthful Picture.

Jarndyce v. Jarndyce was guaranteed by Dickens, who was himself a lawyer and a member of the Middle Temple, to be a truthful picture of an actual case, which could be more than matched by others equally authentic, and the chancery judge who assured him, as one of a company of some hundred and fifty men and women, that the Court of Chancery, though a shining subject of much popular prejudice, was almost immaculate [preface of Bleak House], fitted very well into the picture which the public had drawn of the judicial establishment.

So determined were the people to have courts equipped to administer justice, and so aroused had they become over the obstructive tactics of the legal profession, that even the London Times did not hesitate to say: "If the minds of legal men are to be forever perversely directed to the past, if they will not divest themselves of old prejudices, and accept new views and ideas suited to the exigencies of the present times, the public must be content with the attempts made by laymen to improve a system which cannot longer be permitted to remain in its old and mischievous condition. The law and its administration constitute the crying evil of the day. . . . The patience of society is at length exhausted and desperate remedies will be attempted in the hope of getting rid of the burden, if well considered and rational plans are not proposed by those who have made the science of law and that of legislation the subject of their special study." [London Times, Dec. 24, 1850.] "Let the . . . bar look to it in time." [Same, July 29, 1851.]

Crowding more into the same space
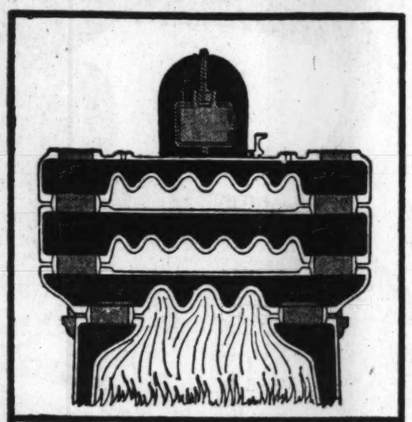
-more heating surface - more fire travel



Corrugated Heating Surface

Long Back and Forth Fire Travel

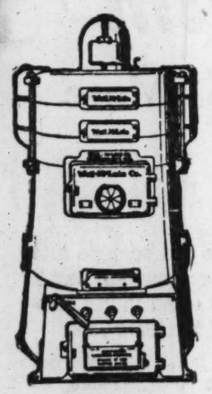
By crowding more heating surface and more fire travel into the same space, without adding to the size or the price of the boiler, Weil-McLain has created a value without parallel in the heating industry.

Longer fire travel over more heating surface makes possible warmer homes with less fuel and less care. These features spell boiler satisfaction in thousands of homes.



Round Type Boiler
For steam, vapor, vacuum and hot water heating; made in sizes for bungalows, residences and small apartments

Note particularly that these boilers have fuel saving corrugations in every section Weil-McLain Boilers give you more heating surface

Heating Surface Increased

Less than five years ago Weil-McLain Boilers brought to the public a new conception of heating efficiency and economy. Home owners quickly grasped the fact that here was something far in advance of previous practice. They asked us the reasons for these revolutionary results. And here is what they learned.

By means of deep corrugations the heating surfaces in Weil-McLain Boilers have been tremendously increased. This has added greatly to the capacity and efficiency of the boilers without otherwise adding to their size or adding a single penny to their price.

You can easily figure it out for yourself. Picture these corrugations straightened out. They will make a surface as long as this ——————. By means of these corrugations Weil-McLain put 40 per cent more heating surface into the same space.

This added heating surface in every section in Weil-McLain Boilers means proportionately greater heating efficiency — more heat per ton of coal or coke or per gallon of oil — lower fuel bills for you — a truly remarkable boiler value.

Fuel-Saving Corrugations in Every Section

The surface directly above the fire is most efficient. To prove this, first hold your hand at the side of a flame—then directly over it. You will find the hottest point directly over the flame.

The candle test (at left) demonstrates in a simple way that heating surface directly above the fire is the most valuable. The Weil-McLain "double-surface" crown sheet section directly above the fire has deep, fuel-saving corrugations to greatly increase the valuable heating surface at this most important point. All other sections have Weil-McLain corrugations to further increase efficiency and save fuel.

Back-and-forth Fire Travel

Long "back-and-forth" fire travel

But this is not all. Perhaps of equal importance is the famous Weil-McLain principle of long "back-and-forth" fire travel. In this modern boiler there are no short cuts to the chimney. The hot gases are baffled backward and forward through the corrugated heating surfaces, until the maximum number of heat units are absorbed and delivered to your radiators.

Scientific Combustion

And so it is throughout the entire boiler. Advanced designing has made possible Scientific Combustion which assures more complete burning of the fuel and more heat in the burning gases.

Weil-McLain Boilers burn any of the solid fuels (hard coal, soft coal or coke) and because of the forethought in their modern design they are unexcelled for oil burning.

Unexcelled for Oil Burning

The quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners demands in a boiler a great amount of concentrated heat-absorbing surface, large water content and a long fire travel. You get all this in Weil-McLain Boilers through corrugated heating surfaces, large water spaces and long back-and-forth fire travel.

BREAK BETWEEN ROUMANIA AND BULGARIA LOOMS

120 Killed in Fight on Border, Report Says.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, July 10.—[U. P.]—Foreign Minister Mitilineu of Roumania has threatened the withdrawal of the Roumanian minister from Sofia, following an exchange of brusque messages over border skirmishes between Roumanian gendarmes and Bulgarians. The Bulgarian cabinet has brusquely refused Roumania's demands for reparation, sent in a note to Sofia yesterday following the killing of a gendarme by Bulgarians.

Hear 120 Were Killed.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, July 10.—[U. P.]—Unconfirmed reports have been received here from Rustchuk on the Bulgar-Romanian frontier that 120 persons have been killed in fighting in the village of Staroselo.

Romanians Kill 26 Bulgars.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, July 10.—(AP)—The ministry of war, after an inquiry into the recent raid by Bulgarian comitadji [irregulars] in the Dobrogea section, has fixed the casualties as 26 Bulgarians dead and six Roumanian soldiers wounded, with ten missing and believed to be dead. The raiders, numbering about 250 fully armed men, penetrated three miles into Roumanian territory before coming into conflict with Roumanian infantry. No punitive measures or expeditions of reprisal have been undertaken by the Roumanian troops, officials declare.

Asks Inquiry by Roumania.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, July 10.—(AP)—The Bulgarian government has requested the Roumanian government to investigate an alleged attack upon a Bulgarian outpost by Roumanian soldiers on July 8.

While the result of the Roumanian inquiry is awaited, calm reigns along the frontier. The number of Bulgarian casualties in the Roumanian attack is not given.

The feeling in official circles is that the matter will be settled amicably.

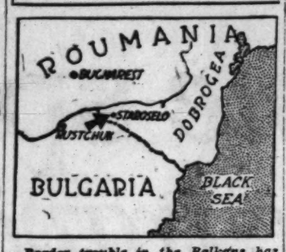
Italy to Back Jugo-Slavia.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 10.—Simultaneously with the news of the international incident caused by Roumanian outposts attacking Bulgarian outposts and occupying Bulgarian territory for twenty minutes, the Italian press hastens to demonstrate that, whatever may be the developments in the Balkans, Italy's policy is premised on its friendship for Jugo-Slavia.

The Jugo-Slavian press is excited over the reported alliance between Greece and Roumania. Since the latter obtained an Italian loan recently and since relations between Italy and Greece have been closer than ever before, as demonstrated by King Emmanuel decorating the "father of the Greek republic," President Pangalos, Belgrade newspapers are alarmed lest Italy become associated with the Greco-Roumanian alliance.

EMBERS



Border trouble in the Balkans has again broken out and a diplomatic breach between Roumania and Bulgaria is feared. According to unconfirmed reports in Sofia, 120 met death in fighting in the village of Staroselo. According to Bucharest dispatches, 26 Bulgar raiders were killed by Roumanian troops, who lost six wounded.

DE RIVERA OFF TO PARIS; FACES RADICAL THREAT

Anarchists Warn Spanish Dictator.

MADRID, July 10.—(AP)—Premier Primo de Rivera, will leave here for Paris tomorrow. He will be accompanied by his aid, the Duke of Hornachuelos.

Threaten Dictator in Paris.

PARIS, July 10.—(AP)—Anarchist posters warning Dictator Primo de Rivera of Spain that he would visit Paris at his own peril were found pasted to walls in all parts of the city this morning. The posters declared that Paris was "no place for dictators."

The police promptly tore the posters down and began combing the capital for anarchists. Every precaution will be taken to protect the Spanish chief from the moment he crosses the frontier. He is coming at the invitation of the French government, and will participate in the ceremony on Bastile day, July 14.

Signature of the Franco-Spanish agreement regarding the Riff frontier and the disposition of Abd-el Krim has been postponed until next week.

Briand Delays Treaty.

Premier Briand, who has been working under high pressure for more than a fortnight, decided to leave for his country home immediately after today's cabinet meeting. He asked that the accord be held for his return, so he could examine it at his leisure.

It is now believed possible that the negotiators will simply initial the agreement, leaving it for M. Briand and Prima de Rivera to sign when the latter comes to Paris next week.

Peking Harks to Cannon as Wu and Chang Attack

PEKING, July 10.—(AP)—A general attack of the "allied" forces of Marshal Wu Pei-fu and Chang Tso-lin on the Kuominchun, or National army, has been launched near here. Severe fighting is in progress and the sound of gunfire is audible in Peking.

MEXICO ACCUSES EX-U. S. CONSUL: 'TREASURE THIEF'

Tries to Curb Sale in Old Maya Wonder City.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mexico City, July 10.—Newspapers continue their attacks upon Edward Herbert Thompson, former American consul in Yucatan. Apparently the sudden move of the department of education against Mr. Thompson is to prevent the sale of the American's Yucatan farm, on which part of the ancient Maya city of Chichen-Itza is situated, to the Carnegie institute.

It was said today that the government would place an embargo on the ranch to guarantee the partial payment for archæological objects which, it is asserted, have been sent out of Mexico by Mr. Thompson.

Mexico Charges Fraud.

Yesterday the minister of education formally accused Mr. Thompson of having been connected with fraudulent secret exportation from Mexico of gold and silver and other archæological objects of great value from Chichen-Itza. The accusation says the treasures were fraudulently exported by Mr. Thompson and sold to colleges and universities. It says the treasures were of inestimable value archæologically. Even Mexican officials accused of shipping archæological treasures.

Valuable manuscripts and books have disappeared from the national and other government libraries, and gold and silver and other rare archæological objects from the national museum.

The state of Yucatan has been trying, it is said to purchase Mr. Thompson's land, which is within Chicken-Itza, for a state park. The same plan was proposed to the federal government for a national park.

The Excelsior bitterly attacks Mr. Thompson, pointing to him as an example of foreigners who, in the last century, have been "robbing" Mexico of its archæological objects.

Assails Exploitation.

"Since Mexico become known to Europe the whites have exploited it, but with the establishment of its independence more than a century ago, there began the exportation on a large scale of artistic and archæological articles as curios. Mexico has sold her birthright to the gringos for a mess of pottage."

The Excelsior attacks the laxity of the government in permitting this. Apparently Mr. Thompson stands a strong chance of losing his property.

HEIDELBERG, Germany, July 10.—(AP)—Paul M. Warburg, American financier, has been awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Political Science by the University of Heidelberg, in recognition of his services for international banking and finance.

Born! Little Sunbeam $5

In its handy Art-Steel Traveling Case, $1 More

A Small Boudoir Iron and Traveler's Joy
Just like the $7.50 Sunbeam save for size

THIS handsome little newcomer with Rosewood handle and Silver cord is an Iron every woman has figuratively prayed for—yet due to its Art Steel Traveling Case it is twice as handy as she imagined it could be.

And whether she uses it at home or elsewhere, she'll fairly delight in the quick, deft way that it irons small pieces—collars, cuffs, doilies, ribbons, and baby clothes. For it's heavy enough to do beautiful work, yet light enough not to be heavy.

Nestles in a Corner of the Traveling Bag

Sunbeam
the Iron with the 30-Year Heavy-Duty, All-Over Heating Unit

And its small tapered point noses ever so handily into small corners, gathers and tucks.

This petite Iron is just what a woman wants for her nicest of nice things—sheer filmy handkerchiefs and precious silk underwear that she doesn't care to trust to the regular wash.

A Handy Art Steel Case to keep in her room, as well as to take on a trip.

An iron she can snuggle into a corner of her traveling bag—iron, cord and stand all in a compact Art-Steel Fire-Safe Case.

Thus in her hotel room she can iron her "wash-bowl" washing, or freshen up frocks that get mussed on the trip. Or she can press a rain-soaked suit if need be, for frequently one away from home has few clothes to spare.

Already women have suggested fifty-three uses for the Little Sunbeam. Read the list below—see why its makers spent a king's ransom to produce this busy little worker.

It uses 25% less electricity than full-sized irons. So whether you have a large iron or not, you can buy Little Sunbeam and save money on every light bill.

Little Sunbeam, like the full-sized Sunbeam, has the famous 30-year All-Over Heating Unit that comes to the very edges of the bottom as well as the point, keeping constant heat where the iron strikes the damp cloth first. Hence it doesn't cool off in the midst of your work—you don't have to stop to let it reheat.

MAYOR FAVORS ELECTRIFICATION PUBLIC HEARINGS

Thinks Exchange of Views Beneficial.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Mayor Dever gave his approval yesterday to the aldermanic scheme to hold public hearings on July 19, 20, 21, and 22 to consider the question of the electrification of Chicago's steam railway terminals.

"It is a well worked out plan," commented his honor, "and I shall be glad to appear at the first session to present my attitude on the subject. I shall speak frankly and I hope that the presidents of the railroads invited will do the same. I feel certain that something of benefit will come from the discussion.

Is Cost Justified?

"The only question at issue is whether the cost is justified, but we measure the justification by one yard stick and the railroads by another. An exchange of views should be highly beneficial to both of us. I look forward to these hearings with considerable interest."

Uninformed and poorly informed aldermen have been timid about tackling electrification because they have reasoned that the elaborate and comprehensive report of the Association of Commerce answered every argument to be made for electrification. A few other aldermen, conversant with the subject, have taken a different view. The fact is that the association report never said that it was impracticable to electrify certain railway services in Chicago. What the report did say was that "the complete electrification of the Chicago railroad terminals as a means of abating smoke is technically practical, but financially impractical."

Investigation Cost $650,000.

The city railway terminal commission investigated that report. It asserted that this "report was made by the best scientific body of men obtainable, unhampered by limitations as to time or funds, the investigation lasting over a period of approximately five years and costing about $650,000."

Electrification was placed in the Illinois Central ordinance passed in 1919. Work on the electrification of its complete suburban service has been practically completed. The trolley trains will be in operation next month. This result is not in conflict with the expert opinions expressed in the $650,000 report of the Association of Commerce. That report specifically said:

"The preceding conclusions apply to the complete electrification of Chicago's railroad terminals. The financial practicability under present conditions of electrification as it might be applied to individual roads or to a single service of individual roads, is a matter which has not been investigated by the committee, and concerning which no opinion is expressed."

City Not Handicapped.

"Altogether, I do not think that the city is handicapped in the scheduled discussion by the $650,000 report on electrification," said Ald. Edward J. Kaindl of the council committee on railway terminals after a short chat with Mayor Dever yesterday morning. "I beli as the mayor suggests, that a f discussion of the costs of steam and electric operation will be highly beneficial.

PLAN EUROPEAN JUNKET

A proposed trip to Europe by the railway terminals committee of the city council to make studies in connection with Chicago's future terminal development was discussed with Mayor Dever yesterday by Ald. Edward J. Kaindl [34th], chairman of the committee.

The mayor declined to say whether he would approve such a trip.

"If they want to go, I have no objection," he said. "But when it comes to a question of money, I shall be seriously concerned." It is reported that the committee is willing to finance the trip from its own funds if the mayor approves it. The committee consists of eighteen members.

DIVORCE CASE OF BUDLONGS ENDS ABRUPTLY

Newport, R. I., July 10.—[Special.]—The Melton J. Budlong divorce proceedings came to an abrupt and unexpected end today after Mrs. Budlong resumed the witness stand, which she occupied for only two minutes.

At the conclusion of her testimony the defendant in the case turned to Judge Blodgett and said:

"I want to file a brief and would like to have two months to do it."

Judge Blodget told her that it was customary to give ten days, and that she must have her brief in by July 20. The plaintiff, Mr. Budlong, will have three days after that to file his reply.

After she had concluded her direct testimony, counsel for Mr. Budlong waived the right to cross-examine. Then the court asked Mrs. Budlong if there were any more witnesses and receiving a reply in the negative, closed the case after setting dates for the filing of briefs.

Three Bandits Get $2,500, Week's Receipts of Store

Three armed men entered the cigar store of Joseph Brell at 641 West Madison street last night, and after forcing the proprietor and two customers to raise their hands escaped with $2,500. Brell told the police that he had the entire week's receipts in the store. The bandits escaped in an automobile.

CLOAK AND SUIT WORKERS' STRIKE MAY LAST LONG

Union Has Lost Heavily; Now Fights for Life.

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Declaring that to give in to the demands of the striking cloak and suit workers would be ruinous, manufacturers announced today that they had decided to refuse to negotiate with the striking union on any basis except that laid down by the governor's mediation commission appointed two years ago to study the industry. As the union rejected the commission's report last May when it was first published, the strike promises to be long drawn out.

To date it has not furnished the pyrotechnics produced by the recent furriers' strike or the twenty-six week old textile strike in New Jersey, but it rivals both the others in the interest of economists.

Demands too Severe.

In the last analysis the struggle represents, it is generally agreed, a life battle on the part of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. The union has lost control of nearly 75 per cent of the shops manufacturing cloaks and suits during the last twenty years, because of the gradual imposition of conditions which a majority of the manufacturers say they could not meet and continue profitably in business.

Before the big strike in 1910 practically all of the manufacturing in the industry was done by large shops which employed union help. In settling that strike a system of arbitration was set up and wages generally raised, with the result that many manufacturers went out of business as actual producers. Instead they became "jobbers" and let out the manufacturing to small sub-contractors.

Union Losing Ground.

These small contractors, many of them former workers, were unable to meet the standard of working conditions and pay demanded by the union, and since only 25 per cent of the production has remained in the so-called "inside" manufacturing plants, it may be seen that the union has been losing ground rapidly.

A few months ago the union began building up a war chest which was said to approximate $1,000,000 when the strike commenced ten days ago. Forty thousand workers quit, demanding of "inside" manufacturers a substantial raise in pay, a closed shop in which no employe could be discharged after being on the job as long as two weeks, and a guarantee of a minimum of 36 weeks' work a year.

Another demand is for a forty hour five day week. At present they work forty-four hours in a six day week.

BIBLICAL OPERA ADDS TO RAVINIA SINGERS' LAURELS

"Samson and Delilah" Another Triumph.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

"Samson and Delila," admirably sung and no less admirably staged, was the week-end attraction at Ravinia, to the marked satisfaction of a large audience. All the resources of Mr. Eckstein's aggregation on the north shore were devoted to the pronouncement of broad melody and complex chorus, and another item was added to an unbroken list of successes.

With Giovanni Martinelli and Alice Gentle in the two name parts there would have been serious disappointment if the performance had not worked out as it did, for the rôles suit them to perfection. This is the kind of music that Mr. Martinelli does best—dramatic, stirring melodies into which he can put all of his driving power, which is more than a little.

Makes It Real Opera.

By the tone of his voice and by demeanor he did more to make the work an opera instead of a cantata with scenery than has been its good luck sometimes.

The dusky beauty of Miss Gentle's voice is suited to Delila as though the part had been written for her. Leisurely, impressive, slow moving as this opera is, with witchery in its score, not throughout, but in its high moments, and Miss Gentle would seem especially chosen to discover that witchery and project it to an appreciative audience.

Orchestra Adds to Success.

Add to these the robust, upstanding drama that was in the voice of Giuseppe Danise in the part of the high priest, and the brief but beautifully sung part of the old Hebrew by Leon Rothier, and most of the solo assets have been accounted for. They are not all the musical assets, however. The chorus, which is important in the first and last acts, outdid itself. There are larger choruses in other opera companies, but this one is one of the most expert in the world.

There was also the Chicago Symphony orchestra, which is just about a perfect symphonic body in the winter and quite as good an operatic band in the summer. Wherefore several credit marks in the performance are to be extended to Conductor Louis Hasselmans.

HALL OF FAME TO GET STATUE OF LA FOLLETTE

Madison, Wis., July 10.—[Special.]—Gov. John J. Blaine announced today that he has contracted with Jo Davidson of New York City for a statue of the late Senator Robert M. La Follette to be placed in the hall of fame, or statuary hall, at the capitol in Washington, according to the type of figure and design selected by Mrs. La Follette and the family, for the sum of $40,000, the price of the completed work.

Mr. Davidson is a former Wisconsin man; was raised in Milwaukee, and was a life-long friend of Senator La Follette. His work as a sculptor has drawn recognition both here and abroad.

By an act of congress each state is invited to provide and present to congress for erection in the hall of fame, or statuary hall, statues of two of its deceased residents of historic renown whom the state shall determine to be worthy of such national commendation.

By an act of the legislature the statue of Pere Marquette, the explorer and missionary, was authorized and erected, and by an act of the legislature in 1925 a statue of Senator La Follette has been designated for the other Wisconsin resident.

SPEED WORK ON SO. SIDE DRIVE AT LAKE EDGE

Fill In Land Rapidly; Will Be Ready in 1927.

Work on the beautification of Chicago's shore line from Grant pa south to the creation of hundreds o acres of filled in land is progressing rapidly and all but a short stretch of the seven mile lake front project will be ready shortly after the first of the year. The entire improvement with a boulevard skirting the lake shore from Randolph street to Jackson park will probably be completed sometime in 1929.

At the rate the land is being filled in now Edward J. Kelly, president, and Lynn White, chief engineer, of the South park board expressed the hope yesterday that the stretch from 23d to 39th street would be completed with a roadway early in 1927. Another stretch from 50th to 57th street will be completed about the same time, they estimated. The gap between 39th and 50th streets will probably not be completed till 1929.

Near Lake to 39th Street.

With the completion of the filled in area south from 23d street traffic will have the use of a lake front boulevard as far as 39th street, where it will swing across a viaduct, now nearing completion, and connect with Oakwoods boulevard. At the southern extremity of the improvement motorists, shortly after January, 1927, will continue east on Hyde Park boulevard to a new driveway skirting the lake and continue south entering Jackson park on the outer drive opposite 57th street.

The boulevard which will eventually extend from Randolph street to Jackson park will be from 600 to 800 feet from the old shore line, and will provide an uninterrupted thoroughfare from downtown to the south side. The driveway will connect in the near future with the north side and with plans contemplated by the Lincoln park board, Chicago will have a boulevard and park on the shore of the lake for a distance of approximately seventeen miles.

Create 568 New Acres.

With the completion of filled-in land along the seven mile stretch the park board will have created 568 acres of new land. The area will be used for park and recreation purposes and baseball diamonds, tennis courts and golf links are to be included in the improvement. Several small lagoons will also be built. Beyond the new project is contemplated another driveway in the future with a series of lagoons that will be continuous and connecting for the entire distance. It is also planned to extend the park area along the shore line to 79th street, but no definite steps have been taken by the board to fulfill the project.

The present improvement is being constructed at a cost of approximately $50,000 an acre and the entire project will total nearly $25,000,000 when completed.

Another bridge connecting the new driveway is under construction at 31st street and a subway under the Illinois Central tracks at 47th street is also being built. Eventually the plan contemplates bridges at 35th and 43d streets so that cross town car lines will have terminals in the new park area.

"SOMETHING IS HAPPENING IN THE AUTOMOTIVE WORLD"

ALMOST A YEAR AGO the industry began to say: "Something is happening in the automotive world".

The public had found itself suddenly presented with a car that fulfilled beyond all expectations its conception of what a car should be and what a car should do.

It was powerful. It performed with dash and spirit. It was at home in any traffic. It was easy to drive and easy to park. It was beautiful. It offered comfort and luxury .... yet its price was low.

Immediately great interest focused upon this car. Day by day that interest grew more and more intense. It doubled and redoubled as the weeks and months rolled by. On thoroughfare and highway this car asked no favors, feared no road.

Then, when endurance took first place among its proved qualities, in the hands of thousands of owners—the final proof of excellence was established.

Today public preference stands at a new peak of enthusiasm for the car that won its place by right of merit.

This public preference confirms the fact that something, indeed, was happening a year ago.

With the greatest year in Oldsmobile history now a highlight in the history of the industry itself; with thousands of owners lavishing their praise upon this car; with a record of performance and stamina established ....

Now what was happening may be freely told:

GENERAL MOTORS was mustering new hearts and heads and hands to the service of Oldsmobile. A new staff of leaders was taking command.

From distinguished service, in all phases of the industry, they came, bringing with them a new appreciation of public wants and needs, a new will to serve, new pride, new vigor and new skill.

They shared a common vision, cherished a common aim, held firm to a common purpose which they were determined to achieve.

And with Oldsmobile each man recognized the opportunity to achieve that common purpose. Shoulder to shoulder with him stood others just as earnest, just as capable as he. At their absolute command were the envied facilities and veteran craftsmen of one of the pioneer manufacturers of the automobile world. Back of all this, at their disposal, lay the vast resources of General Motors.

Seizing these facilities, they bent to their task with a will.

United in their purpose they dedicated to its achievement not only heads and hands but hearts ... their whole-souled ambition to perform a public service, to fulfill a public need.

How well they succeeded, everyone now knows.

Why they succeeded is this:

DEEP-ROOTED in the mind of every man who plans or builds or tests Oldsmobile is the unwavering determination that his knowledge and skill and resources shall render constant service ....

.. that the American family may have, at a moderate investment, a car that gratifies their finer tastes as well as satisfies their every need ....

.. that Oldsmobile shall not be wanting in a single essential factor that contributes to performance, comfort, beauty or long life ....

.. that in the design, material and manufacture of every detail the strictest standards shall be rigidly maintained ....

.. that their boundless resources and matchless facilities shall be utilized to the utmost to provide these qualities at the lowest possible cost ....

This is more than a purpose; it is a creed.

It is accepted as a trust, with the firm determination that nothing shall ever deflect the loyalty of Oldsmobile from this ideal.

This—our steadfast pledge—is your firm assurance.

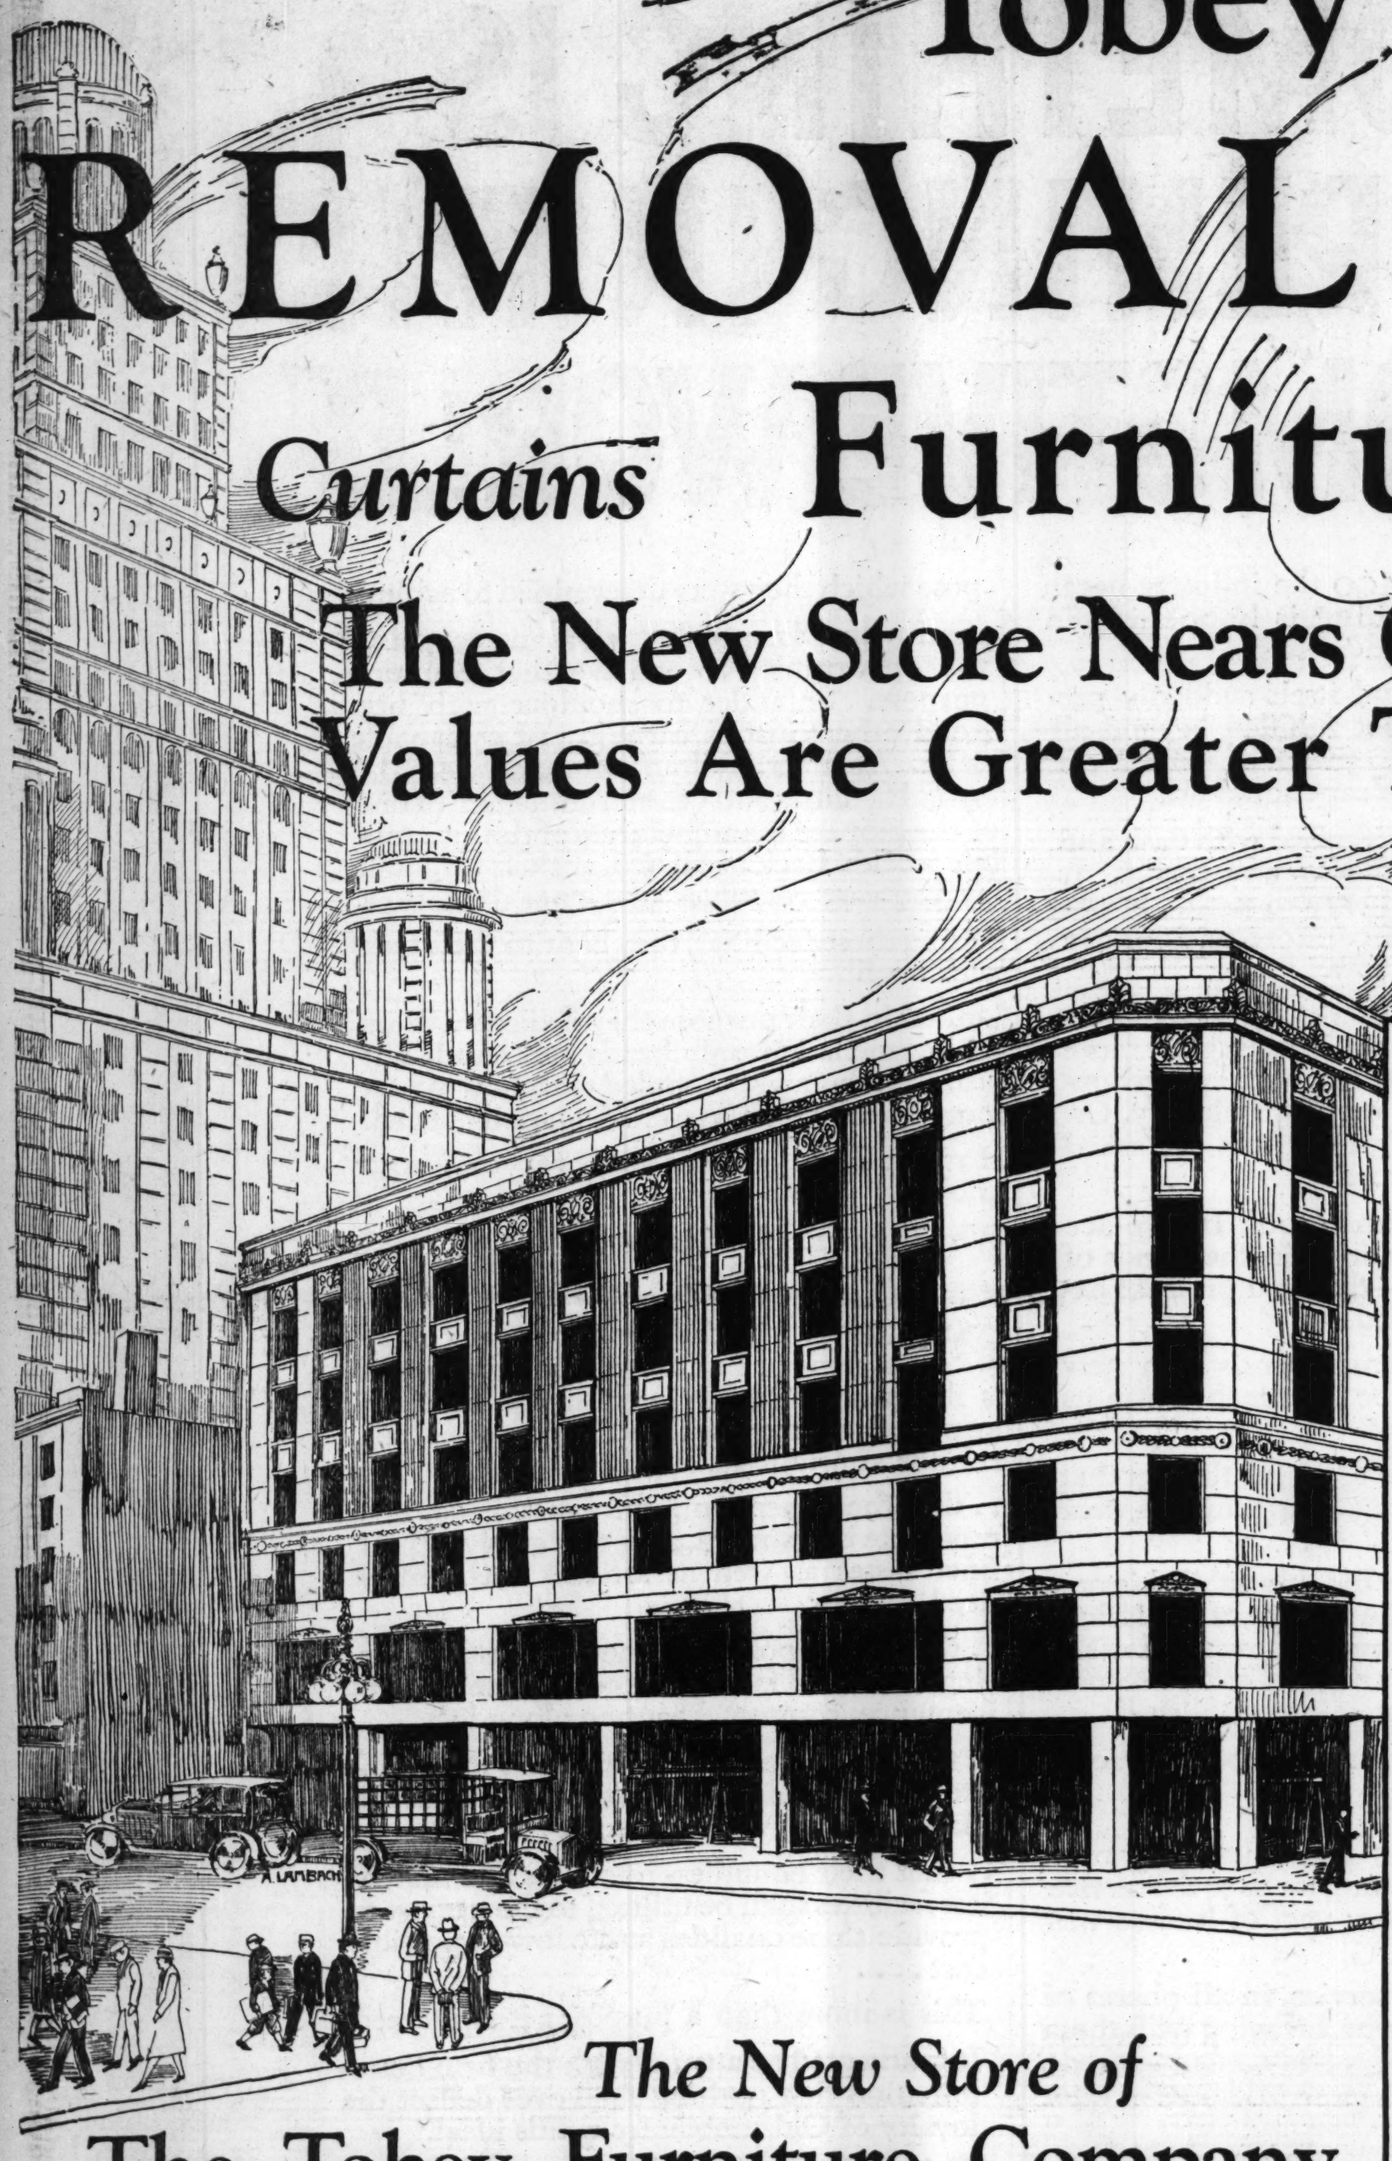
The New Store Nears Completion
Values Are Greater Than Ever



THE new store on Michigan Avenue is rapidly approaching completion.

There is little time left to dispose of the great warehouse full of furniture that is represented by the samples on our floors—and to carry out our plan of opening the new store with an entire new stock of goods, we have made such radical reductions as will insure the quick disposal of this merchandise.

Some of the finest specimens in the country, furniture made by hand in our own factory, are offered now in the greatest sale in Chicago's history. On the sixth floor is a special group containing many odd pieces that are marked at a fraction of their regular value.

Fine Oriental and domestic rugs, curtains and gift articles also are included.

During this sale we will be unable to send furniture on approval or to accept cancellations or returned goods. We therefore ask our customers to be sure of their choice before placing orders.

The New Store of

The Tobey Furniture Company

THIS illustration shows the progress made in the construction of the new store. The style of architecture, the facilities provided and the location all combine splendidly to further the purpose for which it is built —the display of beautiful things for the home.

With this fine new building—only two blocks north of our present location on Wabash Avenue and Washington Street—and our much larger warehouse and shops, we will be able to give our patrons better service than ever.

Columbus, O., July 10.—Just two of those 294 strokes Joe Turnesa took to complete the 72 holes of golf in the national open championship tournament cost him about $50,000. When Bobby of the Atlanta Jonses addressed his ball on the last green and gave it a delicate pat that ran it into the little iron cup two feet away, he watched from Joe's tightening brown eyes a prize of great value.

That last loving tap Jones gave the dimples of his ball ended a brilliant duel of 18 holes and lacerated Joe's heart as completely as the coup de grace in a duel with rapiers. For it deprived Turnesa of a championship which to a boy in his line of work as a professional golfer would have been worth at least $50,000.

Bob Saves Joe Much Ink.

Joe is an Italian boy, sprung from that fringe of gardners, vintners, and truck farmers which dwells in the lee of the millionaires' castles in Westchester county, New York, and, like Gene Sarazen before him, he eschewed baseball and went in for golf because most of the available open country in their neighborhood was sown to divots and stymies, leaving little room for homers and squeeze plays. Like Sarazen he is as colorful as a song plugger's shirt, and if he had won the championship today he would now be brandishing a fountain pen over a sheaf of contracts and exporting goods testimonials and yelling for another pint of ink.

There was one pair playing between Turnesa and Jones as they dueled home over the last nine holes but news travels in a championship golf tournament and Bobby, in the rear, was receiving bulletins on Turnesa's game and courier were panting up to Joe telling him what he would have to do to beat Jones. In the meantime Bill Mehlhorn, bowlegged and loosely put together, was pursuing his ball from bad to worse some distance behind and had ceased to figure in the immediate calculations of Bobby and Joe.

Bobby Shoots Routine Golf.

When Turnesa came to the sixteenth hole he was one stroke better than Bobby but there he took a five on a par four hole and when Bobby came along to mount the tee and drive down toward the dry bed of the retired brook he realized that he could even the score to there by shooting routine golf, which he did. Then Turnesa took four on the seventeenth which is a short hole, reached by a soaring mashie drive, if possible, and surrounded by traps, dead grass, and the creek bed, and Bobby made it in three.

By this time Turnesa had holed out at the eighteenth and his card was in so when Jones climbed the eighteenth tee he was shooting to defend the championship, and the gallery, as the house or gate is called in the golf racket, was floundering over the fairway and rough like so many entrants in a cross country sack race. The marshals of the golf course, a numerous body of club members locally prominent in the jewelry, gents' furnishings, drugs and sundries, and paints, oils and glass professions ran hither and thither in the order named, waving their arms excitedly and yelling, "Hey, get out of there."

Marshal's Get Fine View

Some of the customers fell down and this being a mixed crowd, there were glimpses of lingerie and not unpleasant, either. At length, however, the marshals of the golf course succeeded in wedging themselves into the best positions which seemed to be their purpose all through the tournament, and Bobby Jones drew back his driver with a silky, swishing sound. The club head fell with a satisfying smack and

HE WINS!

Bobby Jones, pride of American golfers, again proves right to be called the nation's greatest amateur. This time he does it by winning the national open title in tournament at Columbus, O.

Fans Tax 86 Betting Booths; Sis Garry Wins at Homewood

BY FRENCH LANE.
(Picture on back page.)

Leading from start to finish, Sis Garry racing in L. M. Severson's silks, won the 2 year old handicap which featured the racing program at Washington park yesterday. She won by a length from The Hovel, while another length back in third place came Up and Down, a Chicago color bearer. A crowd of 12,000 watched the card decided, and it was the most speculative turf gathering in the Chicago district in nearly a quarter of a century.

JOCKEY J. SMITH.

It wasn't a good day for racing, neither were the conditions agreeable, for the track was still deep in mud and the sun was hiding behind black clouds most of the afternoon. But there was no rain and the stampede from the stand to the purse fund mutuel betting pavilion continued to grow in volume as the card was run off.

Bradley Colt Finishes Fourth.

For the first time at Washington park, the green and white silks of Edward A. Bradley's Idle Hour stable were seen in action. They were carried by the two year old son of North Star III., called Bottom Dollar, which looks something like Bubbling Over. But he didn't run like the famous Derby winner, for when the official numbers were hung out at the finish of the feature race it was found he had wound up in fourth place.

A better ride by J. Smith on The Hovel might have caused Sis Garry some anxious moments toward the end of the Juvenile feature, for he was far out of it in the early going but was running over horses at the finish and just missed getting up despite a tight pocket he got into at the height of the stretch battle. Sis Garry was four lengths in front at one stage of the race.

All 86 Betting Booths Open.

After a week of familiarizing themselves with the new purse fund mutuel wagerings system, the Chicago racegoers fairly swamped the pavilion where the certificate tickets were sold and for the first time all the 86 windows on both the selling and paying sides were in operation. But even these added facilities did not prevent congestion, and business seemed about as lively at the $50 and $10 windows as it was down where the $2 crowd congregated.

No announcement was made on the amount of money handled, but it was by far the biggest day of the season.

There was a secondary feature on the card which also brought a thrilling contest when Dancing Fool, running as if at home in the heavy going, got up in time to beat the fast finishing Prince Hamlet by a neck, while Chink, after threatening to make a runaway of it in the early stages, quit badly but managed to save the slim end of the purse.

Long Shots Win Easily.

Dancing Fool was an outsider in the betting, Ocean Current having been backed into favoritism, but he was never a contender and wound up far back in last place, while Abstract, a post time good thing, was also soundly beaten, although he ran with the winners for a time.

Myra M. and Jockey Finnerty, the latter the hero of Friday's racing, started the players of favorites off on what looked to be a rosy afternoon when they won the first race handily, but Biddy Shipp, having the benefit of a rousing ride for Johnson, upset the talent in the second when she led Embryo home by a narrow margin. Polyfena, the favorite, got no slice of the spoils.

Odd Seth was another favorite when he got up just in time to win the third, but from then on the choices were in eclipse, Driftwood Blaze providing the biggest upset when he cantered to an easy triumph in the fourth race. He was quoted at $26 for each $2 ticket on the infield mutuel board, but was much the best once Jockey Watson gave him his head. He took a commanding lead from Old Tom, the early leader, a sixteenth out.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 10.—In the wildest, weirdest game of ball of the season, the Athletics took their third straight game from the White Sox today and now are quite firmly entrenched in second place. The score of the mêlée was 17 to 14 and there isn't much in the history of baseball that didn't occur on the field.

It was the hottest day of the year and more than 30,000 fans sweltered through the two and three-quarters hours that was necessary to gain a decision. The game began as if it would be the tightest kind of a pitching duel between two star slabmen, Ted Blankenship and the speedy Lefty Grove. It was tight for just three innings, then Blankenship blew up and the Mackmen knocked in six runs. In the next inning Grove blew, the Sox batting him for four runs.

The Parade of Pitchers.

After that all the pitchers in this part of the country got into the ball game. The bull pens resembled a spring training camp. Pitchers walked from the pen to the field and from the field to the shower in a regular parade. For the Mackmen, there were Gray, Pate, and Walberg who followed Lefty Grove. For the Sox there were Thurston, Connally, Faber, and finally Steengrafe, who took a turn after Red Faber had retired.

While the Sox tallied fourteen times, there was only once during the long struggle that they got in front. They enjoyed a three run lead when they stampeded in the eighth inning for a cluster of four runs that seemed to pull the game out of the fire and salt it down for keeps. They were only one run behind going into the eighth and after one was out, Mostil and Collins singled and Bib Falk came through with a home run drive right through the figures on the score board in center field. That put the Sox two to the good and immediately Earl Sheely socked a homer into the left stand, putting the boys three to the good.

Macks Rout Faber.

But the Mackmen weren't stopped. It was in their half of the eighth that Boss Collins sent Old Red Faber to the slab to save the game and Old Red had nothing but trouble. That three run lead was wiped out before one could say Jack Robinson and Red was removed and Young Milton Steengrafe called in. He was wild, and in another jiffy the Mackmen were dancing on the bench with a three run lead.

That eighth inning assault by the Macks was terrific. Lamar began with a double but Dykes rolled out. Then Poole slapped one down to Kamm who pegged to the plate to get Lamar but he didn't get him. The verdict was that Lamar beat the throw, but it was a low shot and Grabowski dropped the ball. After that Perkins walked and Galloway fanned. Then Joe Hauser came up as a pinch hitter and broke his bat hitting a sloppy Texas leaguer to right center that went for two bases and scored two men, tying the count.

Faber was removed then and Steengrafe summoned. He walked Bishop and hit French, filling the bases, after which the slugging Al Simmons doubled, scoring two runs. Then Steeny walked Lamar and hit Dykes in the back, forcing in another run.

British Beat Yank Athletes in Track Meet

BY DON SKENE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

STAMFORD BRIDGE, England, July 10.—The picked team of Oxford and Cambridge university athletes today defeated the stars from Cornell and Princeton universities in a twelve event track and field meet.

The British team won seven events while the Americans could capture only five. The invaders were unable to cope with their rivals in any of the longer races, although Hank Russell of Cornell, captured both the 100 yard and 220 yard dashes.

The meet was definitely decided in the final event, the half mile run, which was won by E. H. Freyer of Cambridge in 1:59 3-5, with J. R. Gibson of Princeton trailing him by five yards to take second. Before the final event the English universities led, 6 and 5, on first places, but according to the rules of the games the score was tied, since when there is a tie for first second place is counted in its stead.

The meet started with an American victory when Russell of Cornell won the 100 yard dash, beating A. E. Porritt, the Oxford captain, in a pretty duel, and winning by four yards after getting a lead midway. Russell's time was :10 flat.

Sullivan Wins Shot put.

C. T. Vangeysel of Cambridge took the high jump with a leap of 6 feet. E C. Bradley of Cornell, J. W. Thompson of Princeton and J. D. S. Pendlebury of Cambridge all tied for second at 5 feet, 10 inches. Vangeysel failed to break the record with the bar at 6 feet 3 inches.

B. E. Sullivan, the Cornell giant, won the shot put with a toss of 44 feet 3½ inches. O. F. Gates of Princeton took second with 43 feet 1½ inches. In the mile run, R. S. Starr of Cambridge won easily in 4:26 1-5, ten yards ahead of his teammate, H. M. O'Connor of Oxford, who finished second after setting the pace for the first three-quarters. J. E. Gore of Princeton was third.

Lord Burghleigh won the 120 yard high hurdles by four yards in :15 3-10. E. Carruthers of Cornell was second and L. S. Jadwin of Princeton third. G. C. Weightman-Smith of Cambridge fell over the seventh hurdle and did not finish. He was neck and neck with Lord Burghleigh when he took his spill.

Russell Wins 220 Dash.

Russell of Cornell reaped his second victory when he copped the 220 yard dash in :21 5-10, again beating the fleet New Zealander, Porritt, who was three yards behind. Russell was given an ovation after his second triumph over Porritt, who starred in the Paris Olympics and who is considered one of Britain's strongest hopes.

T. C. Fooks of Cambridge won the 2 mile grind, aided by the teamwork of I. Thomas of Oxford, who paced him for the first five of the eight laps run. Starting with the sixth lap, H. H. Benson of Cornell took the lead with Fooks at his heels. Fooks regained the lead in the seventh, fighting off a desperate challenge by Benson on the last turn. Fooks' time was 9:44 4-5, Benson coming in ten yards behind.

Princeton won the broad jump. E. J. Kikeman and L. R. Scudder of Old Nassau took first and second places respectively, with leaps of 23 feet 2¾ inches and 22 feet 6¼ inches. The quarter mile run went to J. W. J. Rinkel, the Cambridge greyhound, in :49 3-5, with Eugene Goodwillie, a Chicago boy, of Cornell, second.

Lord Burghley reproduced his great style in the high hurdles, leaping the low sticks in :25 and winning by four yards with his teammate, J. Fletcher of Cambridge, taking second.

The American ambassador, Alanson B. Houghton, summed up the meet in his speech presenting the victors the cup donated by the king of Spain. "It was a great fight, wherein every event was keenly contested and fought to the end. I ask Mr. Porritt, captain of the winners, to keep the cup in the best of condition, because we are coming back again after it."

Hartford and Brooklyn in Pro Grid Loop

Philadelphia, Pa., July 10.—(AP)—Brooklyn, N. Y., and Hartford, Conn., today were granted membership in the National Football league at the annual meeting of the organization. The request of Pottsville, Pa., for reinstatement, and the requests of Los Angeles, Cal., and New Britain, Conn., representatives to be granted franchises will be taken up tomorrow.

The Milwaukee club was reinstated, but under a new owner. President Carr ordered the Milwaukee franchise sold last December after he learned that schoolboys were used in the team's lineup. R. L. McGurk, then owner of the club, was given 60 days in which to dispose of his franchise. John Bryan, who purchased it, is here for the meetings and upon his request the club was reinstated.

Decision was reserved as to whether the new forward pass rule, formulated by the intercollegiate rules committee, would be adopted by the professional league.

Joseph F. Carr, president of the league, announced that Ernie Nevers of California, All-American full back, had been signed to play with the Duluth team next fall and that Rody Lamb had been purchased from the Rock Island club by the Chicago Cardinals.

WILSON CLINCHES FIRST GAME WITH HOMER IN TENTH INNING

Jones Puzzles Foes in Second Tilt.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The mere fact that the enemy outhit them was of no consequence to McCarthy's resuscitated Cubs yesterday. They were held to eight blows in the first portion of a double header and the same number in the afterpiece, but because they walloped the ball in bunches they profited to the extent of two snappy wins over Uncle Robby's Ancients and Honorables from Brooklyn. The initial victory was compiled in ten innings by 6 to 4 and the nightcap in regulation time by 3 to 1.

PERCY JONES.

Chief among the items that served to stir up some 21,000 customers were a homer by Hack Wilson and some choice hurling out of the left arm of Percy Lee Jones. Hack's lengthy blow was the thing that brought a happy ending to the first ten chapters of see-sawing, and Jones' arm kept the Robins from chirping too loudly in the afterpiece. There also were other things worthy of comment, but they can all be bunched under the assertion that every last man of the winning crew looked the part of a diamond expert.

Milstead Relieves Kaufmann.

Game No. 1 was a tough affair to land because the Cubs never could get the upper hand until Wilson hit that homer. Three different times the Bruins tied it by collecting a run at a time off Jess Petty. The last chapter in which they tied it was the eighth, thereby offsetting a run that forced Tony Kaufmann to beat it in Brooklyn's seventh. Tony's departure brought Milstead into the fight and his southpawing along with some brilliant fielding kept the enemy subdued until Wilson broke up the party just after Freigau had doubled with two out in the tenth. Hack's knockout poke sailed into the right field seats.

Prior to Wilson's long knock several other fellows had played parts in keeping the Cubs going. A hit by Heathcote was good for a run in the fourth after Brooklyn had scored once in the third. Two hefty blows with a sacrifice fly and bad throw by Stephenson let two more Robins soar home in the fifth but the Cubs got one of these back in their half on hits by Kaufmann and Heathcote and Grimm tied it at three apiece in the sixth by slamming the ball into the right field customers. After Brooklyn had gone ahead again in the seventh the Cubs tied it up once more by collecting a tally on blows by Wilson and Stephenson and Grimms' fly.

Jones Sails Along.

Doug McWeeny, a Chicagoan, was trotted out to oppose Jones in the second game. Some friends handed Doug a chest of silver and the Cubs then proceeded to take all the joy out of his life. He had close calls in the first and second chapters but in the third didn't escape, two scoring. These two runs were managed on some real hits. Adams led off with a single and Heathcote scored him with a double. Then Freigau singled Heathcote over the counter.

Doug did a pretty good job of pitching after this, but was eventually yanked for a pinch hitter. The switch brought Rube Erhardt to the hill in the eighth, and the Cubs made their win a bit more secure by assessing him for a run. A single by the redoubtable Wilson and a two bagger by Stephenson were the contributing factors.

Jones was in such rare form that he didn't have much to worry about for the first eight innings. Then in the ninth, two hits with none dead caused considerable activity among the occupants of the bull pen, but Percy Lee just took a deep breath and slid through with only one run across.

NICE NET CLUB, SHY OF MONEY, IS SOLD TO CITY

NICE, France, July 10.—(AP)—The Nice Tennis club, training ground of Suzanne Lenglen, has been sold to the city of Nice for 2,100,000 francs. The sale was caused by financial difficulties which began in February when the club suffered heavy losses through the cancellation of Mlle. Lenglen's widely advertised singles match against Miss Helen Wills.

Suzanne's father was secretary of the club.

BOB JONES DUELS JOE TURNESA ON LAST 18 HOLES

Pro Defeated for Title Worth $50,000.

the ball disappeared from view for an instant, reappearing as a white bouncing object fully 300 yards down the fairway. There was another panic and again the marshals fought for their places in the front row.

Then Bobby fingered over the tools in his sack and drew out one which he afterwards described as a number four iron, for the 180 yard approach to the green.

The ball fell about fifteen feet from the flag and the first putt almost dropped in. Joe Turnesa, squeezed in somewhere among that crowd around the green, still had one chance to tie, for Bobby's ball had run two feet past the hole and two-foot putts are never conceded in the national open. But this chance passed, and Turnesa became a mere runner-up as Bobby set his spikes in the springy green bent low over his putting foot and bumped the ball down the hole for a birdie four.

One Trap Cost Five Strokes.

Bobby had lost five strokes at the ninth hole in the course of this tournament, having dropped five mashie drives into the sand pits there and when he passed on this morning after losing the fifth one he was half persuaded that he had left the championship buried in the sand

He lost two other strokes by accidents of the game, one when his ball became wedged in a crevice in a stone wall and the other when it moved as he was preparing to putt in Friday's play. What misfortune Turnesa had to survive only Joe himself is prepared to state because he was just a golfer named Joe Turnesa to the gallery during the first two days and nobody troubled to check up on his mishaps.

They met in the locker room when it was all over. Bobby Jones, to whom the open championship means nothing but the repetition of an honor won three years ago, and Joe Turnesa, the Italian graduate caddy to whom the losing of it meant the denial of a stake in life.

With Affectionate Curses.

Joe hung off for a moment, as the usual milling fringe of total strangers yanked Bobby by the sleeve invited him to drink from their gin bottles and telling him they had been pulling for him when nobody else gave him a cheer.

"I want to congratulate you, Bobby," Joe said, when Bobby turned to go.

Jones seemed a little embarrassed. He grabbed Turnesa's brown hand.

"Thanks, Joe," he said. "I was damned sorry you couldn't be in there yourself."

"Well, same here," said Joe. "But, what the hell. That's the way it goes."

RAIN CURTAILS ALTOONA RACES; BODNAR CRASHES

Altoona, Pa., July 10.—(AP)—Rain and an accident marred the national championship motorcycle races on the Altoona speedway today. A downpour stopped the 25 mile race at the 15 mile mark and caused the 50 mile event to be canceled. In the first race, John Bodnar, Pittsburgh racer, lost control of his machine and crashed from the track. He was taken to the Altoona hospital with a puncture wound in his side. He will recover.

Four events were finished. The winners:

Five miles for 21.35 cubic inch bore machines—Jim Davis, Columbus, O.; time, 3:22.

Five miles 30.50 cubic inches bore—A. Pechar, New Haven, Conn.; time, 3:21.

Ten miles, 30.50 cubic inch bore—Curley Fredericks, Denver; time, 6:29.

Twenty miles, 45 cubic inch bore—Joe Petrali, Los Angeles; time, 12:46 3-5.

Fredericks was leading when the 25 mile event was stopped.

A.A.U. Chiefs Move to Turn Hoff Pro for Act on Stage

Los Angeles, July 10.—(AP)—Charles Hoff of Norway, world's champion pole vaulter, should rank as a professional as a result of a stage contract, in the opinion of Robert S. Weaver, president of the Southern Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic union. This ruling, Weaver said, would bar Hoff from further amateur competition in any part of the world.

Hoff has been appearing in a dancing bill for some time, but yesterday he added vaulting to his act. On being informed of this Weaver said, "If Hoff appeared on the stage and actually vaulted he has broken not only an amateur rule, but an international code as well and will be barred from the next Olympic games."

When informed of Weaver's statement, Hoff said he had come to the point where he had to have money and he does not care whether the A. A. U. rules him a professional or not. The A. A. U. barred Hoff from further competition in America last spring following his failure to compete in a San Francisco meet. He said he was ill and out of condition and could not enter.

Bobby, Fed Up on Golf, Will Quit Until Amateur

COLUMBUS, O., July 10.—[Special.]—Bobby Jones' total of 293 in the national open golf championship was five strokes over par for the 72 holes.

After he had finished Bobby said: "I don't care whether I win the tournament or not—I played that last nine in 35 strokes, one under par, and I'm satisfied with that."

Jones probably will retire from competition until the national amateur tournament at the Baltusrol club, Short Hills, N. J., next September. He's dead tired of golf, galleries, pars, birdies, and everything that goes with championships. Besides this ennui, he has a job in Atlanta that needs attention.

Bob's 71 and 73 today were the fruits of his determination to show that the terrible 79 he had Friday was a fluke. He really hated that round.

Mehlhorn lost the lead at the end of the third round. He took sixes on the first and last holes of the morning round, and sixes are expensive in a medal play championship.

MacDonald Smith crashed through with a 34—34—68 on his morning round today. He, too, was suffering from the humiliation of a bad round, an 82, he had Thursday, and was just shooting the equal of the course record to prove he's a good golfer

Jones won the national open title first in 1921 at Inwood, after a tie with Bob Cruickshank. Last year, at Worcester, Bob was tied with Willie MacFarlane at the end of the 72 holes, and those two had to play 36 additional holes before they could come to a decision. MacFarlane won by one stroke on the 108th hole.

Bobby Jones Wins U.S. Golf Title with 293

wonder they're still applaudnig down there on the grass.

The story of the victory can be told from the twelfth hole of the final round to the finish. But first let it be said Bobby Jones is suffering from too much competition. He was ill after breakfast, but got a 71 in the morning, one stroke under par, despite the illness. He went out in the afternoon and shot a 38 on the first nine, three strokes over par.

That first nine had thrills. The gallery, dividing its attention between Bobby and Turnesa, saw the two play the first eight holes exactly alike, stroke for stroke. Turnesa, who was three strokes ahead, was fighting to keep that lead. Bob was fighting to overcome it and not having any luck.

4 Down, 9 Holes to Play.

On the short ninth, a 140 yard hole, Bob got into a trap and lost another stroke. He took a 4. Turnesa, who has preceeded him by three holes, had got a 3 on that hole.

So Jones started out on that last nine four strokes behind the young Italian-American pro. They played the tenth and eleven in par fours. Then Turnesa started to break.

On that hole Joe took a six. It's a 5 par, 546 yards long. The rough added the extra stroke to Turnesa's card.

Jones coming along a little later to that hole made a terrific drive and a terrific brassie shot, getting on the green in 2. He was down in 2 putts for a birdie 4. Thus he picked up two of the four strokes.

On the thirteenth Turnesa putted away another stroke and took a 5. It's a 4 hole. Jones followed with a par 4, being on in 2 and down in 2 putts. They played the next two holes in fours. Jones was now one stroke behind.

Bobby Squares It on 16th.

On the sixteenth, 413 yards, par 4, Turnesa bounced his second over the green, was ten feet over on his recovery from the trap and took two putts. That was a 5. Bob followed with a perfect drive, a well played iron to the green and two putts for a par 4. The tournament was squared right there.

On the short, 135 yard seventeenth, Turnesa's ball bounced over the green into the trap. The best he could get was a 4. Jones played a perfect mashie niblick shot to the green and was down in two putts. For the first time in the tournament he was out in front by one slim stroke.

As Jones worked through the crowd to the eighteenth tee he was informed that Turnesa had finished with a 4. The eighteenth is a 430 yard par 5, but an easy birdie hole for a great golfer. And Turnesa had got his birdie.

Jones really laid into that tee shot. It stopped 320 yards from the tee and right in the middle of the fairway. He took a No. 4 iron for the next stroke and hoisted the ball to the green, 15 feet from the cup. He dropped the ball into the hole with his second putt, for a birdie 4, and was one stroke ahead of Turnesa. He almost sank that first putt, but a 4 was enough to win.

While the gallery cheered, Jones walked over to his wife and mother and they all slipped through the assembly into the clubhouse.

Meantime Bill Mehlhorn was still out. He had a chance, a slim chance. Bill had shot a 39 on the first nine. A 35, one stroke under par on the back nine, would have tied Jones. But Mehlhorn took a 7 on the long twelfth and was out of the race. He finished with a 39 for a total of 297.

College Track Athletes Compete, Southtown Meet

Many university athletes will compete in the Southtown A. C. track and field meet which will be held on the Southtown field, 74th and Aberdeen streets, this afternoon. Paul Harrington of Notre Dame, champion pole vaulter, Judge, also of Notre Dame, winner of the collegiate mile on Soldiers' field recently, and Dan Lyon of the University of Illinois, are some of the well known athletes who have entered the meet. James Fahey, world's record holder of the three standing broad jumps, will compete in his favorite sport.

PASADENA A. C. WINS WOMEN'S TRACK GAMES

Helen Filky Is First in Hurdle Race.

Philadelphia, July 10.—(AP)—Lillian Copeland, of the Pasadena Athletic and Country club, today defied the rays of a torrid sun and won three championships in the A. A. U. women's track and field meet, enabling her club to retain its team title, won last year.

In landing the three individual championships, Miss Copeland established three new American records. She put the 8 pound shot 38 feet 3¾ inches, tossed the javelin 112 feet 5½ inches and threw the discus 101 feet one inch. The discus record was established by her yesterday in the trials.

A fourth American women's record was shattered when Catherine Maguire of the Paterson, N. J., Recreation center, leaped 4 feet 11¼ inches in the high jump. The former record was 4 feet 10⅞ inches, made by Katherine Lee, Chicago, 1923.

Pasadena Wins Title.

Through the ability of Miss Copeland to garner points the Pasadena club won the team trophy with 26 points. Midwest Athletic club of Chicago was second with 24 points; Northern California Athletic club, competing under protest, was third with 16 points. Other clubs scored as follows: Toronto Ladies' club, 13; Paterson Recreation club, 10; Coliseum A. C., St. Louis, 8; Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia, 4; Brooklyn Edison, Boston Swimming and Prudential A. C., Newark, N. J., 3 each; V. V. V. Girls' club, Detroit, 2, and McGill university, 1.

Rosa M. Grosse of the Toronto Ladies' club won the 100 yard dash by defeating Miss Helen Filkey of the Midwest Athletic club, Chicago, in the fast time of :11 8-10. Miss Filkey, however, was an easy victor in the 60 yard hurdles, her time being 8 7-10 seconds.

Elta Cartwright of the Northern Athletic club captured the fifty yard dash for the second straight year in 6 1-10 seconds.

Relay Mark Tied.

The 440 yard relay race was won by the Toronto Ladies' club. In negotiating the distance in 51 seconds the girls equaled the world record for the distance. The same quartet equaled the record in the trials yesterday. Pasadena Athletic club was second and Northern California third.

Frances Keddie of Northern California was the winner of the 220 yard dash. Nellie Todd of Chicago had to jump 16 feet 7⅝ inches to beat Helen Filkey, her teammate, in the broad jump.

CAPABLANCA 1ST, MARCOZY 2D IN CHESS TOURNEY

Lake Hopatong, N. J., July 10.—[Special.]—At the end of four rounds, with a total of eight games completed, Jose R. Capabalanca of Havana is still in the lead in the Pan-American chess tournament at the Hotel Alamac. The world champion drew a hard fought game with United States Champion Frank J. Marshall of New York, who, after being a pawn down, played a courageous uphill battle and was rewarded with a draw after 43 moves.

Geza Marcozy had a splendid chance to forge ahead, but as luck would have it he met his first defeat at the hands of Abraham Kupchik, champion of the Manhattan Chess club. Marcozy dropped to second place and he is followed by Marshall, Kupchik and Lasker in the order named.

In his game with Marshall, Capablanca adopted the Zukertort opening, against which Marshall countered with an irregular line of play. On the twenty-second move Capablanca gave up a pawn, but after an exchange of queens got two back in return. He then felt he had the upper hand, but Marshall laid siege to his weak queen's pawn and finally took possession of it.

German Net Stars to Play Yankees and Rebuild Sport

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 10.—After returning to the foreground on the international athletic field at the meeting in London last week, Germany is trying to find its bearings in international tennis competitions. Its sportsmen have organized an international tournament, with the American champions, Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey, representing the stars and stripes, in Berlin for the first time since the war.

Germany expects defeat, although it still pins some hopes on its champion, Froitzheim, tennis partner of the former crown prince. Froitzheim announces that he will not take part in the tournament with the Americans because he would not be allowed to use the brand of balls to which he is accustomed. The Dunlop company is helping to organize the tournament, but on a strict understanding that only Dunlop balls will be used on the courts.

Froitzheim opposed this agreement and withdrew from the tournament. Many believe this is an alibi to avoid a sensational defeat and great indignation over Froitzheim's defection is voiced in all German sports circles.

ARMY AND NAVY PICK QUARTERS FOR TILT HERE

Parade Down Avenue Before Game.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Commander Jonas Ingram, athletic director and football coach at the U. S. Naval academy, yesterday completed plans for the housing of the 1,800 midshipmen who will accompany the Navy eleven to Chicago to meet the Army on Soldiers' field Nov. 27.

The middies will be quartered at the new Palmer house and will arrive the day before the struggle. Upon their arrival they will be given liberty until noon of the day of the game. At this hour the future admirals will assemble at the Michigan avenue bridge to march down the boulevard to the stadium.

The squad, composed of 62 men, intrainers and assistant managers, will trainers and assistant managers will arrive Thanksgiving day. Arrangements have been made to put the team up at the Windemere hotel. Practice will be held on Stagg field on the day before the contest.

Army Quarters Selected.

The Army eleven will be quartered at the South Shore Country club and the headquarters for the corps of 2,000 cadets will be the Blackstone hotel. The cadets will join the middies in the parade down Michigan avenue. The procession will be headed by bands of both institutions and dignitaries of both branches of the service.

President Coolidge is expected to attend the great service gridiron classic. The chief executive will sit on the Navy side of the field for the first half and on the Army side during the last two periods. Secretaries of war nad navy will also be on hand in addition to generals and admirals.

Temporary Seats Planned.

Kelly has announced there will be no activity on the gridiron of any kind for two weeks preceding the game. During this time laborers will put the field in the best possible playing condition.

According to Mr. Kelly, 100,000 seats will be available for this interesting struggle. The south end of the structure will be completed for the police games in September, while temporary bleachers will be erected at all places of vantage in order to give as many as possible an opportunity to witness the game and drills by cadets and middies.

ZACK WHEAT JR. HOPES TO PLAY IN DADDY'S FIELD

New York, July 10—[Special.]—When the Dodgers started their present road tour they were accompanied by Zack Wheat Jr., and he is always to be found close to his famous daddy. "Sure, I'm going to be a ball player," predicted young Zack today, "No, I'm not going to be a pitcher. I'm going to be a left fielder. Pitchers get hit by batted balls, and that's why I don't like that job. I want to be in left field, where I can catch batted balls, like my daddy does."

Upon further questioning, young Zack made it known that he is not strictly a left handed batter, like his father.

"I can hit either right or left handed," Zack said, as he swung arms first from the left side of an imaginary plate and then from the right. Zack Jr., will be 8 years old July 16. Ten years from now he may launch his major league career, and if he does, he could not do better than try to match it with that of his father's.

TAYLOR, RYAN SIGN FOR BOUT HERE JULY 24

Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., and Tommy Ryan of McKeesport, Pa., will meet in one of the ten round bouts of the boxing show to be staged by Jim Mullen at the White Sox park on the afternoon of July 24. They will scale 120 pounds. They met at Louisville on the night before the Kentucky Derby and Taylor had a hard time winning the popular verdict by a small margin.

In another ten rounder, Johnny Adams of San Bernardino, Cal., will trade punches with Billy Petrolle of Fargo, N. D. Adams, who is under the management of Tom Jones, won a referee's decision over Ace Hudkins of Omaha on the coast and held Sammy Mandell, the lightweight champion, to a draw.

Promoter Mullen, who is in New York, will be back tomorrow and will announce the remainder of the card. The local promoter declared over the long distance telephone last night that he expects to sign Paul Berlenbach, the world's light heavyweight champion, for a bout in Chicago next month.

TUNNEY WANTS TO FIGHT JACK IN CHICAGO RING

Passes Through City En Route East.

Expressing a desire to meet Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight title in Chicago some time in September, Gene Tunney, the Fighting Marine, who has been signed by Promoter Tex Rickard to meet the champion, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way from California to New York.

Tunney, who has just completed a picture in California, looked in excellent shape. He said he weighs about 195 pounds, and with one month of intensive training will be ready for Dempsey. Gene stated further he has been keeping in shape on the coast, where he has boxed and done considerable road work.

Wants Battle Here.

Tunney does not know much about the proposed match with Dempsey. He was advised to start east by Manager Billy Gibson as soon as his picture was completed. Tunney is disappointed that the New York boxing commission ruled against his match with Dempsey, but he is positive the contest will be decided in either Jersey City or Chicago.

"While it is not for me to name the place where I will meet Dempsey, I should like nothing better than to face the champion in a Chicago ring," Tunney said yesterday morning between trains. "Chicago will be the greatest boxing city in the world if the game is conducted properly. A match for the heavyweight title would place the city on the map and the fact we can go to a referee's decision is a strong point in favor of this city. If New York and Chicago are out of the running, then Jersey City is the natural spot for the contest.

Sure of Victory.

"I feel sure I can beat Dempsey. All I must do is to get past the first four or five rounds. I realize Dempsey will knock me down early in the fray if he connects, but I believe I am clever enough to stay away him long enough for his punches to lose their sting."

Jack Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey and who is now looking after the interests of Mickey Walker, the dethroned world's welterweight champion, is in Chicago on his way to the coast. Kearns is positive the Dempsey-Tunney match will be held in Jersey City.

No matter where the fight takes place, Kearns asserted he will attach Dempsey's end to receive his share. Kearns will remain here for a few days before proceeding to the coast. Teddy Hayes, trainer of Walker, is with Dempsey's former manager.

RACINE HERE TODAY.

Racine, Wis., of the Wisconsin-Illinois league will appear today against the Logan Squares at Callahan's park, Kedzie and Elston.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question H. E. Loomis, 7147 Constance avenue, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Which would you rather see, a good boxing match or a horse race?

Where Asked.

Wilson avenue, at Broadway.

The Answers.

James Crandall, Des Plaines, Ill., Board of Trade worker—Boxing has been my favorite sport for many years. While I also attend horse race meets occasionally, I do not get the thrill from seeing the ponies gallop around the track with dollar signs before their eyes that I do from a boxing show. And another thing. To enjoy horse racing one has to be a gambler. I do not believe there are many people who bet on the outcome of a ring match, but I do know that to run a track it is necessary to have your patrons lay bets if you wish to make a success of the meeting.

Al Campion, 1733 North Lawndale avenue, laundry work—I have no preference. A boxing match would suit me just as well as a horse race. However, I might say I get more of a thrill in a sporting way from boxing than I do from horse racing. When I attend a turf meet I usually bet, and that sometimes spoils my afternoon, because I invariably lose.

F. N. Chamberlin, Cubs' park concessionaire—A horse race is my selection. The turf event seldom is void of thrills. From the time the ponies leave the barrier the crowd is taken to a new world, where it finds nothing but thrills, yelling uproariously until the winner is posted on the board, which tells you whether you have won or lost.

Pinkie Rascop, 3009 Parnell avenue, usher—Give me a good boxing match any time. Unless you are a "dyed in the wool" gambler you can get no thrill from horse racing. Betting is the major factor in that sport. Seldom does one bet on the outcome of a boxing match, his only interest in the contest being purely a sporting one. There are two kinds of sport, and horse racing is the other one.

Bobby Dorr, 1053 Waveland avenue, landscape gardener—A boxing match, of course. It's a great thing to attend a show where a brawny champion is fighting against some newcomer to retain his laurels in his line of endeavor. It's just one thrill after another.

Sarazen Wins Empire City Handicap

New York, July 10.—(AP)—Sarazen today raced to victory in the Mount Vernon handicap, feature event for 3 year olds and upward at the Empire City track. Senaldo finished second and Single Foot third.

Sarazen's victory marked a comeback for the erratic son of High Time-Rush Box. He was played heavily and justified the confidence by stepping over the mile and seventy yards in 1:42 4-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the track record.

The Whirl stakes were captured by Charade, closely followed by Witchmount and Fantastic in that order. The time for the 5½ furlong event for 2 year olds was 1:06.

Washington Park Racing Notes

THE first stable to be sent to the new Lincoln Fields course, near Crete, was the extensive Johnson N. Camden string. The horses which are to be raced at Washington park will be taken by Van from one track to the other.

The Keeneland Stud stable of Kentucky, in which Chicagoans are said to be extensively interested, will be shipped from Latonia to Chicago Monday and will be quartered at Lincoln Fields. The string includes Mike McLuge and Chittagong.

"Within two years, Chicago racing will be the most important in America," Luke A. Cassidy, general manager of the Laurel track in Maryland and of the Miami, Fla., track, declared yesterday, after a trip of inspection over Washington park and Lincoln Fields.

SLIPPER'S SPOON SHOT BURIES ITSELF ON GREEN

And Spoils His Chance for a 3 at Illinois.

"I must warn you before you start out that I will probably break your hearts on the first hole," said James Alexander Walcott Breeze, better known as Slipper, to three auditors at the tenth tee of the Illinois Golf club course in Glencoe yesterday. "I am one good golfer. I'm not bragging: just warning you."

The three auditors were Floyd Johnston, assistant professional at the club, and two members, Fred Franklin and L. H. Puls. They were polite.

"We're glad to have this information," said Mr. Franklin in a soft voice. "You see we're sort of used to having our hearts broken out here. This is where Al Espinosa plays, and he's a great shooter."

"Well, you just watch me," and Slipper Breeze prepared to drive.

Tenth Doglegged Hole.

Now the tenth at Illinois is 440 yards long. It is a doglegged hole, curving slightly to the left. There is a small lake on the left of the fairway, short of the green. Traps practically surround the green, although there is a good opening if you come down the middle.

Slipper drove. The shot was hooked to the left 230 yards from the tee. The others drove down the middle.

Approaching his ball, Slipper discovered that it had hooked a bit farther than he thought. He had a difficult shot left. He would have to carry over the foot of that small lake to make the green. The left trap would also have to be carried. In fact, he'd have to carry to the green and the cup was to the left.

Ball Sticks on Green.

"Well, I break their hearts right here," said Breeze to himself. "Might as well here as later."

He took his spoon. He struck a full blow. The club head met the ball squarely and the pellet sailed away. It went high. It seemed to cover the pin. It soared over the water and in its descent seemed to be dropping straight for the hole. There was a soft thud as it landed two feet over the hole.

Then the unexpected happened. The ball stuck in the turf. There was no back jump. It was half buried in the bent.

"Hell," shouted Slipper at the top of his voice.

The others, gentlemen that they are, said nothing. They got on the green with their second shots and putted close with their third. They were up with Slipper ready to grab fours. Slipper had a chance for a three but his ball was buried. Slipper took a midiron and pushed at the buried pellet. It jumped out of its bed and past the hole. Slipper threw the midiron into the lake, then he threw the spoon in. Then he picked up his ball and threw it in.

"I had a chance for a birdie three and the ball had to be buried," he stormed. "That's a terrible break."

Messrs. Johnston, Puls and Franklin said nothing. Next week Slipper will try another hole on another Chicago course. He has a great time. Anybody who is pure fiction always has a great time, and Slipper, as you probably know, is just a fable.

CONSTANT DRILL MAKES ROMMEL GOOD FIELDER

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Ed Rommel, the A's knuckle ball pitcher and an addict of red sleeves, is considered one of the best fielding moundsmen in the league. It was not always that Ed had this distinction. He has learned the art of grabbing grounders by long practice. He is waiting outside Shibe park for the gates to open every morning the team is at home. He puts in more exercise than any other of Connie's athletes. Second base is his favorite spot. That is where Waite Hoyt likes to frolic during early workouts. Waite is one of the Yankees' best fielding pitchers and one of their hardest workers. His kinked elbow, now under expert treatment, will soon be repaired to permit him to get into action early during the second invasion of the western clubs.

PITTSBURGH NOW BOASTS 2 SETS OF RING BROTHERS

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Brothers are by no means rare in the ring, but the Jimmy Bronson-Lou Brown troupe boasts something entirely new in the fistic profession. With Joe Katkish, the present national amateur bantam champion, turning professional, the Bronson-Brown aggregation boasts of two sets of brothers, the Zivics and the Katkishes.

Yacht Club Postpones Special Trophy Races

Light winds caused the postponement of the special trophy races for R class boats which were scheduled to be held by the Chicago Yacht club off Belmont harbor yesterday. Although the boats raised sail and attempted to race, the judges, after a short conference, decided that it would be impossible for the yachts to cover the course, which measures twelve nautical miles.

Bass Seek Out Shady Spot in Heat of Day

BY BOB BECKER.

As soon as hot weather sets in, bass fishermen find that the wise bronzebacks like their shady spots and cool loafing places just as much as humans do. Then bassing becomes more intricate and only those anglers who know the habits of the fish and their preferences are going to come home with good strings of fish.

The small mouth bass, the more exclusive and particular member of the bass tribe, shows a marked partiality for deep cold lakes and clear streams. He prefers a rocky, shady or pebbly bottom to a soft or muddy one and this species is quick to retire to deep holes as soon as warm weather arrives.

If you tackle a small mouth bass lake in midsummer look for fish over sunken ledges where the lake bottom takes a quick drop.

It's almost as cool as the inside of an icebox down there, and how the big bass do enjoy such a spot when the sun is blistering hot. Also, look for fish on sand bars where weed beds are providing cover; on rocky bars which run out from shore, or on rocky reefs which extend from an island in the lake.

If you want to fish during the day for the bronzebacks that are cooling their fins in the depths, you'll have to go down for them. Put a chunk of lead 18 or 20 inches ahead of your small plug, pork rind spinner lure, real or artificial minnow, or what have you, and then cruise up and down the rocky reef, the bar or around the submerged weed beds. A few summers ago we saw a cane pole fisherman make a killing on a weed bed while bait casters were drawing blanks because they did not know where to look for the fish or how to get them.

This fisherman anchored in a weed bed over a sand bar that was 8 to 12 feet below the surface. He dropped his live minnow in the holes in the weed bed and at the edge of them, and what a string of fish he did get.

Hunnefield Is Star Rookie in Majors Now

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The gents who gum shoe through the bushes in quest of "ivory" for the Major leagues sometimes err in their judgment. Some have been known to tout a peach when in reality it was a lemon. Others have been known to get the wrong slant and put the lemon label on what was destined to become a peach.

It was an error such as the latter that made Bill "Honey Boy" Hunnefield, a comparative unknown, slide into White Stockings and practically overnight become about the most widely advertised kid shortstop in either major.

But this sudden ascension to fame hasn't surprised the young athlete in the least. He is what you might term the essence of confidence.

Reds Pass Him Up.

Now for the error of the ivory hunter, whereby Hunnefield was dropped into the lap of the White Sox. Last year the Cincinnati team made a first payment of $5,000 on the lad to the Portland, Ore., team. Before completing the transaction the club decided to send an emissary for a final look. The expert made the journey and wired back something about not sending good money after bad.

What adds interest to the Hunnefield plunge into a regular major league job is that he had Manager Ed Collins fooled during the spring trip. Collins, weighing the cockiness of the player against his skill, couldn't decide whether "Honey Boy" was just a fresh kid or a real star. The answer came many weeks later when Bill Kamm was hurt and Hunnefield had to play third. He showed 'em something, both in the field and at bat, so when Kamm recovered there was nothing else to do than to move our hero to short. He's been there since and in no apparent danger of being hoisted out.

Signs with Macks.

In the spring of 1923 Hunnefield went south with the Macks and made such a wholesome impression that he was farmed to Montreal for seasoning. Nothing could stop him. He stole bases until they threatened him with injunctions and hit the ball hard. In the fall his good work forced the Athletics to recall him.

Because of Mack's purchase of Sammy Hale it was necessary to send something to Portland in return so Bill was picked. He made the journey cross the continent only to be shipped right back to the Williamsport, Pa., team. He was too good for that crowd so Portland recalled him and last season he almost ran the league breathless with fifty-two steals.

Delaney, Paul Seek K. O. Win in Title Bout

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Paul Berlenbach, light heavyweight champion, and Jack Delaney, the challenger and his principal rival, continue to thump away at each other with sufficient vim to keep a goodly number of boxing enthusiasts flocking to their respective camps. The bout has aroused more interest than any fight since the Dempsey-Firpo encounter, and promises to draw a record crowd to Ebbets' field on the evening of July 15.

Both fighters have been going at it heavily during the week, and are approaching their customary fighting speed and weight. Berlenbach has come along so rapidly that his manager decided to give him Saturday off because the champion, while not in any danger of going stale, was clearly showing that he had neared "the edge."

Champion Takes It Easy.

Berlenbach took things easy Friday afternoon, going only six rounds instead of the customary ten and not exerting himself during the shortened workout. He merely lobbed them over, and the recipients of his pulled punches seemed to be glad of the short respite.

Delaney, contrary to the champion, put in his most strenuous day of training. He went four rounds with his chief sparring mate, Jack Adams, and gave and took as much punishment as he is likely to see in any four rounds he will fight. The rugged Adams took everything the champion threw at him, and then had enough strength left to hand Delaney some good stiff ones.

After Friday's rehearsal, the challenger moved his camp out into the open air at Shaughnessy's camp on the Housatonic. The stuffy gymnasium air was having an injurious effect upon the fighter's lungs, his manager thought.

Fans Keyed Up.

Meanwhile the fans are besieging the ticket offices for pasteboards. Promoter Humbert Fugazy has ordered the office in the Woolworth building to remain open every night until 7:30, and the gates at Ebbets field are to receive visitors, interested in purchasing tickets, all day and every day until the fight has been fought.

This will be the third meeting of the two battlers. Berlenbach won their late encounter after taking a count twice in the fourth round, while in the earlier bout, staged soon after the champion had entered the ring, Delaney sent him down and out in the fourth round.

Because of his clean victory in one bout and the tough fight he put up in the later fracas, Delaney is a slight favorite over the champion.

The New National Headquarters of the B. P. O. E.

Wednesday, July 14 [at 4 p. m.] Chicago will witness one of the most impressive ceremonies it has seen for many a day—the dedication of the $3,000,000 Soldier's Memorial, erected by the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks as a glorious tribute to the 70,000 members of that admirable Order who served in the World War. It is expected that this momentous event will attract to Chicago over 250,000 of the more than 900,000 members of the Brotherhood in the 1410 Elk Lodges distributed throughout America. Our city will be entertained to a vast parade of the Order on the afternoon of July 15.

New Motor Demand Called Acid Test for Flivver King

Industry Speculates on Ford Actions in Adverse Tide.

DETROIT, Mich., July 10.—[Special.]—With Ford production reduced from a peak of more than 9,000 cars a year ago to an estimated 5,000 new cars a day, and a prosperity market demanding new and more expensive automobiles for an exacting and experienced motor public, Henry Ford has shifted his attention from the factory production line to the open sales field.

Industrial experts, who remain as much in the dark concerning plans of the flivver mills as the average layman, believe that the great Ford properties are facing the first big revision in their history. They are watching keenly each move in the interesting Ford game of creating a new sales demand instead of filling an almost unlimited demand and combating the flood of cheap car competition and changing public requirements that has forced the industrial issue.

These observers, some of them heads of other motor companies, know that for 12 months flivver sales have been on the decline while the national demand for all automobiles has reached its highest mark. Monthly reports of practically every other producing company show gains of from 10 to 100 per cent over like periods a year ago.

They know that sweeping reductions have been ordered and made in the overhead costs of both Ford making and merchandising.

They have been advised that dealers throughout the country are reducing their stock on hand as fast as possible on factory orders and with the aid of efficiency experts, and that, although Ford plants are operating five days a week, workmen are averaging but four days a week or less.

They know that recent concessions, such as the changing of body styles, introduction of color, enamel and lacquer finishes and price reductions have not materially stemmed the backwater of diminishing Ford demand.

The rest is theory and rumor, neither affirmed nor denied by reticent Ford officials.

One theory is that the development of time payments for automobiles has made it possible for people with small incomes to buy and operate higher priced cars than the standard flivver and to replace their original Ford purchases not with cars of the same make but with mounts from the big field of middle priced automobiles which carry a bigger thrill as personal possessions. Another theory is that people all over the country have more ready money than ever before and can afford to buy more expensive homes, higher priced pleasures and higher priced cars and that the national improvement in highways has changed the need of rugged, rough and ready qualities in the average automobile to a desire for beauty and ease in personal transportation. Still another theory is that the mass of America's "first car" public, with some 20,000,000 automobiles in operation, is just about exhausted.

Rumors concerning a new Ford model to be added to the regular line have persisted over more than six months, but without official confirmation. The most persistent predicts the introduction of an entirely new six cylinder car from the Ford plants to meet competition. At present the plants are producing a great number of vehicles, especially trucks, and the latter are reported to be selling faster than they can be produced.

The first real competition recognized by the big Ford organization came at the beginning of 1926 when General Motors corporation — powerful and willing to take a wallop if necessary—began an active campaign with Chevrolet prices opposed to those of Ford. Production and sales reports issued by this corporation indicate that its competitive efforts were more successful than had been anticipated. Since that time the competitive battle in the low price field has been expanded with the entrance of John N. Willis and his European type small car. There is a promise of other entries into this price field with traffic congestion increasing and the need for smaller cars impressed on the minds of the motoring public.

With the vast resources in money and raw materials at the command of the Ford organization, industrial heads believe that his competitive battle will be waged without quarter. It is their idea that, no matter what the plans are, the motoring public may expect to benefit when the smoke clears away following the fracas.

Tribune Tours

XIII.—VACATION TOUR AROUND THE LAKE

Cheap Accident.

When an automobile struck George Bates as he was crossing a street in Middletown, N. Y., he accepted 50 cents in full settlement, declaring he was not hurt.

MAKE a note in your log book to treat yourself to this ideal week's journey before the summer is over. It is one of the finest drives available in the Chicago territory and, this year for the first time, one that can be made over all improved roads.

From Chicago the route leads around the south end of Lake Michigan on connected pavements which continue north to Benzonia. From Benzonia to Mackinaw City pavement and good gravel carry on. Good gravel and pavement take the route on from Sault Ste. Marie and the famous Wisconsin gravel and paved roads bring it south and home.

Pete De Paolo and Harry Hartz Lead Speed Title Race

It's Still Anybody's Crown in Big Circuit.

WITH the close of the first half of the 1926 automobile racing season, Harry Hartz and Peter De Paolo still are leading in the race for the year's championship, which is awarded by the contest board of the American Automobile association, the arbiter of the principal speed events of the nation, to the possessor of the highest number of points gained in the season's races.

Hartz and De Paolo still hold a commanding lead, the contest board revealed in a statement yesterday, but at least four others are in striking distance.

Among these is a new comer in the first ten list. He is Dave Lewis, and his advent was most sudden. He had not a single point prior to June 12. Then came the race at Altoona, Pa., a 250-mile speed classic seen by 45,000 thrilled fans—and Lewis won it. Finishing first in that event was good for 500 points.

Hartz is first with 1,740 points, with De Paolo, a comparatively close second with 1,265. Frank Lockhart, who won the 500-mile speedway epic at Indianapolis on Memorial Day, is third with 800; Bennie Hill fourth with 587; Earl Devore fifth with 535, and Lewis sixth with 500.

The four other of the first ten, the contest board figures revealed, rank as follows:

Norman Batten, who was second at Altoona, seventh with 390 points; Bob McDonogh eighth with 347 points; Fred Comer ninth with 313, and Frank Elliott tenth with 252 points.

Whether De Paolo, who won the championship in 1925, and Harry Hartz can hold to the lead they now enjoy will, to a considerable extent, be determined when they contest the speed event at Salem, Mass. If Hartz is able to add materially to his total he will have a most comfortable lead, but if De Paolo should annex most of the points, he probably will forge ahead again as leader. But, on the other hand, should some other in the first five or six leaders win, a third and most formidable contestant for the honors of 1926 would immediately loom on the horizon.

Because of this, both automobile race fans, who watch the standings of drivers as closely as baseball "bugs" attend the standings of the major leagues, and the drivers, all of whom covet the beautiful diamond set medal awarded each year by the A. A. A., embematic of the championship, are awaiting the Salem race with unusual interest.

WORK BENCH WISDOM

THE DYNAMOMETER.

BY F. E. EDWARDS.
[Chief Engineer Automotive Testing Laboratory.]

AN automobile is no better than its motor, because, being a means of transportation, it is entirely dependent on its motor for propulsion power. The efficient automobile is the one which delivers the most power proportionate to the motor size on the least amount of fuel. Consequently, a motor car that delivers its power economically and without any knocks from loose bearings or other sources may be considered to have a very good and efficient power plant.

To determine the power of an automobile by driving it around the city is very unsatisfactory, unless you have a very step hill to climb. By climbing a certain hill in high gear at a certain speed, this might be accepted as a standard, and even then the human element has its influence. In the early days of power producing machines horsepower was measured by what was known as a prony brake, which consisted of either a rope or blocks of wood around a drum, this rope or the blocks of wood acting as a brake, being operated by a lever with a scale attached, so that the number of pounds drag on the brake could be measured. This device would enable the operator to measure the horsepower of any machine, but it was crude.

About 1908 an electrical device called a dynamometer was invented, and has superseded other methods to the extent that it is now used in automobile factory, laboratories, college laboratories, and the bureau of standards. This dynamometer measures the braking power by a magnetic drag, eliminating the heating and burning effect of the prony brakes, and enables the operator to hold a machine under load for an indefinite period.

In the laboratory there is a shaft with 34 inch drums attached. These drums are set apart the same distance as the tread of a car, and are located in the floor on bearings, so that a car may be driven on with the rear wheels resting on these pulleys. The car is clamped own and can be driven as on the road. The shaft with the pulleys on is conected to the dynamometer so that when the car is driven it rotates the dynamometer. By applying resistance to the dynamometer we can make the car climb the steepest hill possible for it to climb, and at that time measure the horsepower delivered by the motor to the rear wheels to within a fraction of a horsepower. When this is being done we measure the amount of fuel that it takes to deliver that power. This gives an accurate report of the condition of the power plant, transmission, rear axles, and carburetor.

As an illustration of the effect of so-called minor things on the power of a car we can cite the following:

A car was tested on which the horsepower should have been 48.6. On being tested it developed only 35.1 horsepower. The recommendations were to clean and adjust the breaker points and distributor contacts, and renew all spark plugs. It was then measured again, and the reading showed that it developed 54 horsepower.

Slow Up.

Motorists should slow up at all turns in the road, advises the national safety council, which says blind corners are dangerous. When it is impossible to see what is coming around the corner be prepared to stop. Sound your horn as you approach a corner.

Here's a Picture of Saturation in Motor Field

STATING that the present day is the mining camp era of the automobile business, Edward S. Jordan pictured a vast future for that industry, speaking before the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Philadelphia.

The 20,000,000 cars in the United States are but a foretaste of the volume of business that will develop in the rest of the world, in the opinion of Jordan, who is chairman of the advertising committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and in touch with motor developments throughout the world.

"We'll reach the saturation point," he said, "when every family on the face of the globe has a car, and when no car wears out.

"The automobile business has hardly started. There are only 5,000,000 cars abroad compared with the 20,000,000 automobiles in this country. There's an automobile demand that has been accumulating for two thousand years.

"This is still the business for the young man. Don't worry about the big combinations in the business. That's not going to corner the field. You can't corner any business where there's a style element. You can't corner brains and youth and hard work. The big industries know that. They know competition is a good thing, and they welcome it. With this world-wide demand competition will continue, and the business wil grow to proportions as yet hardly dreamed of.

"The home market will continue to dominate for the present, for the street cars are simply incubators for automobile owners."

145,508 Miles of Surfaced Roads Open to Tourists of 1926

NEARLY 18,000 miles of road in the several state highway systems was surfaced in 1925, according to reports received by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture from the state highway departments. In addition, 5,316 miles of earth road was graded and drained according to engineering standards, making a total of 23,152 miles improved during the year, of which a little more than 10,000 miles was constructed with federal aid.

At the end of the year the total surfaced mileage in the state systems had reached 145,508 miles, and there were 32,218 miles of earth road, graded and drained according to engineering standards. The total of 270,654 miles included in the state systems embraces the important roads of the country which have been laid out to serve the needs of the states. It is upon these systems that the important through routes of the federal aid system and the United States highways have been almost entirely laid down.

Business of Car Stealing Called Modern Trust

Motor Leader Warns All Owners Against Thieves.

FEW motorists realize to what an extent the business of automobile stealing has been organized. These are days of trusts and combinations, nor has the underworld been slow to adopt the methods of big business. The traffic in stolen cars is today one of the most lucrative fields of criminal endeavor.

Automobiles are not stolen in a hit-or-miss, haphazard fashion, but by operatives of big syndicates whose resources are as vast and whose capital is as unlimited as those of the bootleggers.

The corporations dealing with stolen cars are without qualms or compunctions of any kind, and will resort to the most desperate means to gain their ends, according to H. H. Brooks, motor executive of Indianapolis.

"It should be remembered that the 'brains' of such a ring often are men, who, had they not had criminal bents, would have been immensely successful in the commercial or professional world," he said yesterday. "In dealing with them, one is dealing with master criminals.

"A large class of used car buyers, of course, take a car on trust. Innocent of any intentional wrong doing, they nevertheless abet the business of automobile theft by failing to investigate before buying a car. It never occurs to them to ask questions, to demand a bill of sale, to inquire into the car's pedigree. Or if they do, they allow the wool to be pulled over their eyes and accept, in some cases, a fake bill of sale. Often they let themselves in for a good deal of trouble.

"There is another class, however, who buy stolen cars knowingly, and even order them in advance, giving specifications and all that. For all you know, somebody may already have put in an order for the very car you are driving today, and one of the salesmen of the syndicate may be following you in his own car as you leave for your office. He will park his car, perhaps, next to yours, make sure you are engaged for the morning, then, with his vest pocket equipment of nippers and pliers that can work miracles even with the most complicated locks, will unlock the car. A moment later he will insert his skeleton keys in the ignition lock, and presently be on his way to the 'service station' where the stolen machine will undergo lightning changes.

"Spare parts will be removed and parts from other cars substituted. The engine number and the serial number will be altered by a set of punches which can easily convert 0 to 8, or 6 to 8, or add a few digits if needed. A few strokes of the paint brush will do the rest. The rightful owner, should he see his car, might recognize something familiar, but would have difficulty in proving it his rightful property.

"Only by checking the generator, steering gear, starter, chassis and engine number can ownership.

"Poor registration laws, indifferent police activity, the mobility of the automobile itself and the winking at shady transactions by those on the borderland of crime are among the elements that tend to make this sinister business so profitable.

"Uniform laws providing for registered bills of sale in every automobile transaction would do much, no doubt, to protect the owner."

News and Views of the Auto Trade

MORE than a score of interesting refinements and improvements are noted in the new Oakland six, to be introduced throughout the country this week as another important addition to the 1926 automobile offerings. Improvements in chassis construction and engine refinements are chief features of the new job, which will be demonstrated in all local sales headquarters.

The general reduction in tire prices, just announced by the B. F. Goodrich company, has restored levels of two years ago according to A. C. Kelly of the Chicago branch. He estimates that the new levels are 25 per cent below the peak prices of last year and that the move eliminates the so-called inflation of recent months.

New high marks in rental car mileage were reported yesterday from the twelve Chicago stations operated by the National Rent-A-Car company. The Chicago organization announced that it has completed arrangements which make it possible for Chicago patrons to rent a car of any of the standard models here, drive it to the west coast or other tourist objectives in the country and turn it in at the terminal station.

Capacity production for the last half of 1926 was announced yesterday by officials of the Auburn Automobile company.

With shipments of 26,943 cars during the first six months of the year, the Hupp corporation yesterday announced all factory records for production and sales had fallen before the peak demand. Both the first and second quarters were the largest in company history.

One of the biggest automobile drive away deliveries on record in Cleveland was staged there the other day when twenty dealers from the Pittsburgh district descended on the Peerless factory and drove away 109 Peerless cars for delivery to their local customers. Practically every model produced by the company was represented in the delivery line.

NOTES REDUCED.

The average note on new cars sold on time was $528 last year, as compared with the average figure of $810 for 1920.

Real and Bootleg Rubber Debate to Feature Meeting

EXPERTS of many nations will discuss the world's rubber problems at an international symposium on raw rubber to be held in connection with the golden jubilee of the American Chemical society in Philadelphia, Sept. 6 to 11.

Officially described in the announcement by Chairman John M. Bierer of Boston as "the biggest event in the history of the society's rubber division," the symposium will deal with new knowledge affecting the results of botanical, chemical, technical, and engineering research in America and abroad.

Leading rubber technologists and executives of the industry will reveal raw rubber developments, including scientific progress in the plantation rubber industry, in wild rubber, South American and African; and in synthetic or artificial rubber, to perfect which commercially scientists of all civilized nations are uniting in a common attack.

Rubber as a national asset, substitutes for rubber, the physical structure of rubber, the examination and testing of rubber, and Guayule rubber, its botany, chemistry, and technology, will be other topics.

A notable feature of the symposium, indicating it was said, the battle that is bound to ensue betwen synthetic rubber and the plantation product, and in which the plant biologist will be the synthesist's chief foe, will be a comparison of the physical properties of raw ruber with those of compound vulcanized rubber.

There is probably some difference of opinion, chemists hold, as to whether or not it can be claimed from the commercial standpoint that crude rubber has been synthesized successfully. During the war as much as 40 tons a month of a product designated as synthetic rubber were manufactured, but the material was said to be satisfactory only for hard rubber articles.

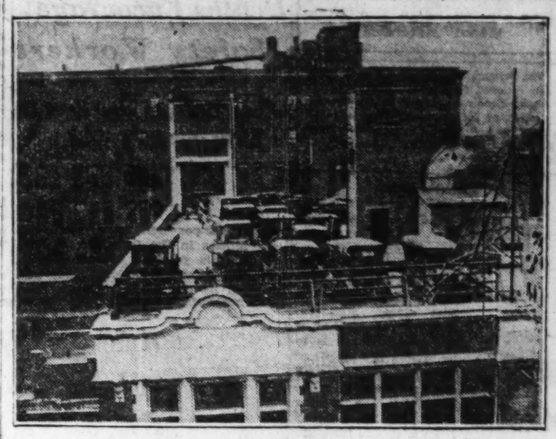
Enormous savings possible through reclaimed rubber will also be discussed. With the advent of the balloon tire the consumption of new rubber has become so great that if even a part of the new rubber can be replaced by new tires immense economies can be effected, it is declared.

Motor Pilgrimage Cited by Advocates of Wide Highways

ANALYSIS of the smooth flowing Eucharistic congress traffic to Mundelein, say highway officials, unquestionably shows that it was the elimination of road intersections and the avoidance of railroad grade crossings that kept the traffic moving. Thus their belief that congestion is caused by narrow roads, intersections, and grade crossings was borne out.

Parallel 18 foot traffic lanes, or a continuous pavement 40 feet wide, with additional widths at road intersections and the elimination of railroad grade crossings, appear as the answer to congestion on all roads in and out of large centers of population.

ONE PLACE TO PARK



Roof space may soon be sold at a premium in congested quarters of large cities. Here is one of the popular parking spaces used by car owners in Cincinnati, where a garage owner has taken advantage of congestion, a flat roof, and a service elevator. [Photo from Underwood & Underwood.]

Safety Glass.

Safety glass which does not fragmentize when hit is now being manufactured in America. This glass has long been used in England, where it is compulsory under the law in many localities and where many automobile manufacturers supply it as standard equipment. It is used both in windshields and windows of cars.

No Blind Spots.

Automotive engineers have succeeded in reducing the blind spot in closed cars to a minimum. This has been accomplished in the all-steel body, where pillar posts supporting the top can be made one-third the size of wood posts without sacrifice of strength. In many cases this increases the driver's view of the road more than twenty per cent.

Yankee Doodles Too Patriotic for Canadian Allies

AS a result of investigation following representations from official sources, the American Automobile association has issued a strong warning against the practice of indiscriminate waving of the Stars and Stripes from American cars touring in Canada.

This practice, the national motoring body asserted, has caused needless irritation, hurt Canadian sensibilities and has already resulted in some untoward incidents. Canadian officials, said the statement, while desirous in every way of promoting international tourist traffic, even to the extent of being less strict in the case of American tourists, are nevertheless apprehensive over the flag waving complex of visiting Americans.

This flag waving, which has been accompanied by inexcusable acts of irresponsibility upon the part of the thoughtless type of drivers of American cars, has resulted in situations which have caused concern to both the Canadian and United States governments.

Commenting on the situation and pointing out that probably three million American tourists will go into Canada this year for periods of twenty-four hours or longer, the association urged American car owners either to abstain from displaying the flag while in Canada or to carry the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack in conjunction.

PONTIAC SIX

CHIEF · OF · THE · SIXES

The Pontiac Six won instant acceptance—first as a quality car and then as a car at a price made possible by the gigantic resources and purchasing power at the disposal of a division of General Motors.

Entirely disregarding price, the Pontiac Six would be an outstanding car by the grace of its Fisher body and the smartness of its Duco finish, by the size, power, and flexibility of its engine, by the exceptional ruggedness and "heft" of every unit, from the dashing radiator cap to the tail light—

—but a price of $825 literally throws this high-quality Six into bold and impressive relief against the entire industry.

Great State Parks Meet Demand of Motor Population

Conference Wants Land Along All Main Highways.

This is the last of a series of articles describing the millions of acres of state parks that now spread away near the garage door of every American motorist.

In Illinois Old Salem park, where Lincoln lived as a young man; Starved Rock park near La Salle, and preserves along the Illinois and Rock rivers draw thousands of vacation drivers every spring, summer and fall. In Indiana Riley's "Old Swimmin Hole," the Dunes and the "Limberlost," Turkey Run park and areas in beautiful Brown county are compelling tourist objectives. In Iowa, 38 scenic spots have been preserved to all time. These include glacial lakes in the north and the southernmost stand of white pine in the country, a great lake lotus bed and bits of the primeval prairie. In Michigan is Mackinac island, site of the old French trading post and the place where Edward Everett Hale wrote "The Man Without a Country," in addition to 52 other scenic spots. In Wisconsin and Minnesota a score of parks have been set aside for posterity, including Itaska lake, headwaters of the Mississippi; and in Missouri the Ozark mountain parks will be recreational grounds forever.

THE development of national parks and forests, beginning about thirty years ago, while providing the country with magnificent federal preserves, was also stimulating to the various states in causing public officials and philanthropic citizens to provide state reservations of relatively adequate size and service. The invention of the automobile, and its quick development in reliable and low priced forms, which made it possible for almost every American family to own one, was also a powerful influence in the establishment and extension of state park systems. Tourists going to the west for summer trips to the Yellowstone, Mount Rainier, Yosemite and the Grand Cañon, came back home and asked why their states could not have something like these national preserves, in each of the states, so far as natural resources permitted.

Philanthropic individuals and organizations, at first, and later public officials whom they persuadad to act, appreciating the significance of increased recreational travel, realized that while hundreds of thousands might find time and means to make tours of weeks or months to the western national parks and forests, millions require such fields for outdoor recreation, for holidays of a few days or a week or two, within a few hours from their homes.

State parks and forests came into being in various parts of the country, by isolated and unconnected movements, as understanding and support developed, first in the northeastern states, then in the great lakes states, then on the Pacific slope, and in later years extending to the border states and the south and southwest. State park and forest officials and their supporters gradually established touch with each other, and at length the need for exchange of ideas and for united advances resulted in the coordination of the movement, in the formation, at Des Moines, Ia., of the National Conference on State Parks. The officers named then, who still serve, are: Chairman, John Barton Payne; vice chairman, Stephen T. Mather, director national park service; secretary-treasurer, Beatrice M. Ward. Its headquarters are at 904 Union Trust building, Washington, D. C., where information on every aspect of state park and forest development is distributed to the growing numbers of those interested.

The ideal to which state park and forest planners are working, in an adequate and coördinated program by state, regional, county and municipal agencies, is a sufficient number of sites of moderate size, from a few dozen to a few hundred acres, along the principal state highways and near the cities to serve picnicking and tourist camping needs and in addition larger wilderness preserves, with whatever of wild nature a state affords, including mountains, lakes, forests, sea beaches and dunes, to serve every variety of outdoor need especially for those vacation seekers of hardier type who seek a spice of adventure. Where a large park can be acquired near a metropolitan district, such as the Allegany and Palisades Interstate parks in New York, its recreational value is great.

State parks conserve various examples of natural objects or of human culture. The state museum in New York, affiliated with the state council of parks, has the custody of several sites showing interesting features of the geological history of the state, such as the "fossil Niagara" in the Clark reservation near Syracuse, position of a cataract large as Niagara over which the waters of the great lakes flowed in glacial time. The State Historical and Archaeological society in Ohio possesses several notable instances of the culture of the aboriginals, including the famous Serpent mound and Fort Ancient, earthworks four miles around.

In Minnesota, the Taylor Falls State park is featured by the most remarkable collection of abandoned potholes in the country, ground in hard trap rock by the falls of the St. Croix when Lake Superior emptied its volume that way, but now above present water level and cleaned out for the observation of visitors. Some are of great size, a hundred feet deep and thirty feet in diameter. Clifty Falls State park in Indiana has at the bottom of its gorge a stratum of limestone crowded with exquisitely formed coral and marine shell casts. John Boyd Thacher State park near Albany, N. Y., on the edge of the Helderberg escarpment is a mecca for geological students from all over the world for its exhibits of fossil bearing strata illustrating the ancient history of the state and allied formations elsewhere.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to the Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune. For today's question Jerry E. Hulka, 1320 W. 19th st., Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Would you favor a gasoline tax to help widen and build the roads leading into Chicago?

Where Asked.

Michigan avenue and Ohio street.

The Answers.

Winifred Snowden, 5742 South Mozart street, stenographer—I believe that, if any gasoline tax is to be levied, the people of Chicago and Cook county should make sure that the greater part of the money from it comes back for our own roads. Most states have a gas tax now. I believe that the state of Illinois has enough road building funds and that the state roads about Chicago should be widened.

William Anton, 547 Melrose street—I don't think that people should be asked to pay for a gasoline tax when the state of Illinois has enough money to build its roads and keep them up properly. These state roads around Chicago certainly should be widened, but the state doesn't need a gas tax for that work. People are paying enough now for gasoline.

Fred Garner, 547 Melrose street—I think there is enough money in the state treasury to widen these roads without a gas tax. If people do vote such a tax, it should be expended on Chicago roads. It is here that cars need wide roads most.

John Eckstrom, 5748 North Maplewood avenue, salesman—I do not think that a gasoline tax should be imposed on the people of Illinois when the state has such a huge fund for road building. Gasoline is high enough now. I can't afford to pay a gas tax.

Josephine Vitale, 718 South Sholto street, stenographer—I understand that the main roads, which cause most of the traffic jams about Chicago, are state roads, and I do not think that the state needs any more money or a gasoline tax to widen them and make them right for traffic.

Friend of the Motorist.

Specific evidence of speed trap shakedowns, unwarranted arrests, the payment of illegal arrest and court fees, and other enforcement abuses is needed to push the grand jury investigation of the Chicago speed trap evil.

If you have been made a victim of official banditry in any form, address your report to Charles J. Mueller, assistant state's attorney, Criminal Court building, Chicago, or The Friend of the Motorist, Tribune Tower, Chicago. The speed trap crusade needs the coöperation of all Chicago motorists.

De Luxe Land Cruiser.

Probably the most elaborate touring motor car ever designed is the de luxe land cruiser built a few years ago for W. K. Kellogg of Battle Creek, Michigan. In addition to being equipped with a modern bathroom, kitchenette, electric stoves, and other conveniences, it has an electric refrigeration plant similar to those now used for central refrigeration in apartment houses.

For Highways.

Close to $2,000,000,000 was spent last year in the United States in building and repairing highways. About 40,000 miles of highways are being improved annually.

Fewer Traffic Deaths Encourage Safety Workers

West Defeats the East in Fight to Lower Toll.

THREE per cent fewer motor fatalities in the first four months of this year as compared with the same period last year are recorded by cities having more than 100,000 population, according to the compilation by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday.

With few exceptions the west is showing up better than the east in traffic improvement. San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane, Chicago, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis and St. Paul, all have better records this year.

New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, Buffalo and other important eastern cities have not held their ground.

Some eastern cities, however, particularly where safety work has been emphasized, have been able to progress, notably Boston, Baltimore and Washington, D. C.

Reports for the month of April alone are not quite as encouraging, registering a fraction of a per cent increase over April a year ago. On the other hand certain cities which had a bad start made gains in April this year. Twenty-six cities had fewer fatalities in April, 1926, than in April, 1925.

While increasing volume of traffic usually brings a larger number of accidents, this is not necessarily the case, as the records of many communities show. The grand total for April of any year is usually larger than March, and that is the case this year. In many cities, however, it has been possible to handle the increased flow of traffic without added risk. In Chicago, for instance, the April and March motor fatalities were identical in number. In St. Louis, Baltimore, Los Angeles, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Kansas City, Mo., Toledo, O., Louisville, Ky., St. Paul, Minn., Kansas City, Kas., New Haven, Dallas, Bridgeport, Houston, Trenton, Camden, N. J., Reading, Pa., and Yonkers, N. Y., eighteen cities in all, there were fewer motor fatalities in April than in March this year.

"We believe that the following elements have helped materially in traffic progress in the last twelve months," says George M. Graham, chairman of the traffic planning and safety committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, commenting on the current figures.

"The appointment of traffic engineers by many cities and the magnificent accomplishments of the state highway commissions have brought scientific assistance to this problem. The task of the engineer is little greater when dealing with 100,000 vehicles than when handling 50,000. The bringing to bear of engineering minds on the solution of traffic matters is proving to be of major importance.

"Thanks to the leadership of Secretary Hoover, the need for traffic improvement was brought more forcibly to the public attention in 1925 and 1926 than at any preceding period. This has resulted in public support of city and state authorities in their efforts to meet the situation.

"The newspapers have continued to be the backbone of public interest in this regard in two ways. I refer not alone to the use of news articles pertaining to traffic but particularly to the analysis of causes of accidents by more than 300 papers. In a number of centers this work is being ably done by safety councils. But in many communities the local newspaper is the only source of information on how the accident occurred.

"In addition to the analysis and executive work of the engineers the actual construction of highways is proving helpful. The new construction is built on the experience of modern transport. Sharp curves are avoided, blind corners done away with, adequate shoulders are provided. When our cities have caught up with the states in this program, the improvement in traffic mortality records will be rapid.

"Schools throughout the entire United States are recognizing that motor traffic is one of the conditions surrounding the life of the child, and the coming generation is being trained to adapt itself to these circumstances. Coupled with this movement is the necessary drive for more playgrounds so that children may have adequate play space."

CROP DECLINES FORECAST BY U. S. OFFICIAL REPORT

A larger winter wheat crop and smaller yields of spring wheat, corn, and oats than expected, also smaller crops of spring wheat and coarse grains than last year with an increase of 159,000,000 bu of winter wheat, as compared with the 1925 harvest, were outstanding features of the government report for July, issued late yesterday afternoon. It was too late for traders on exchanges to take advantage of the situation, coming out three hours after trading was over.

There is an aggregate of 4,993,000,000 bu of wheat, corn, oats, rye, and barley, a decrease of 346,000,000 bu from last year's final returns, and a reduction of 256,000,000 bu from the five year average, with losses largely in spring wheat, corn and oats.

Kansas Has Big Wheat Crop.

The winter wheat crop estimates were raised 24,000,000 bu during June, due to opportune rains at the proper time. The four big southwestern winter wheat states have 276,000,000 bu, or 142,000,000 bu more than last year's harvest.

Kansas alone has practically 140,000,000 bu, or about as expected, compared with 79,000,000 bu last year. Oklahoma has almost 70,000,000 bu, or more than double last year's crop, and Texas has one of the largest crops on record. In the middle west, the five leading states have 129,000,000 bu, a loss of only 1,000,000 bu last month, and a reduction of 14,000,000 bu from last year, and 47,000,000 bu from the five year average.

Corn Acreage Reduced.

An acreage of 101,474,000 have been planted in corn this year, against 101,631,000 acres harvested last year. A condition of 77.9 compares with 86.4 last year and 72 in 1924, while the average for ten years is 84.1. The crop is estimated at 2,661,000,000 bu, compared with 3,095,000,000 bu in July last year and a harvest of 2,901,000,00 bu a year ago.

The nine leading corn states have an acreage of 59,970,000, with an estimated yield of 1,778,000,00 bu, compared with 2,029,000 bu last year, and a five year average of 1,828,000,000 bu. Conditions in the leading corn states range from 70 to 85.

The oat crop of 1,334,000,000 bu is short 168,000,000 bu from last year and is below the five year average. The acreage of 45,945,000 compared with 45,160,000 harvested last year.

The rye crop is the smallest in fourteen years.

There is a smaller crop of barley, flax, and hay, as compared with last year.

Crop Conditions Decline.

Condition of corn is 77.9 against 86.4 last year, and a ten year average of 84.1. Winter wheat conditions 77.4 against 76.5 last month, and 65.9 last year. Spring wheat condition 64.8 against 78.5 last month, and 88.1 last year. Oat conditions 74.5 against 76.3 last year. Comparisons of crops follow, last three ciphers omitted:

New Nickel Plate Merger Terms Meet Opposition

New York, July 10.—Although the Van Sweringen interests have made considerable progress in revising their Nickel Plate merger plan along lines believed acceptable to stockholders of participating roads, latest indications are that they will not have altogether smooth sailing. George S. Kemp, one of the dissenting Chesapeake and Ohio stockholders, who successfully opposed the original proposal, was quoted as saying that the more liberal terms were still unsatisfactory from the standpoint of the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Hocking Valley.

Official denial is made by the Buffalo and Susquehanna railroad of reports that negotiations have been held or planned with the Van Sweringens looking to the inclusion of that road in the new Nickel Plate system.

EUROPEAN RAIL MAKERS ARRANGE BUSINESS "SPLIT"

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, July 10.—European railmakers, under the title of the International Railmakers' association, expect in August to make a two year agreement by which any orders received for rails will be submitted to a bureau in London. There the production will be allotted: Forty per cent to Great Britain, forty-three per cent to France and the Belgo-Luxembourg steelmakers, and seventeen per cent to Germany. Because of the high British quota it is thought the United States makers are to have a 20 per cent share. The difficulty over the British colonies has been overcome through British acceptance of the plan whereby other countries can ship rails to India and South Africa whenever the British railmakers have received their share of orders for a given period. The price has been set at £6 a ton for heavy rails, representing an increase over recent prices.

It is confirmed that the Tubemakers' association practically has concluded organization, while the General Steelmakers' combination still is being prepared by each country, where experts are drawing up production schedules and capacities for the purpose of final negotiations.

PROFIT TAKING CAUSES DROP IN PRICE OF WHEAT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat prices averaged lower as the result of profit-taking and evening up for the government report due long after the close, and on better weather conditions in the northwest and unresponsive Liverpool cables.

July, however, acted tight, and at one time sold about 2c over September compared with 1c over at the finish on Friday and closed with a net loss of ¼c at $1.38⅞ to $1.39 or 1⅜c over the September which with the December lost ¾c for the day. The latter finished at $1.40⅞to $1.41⅛.

Coarse grains were affected by the action of wheat and corn closed ¼@½c lower, with July 71⅝c, September 76⅝@76¾c, and December 77⅛@78c, while oats were off ⅛@⅜c, with July 37¾c and September 39½@39¾c. Rye was off 1c, with July 91½c and September $1.00¾@1.00⅝.

Grains Higher for Week.

Bullish sentiment was more pronounced the last week and all grains advanced rather sharply. The finish, while not at the best figures, showed net gains of 1⅛@4⅝c on wheat, ½@3½c on corn, ½@⅝c on oats, and 4@4⅞c on rye, as compared with the previous week. Lard closed 30@32½c lower, with ribs off 6@65c and bellies 20@37½c lower than a week ago.

There was no material pressure on July wheat, and it advanced to a greater premium over the September readily. Unfavorable crop reports continue to come from the American northwest, despite further rains overnight, especially in Minnesota, and local experts show a tendency to lower estimates on the yield. Murray estimates that about half of the North Dakota crop this year will be durum, against 43 per cent last year. Export demand at the seaboard was slow, with sales limited. Charters have been made for around 4,000,000 bu gulf for July loading at the seaboard, with around 15,000,000 bu at the gulf.

Houses with eastern connections were on both sides of the September. Local sentiment was somewhat less bullish and there was rather free selling early, but on the decline some of the sellers took profits and evened up for the crop report. The northwest was a good buyer of July. Minneapolis closed 1@1⅝c lower, with Kansas City ⅝@1c lower and Winnipeg ⅜c higher to ⅝c lower.

Light Trade in Corn.

Outside interest in corn was not large and trade was largely in the way of changing from one delivery to another. Forecast was for generally fair and warmer weather over Sunday over the main corn belt, which offset the effect of the lower temperatures which prevailed overnight. Liberal rains were reported overnight in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa, which will be very beneficial for the new crop. Eastern shipping demand was slow. Oats followed corn and averaged lower. Commission houses were fair buyers of September at times.

Rye weakened in sympathy with wheat, with September under pressure as the result of closing of spreads. Little was heard regarding export demand. Crop reports from the northwest remain decidedly pessimistic.

BREAK IN JULY COTTON

Foreign selling of cotton futures in New York, combined with a break in Liverpool, took the bull edge off the American cotton markets and induced week end profit taking.

Shorts in July in New York were heavy buyers early. After they had finished, a selling movement caused the market to collapse with a break of 122 points, followed by a rally, and close at a net loss of 113 points for the day. Other deliveries closed at intermediate prices, with futures in New York 12 to 5 points lower, and Chicago 33 points off on July and unchanged to 15 points lower on other months. Spots in New York were off 95 points to 18.10c.

Sales of print cloths for the week estimated at 250,000 pieces, bag makers being heavy buyers. Prices in leading markets follow:

PACKERS SELL LARD

Selling of lard futures by packers, but with eastern interests good buyers gave the market a steadier tone, and closing trades were at net gains of 2½c to 5c. Meats were neglected and closed 15c lower on short ribs, and unchanged to 2½c lower for bellies. Deliveries on July trades were 50,000 lbs lard and 100,000 lbs bellies. Shipments of meats for the week were larger than the previous week, and of lard smaller, with both less than a year ago. Hogs were higher, with small arrivals, and moderate receipts are expected this week. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

It is estimated by seaboard interests that ocean room has been taken for 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 bu wheat for July loading, which explains the heavy buying of cash grain in the southwest for some time past by exporters. Gulf wheat premiums generally showed little change for the day. Demand from abroad was slow, with resellers cheaper than first hand offerings.

Chicago handlers sold 3,000 bu wheat, 55,000 bu corn and 32,000 bu oats to the domestic trade with purchases to arrive estimated at 73,000 bu wheat, 95,000 bu corn and 30,000 bu oats. Charters were for 200,000 bu wheat to Buffalo and 150,000 bu corn and 100,000 bu oats to Georgian bay. Deliveries on July contracts were 68,000 bu corn, 20,000 bu oats and 30,000 bu rye. At St. Louis deliveries of wheat were 10,000 bu, the first this month, and at Winnipeg, 2,000 bu.

No material changes in cash wheat premiums were shown in any of the leading markets. Kansas City reported milling demand less active than of late but the basis was firm to ½c higher. No. 2 red winter here was 1@2c over July and No. 2 hard, 5@7c over. Minneapolis had scarcely enough spring wheat to make a market, with premiums firm.

Offerings of cash corn were not large with the basis here 1c higher to 1c lower with No. 2 grades 1@2¼c under; No. 3 grades, 2½@5c under, and No. 4 grades, 3@9c under September. Outside markets were unchanged to 1c lower.

Cash oats basis was ¼@½c lower with No. 2 white September to ½c over, and No. 3 white September to ¾c under.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 69 cars; corn, 79 cars; oats, 39 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 6 cars.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Trade sentiment in wheat is mixed and operators were well evened up at the close for the government crop report. Weather conditions are a large factor at present in the southwest, where the thrashing and movement of winter wheat is on, and in the northwest, where rains are needed over a large territory. Exporters are not taking the new wheat as fast as bulls would like to see and the market is sensitive to any selling or buying.

July wheat in Chicago, which recently dropped from 4c over September to ¾c discount, advanced to 2c premium over the July at one time yesterday and closed 1⅜c over. Houses with southwestern connections were large buyers of July yesterday and there also was buying of July and selling of September, July has been heavily oversold on the big movement in the southwest and it looked to some operators as though cash interests were behind the buying.

Corn traders are disposed to buy on breaks, but are not standing any length of time on their commitments. Many of those who have been bearish remain on that side because of the carrying charges, believing that so long as they exist there will be no bull market for any length of time. While the crop is late, weather the last week has pushed it along fast and it has regained much of the loss.

Expectations are that there will be a small decrease in the visible supply, the reductions being in the northwest, and a number of other points are expected to offset increases in the southwest. World's shipments are estimated at 11,200,000 bu, against 7,488,000 bu last year. Practically all of the wheat received at Chicago for the week is being shipped out to eastern millers, and there have been good withdrawals of wheat from public houses that have held the grain for some time past.

The weekly weather forecast is for fair the first part of the week with a shower period latterly, and moderate temperatures for the first part of the week, followed by warmer and by cooler weather, with showers later.

Nat C. Murray, the Clement Curtis crop expert, says one feature of the North Dakota wheat situation is that where durum predominates conditions are best and where bread wheat predominates the condition is poorest. Last year 35 per cent of the North Dakota total wheat acreage was durum, and 65 per cent bread wheat. Of the total production, 43 per cent was durum, and 57 per cent bread wheat, as shown by official reports. This year 40 per cent of the aggregate is durum, and more than half of the prospective crop is durum.

The Manitoba Free Press crop report says recent rains have been of much value to western Canadian crops. The general conditions of the wheat crop appear to be fair, but growth is on the short side with an average of 50 per cent headed. Coarse grains appear to show some improvement.

Broomhall reports further damage to German crop with condition of wheat and rye below the average. Australian reserves are exhausted and shipments will drop off sharply. India is having some rain, and it is expected that the monsoon will shortly spread to the northwest, where rain is needed.

PRIMARIES FOR WEEK

Primary receipts of grain last week aggregated 18,984,000 bu, and were the largest in more than a month, also the heaviest at this time in five years or more. A feature was the large movement of wheat, the largest in more than five years, and the smallest receipts of oats in three years. Details follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

"Small grains deteriorated greatly in northeastern South Dakota in the last ten days," says Le Count in his report from Wahpeton, N. D. "The state has almost the lightest crop on record. Coming into North Dakota the crop improves. Lots of very good wheat in this territory, but yield has been reduced by the recent heat wave. This territory had more moisture and crop is as yet satisfactory. Failed to find any black rust, and doubt if rust will be a factor this year, as there has been no surplus moisture all season. Stand is generally thin and straw hard and woody, which is unfavorable for rust development."

Cromwell's report to Lamson Bros. & Co., from Valley City, N. D., said: "Grand Forks to Lakota, Carrington, and Valley City: Small grains average fairly good for 200 miles. Become spotted south of Hannaford, and are poor the last 20 miles. This is a good territory, with barely an average crop on account of moderate stands and heads, together with weeds and wild oats. From here to Lamoure crops are poor, with wheat a failure to 8 bu per acre. From what I have seen the last three days, North Dakota wheat should average around 8½ bu per acre, or 7,000,000 bu less than our July 1 estimate. Flax and corn are good."

Small week-end offerings checked the phenominal decline in hog prices early yesterday, with bulk of the day's business indicating recoveries of 10@15c from the low spot Friday.

Activity characterized trading and only pen holders and inferior grades remained at the close, with small packers and shippers as the principal operators. Larger houses refused to follow the upward swing of the market, withdrawing from the trade early after an unsuccessful attempt to duplicate Friday's purchases.

Quality was lacking and held the average price down to $13.00, equal to the lowest since early in May. Fancy 160 lb. averages topped at $14.25, with 205 lb. hogs at $14.20, 260 lb. butchers at $13.50, and 325 lb. averages at $13.25.

Hogs ruled strong to higher following last Monday's holiday, but reacted sharply under excessive supplies after midweek, and closed 60c@$1.00 under the high point, daily top prices going from $15.00 to $14.25 in three days. Total receipts at 112,300 were 6,100 smaller than the previous week, due to the Monday holiday, being below any corresponding weekly total in over five years and 64,700 under the five year average.

Extreme top hogs at $15.00 last week equaled the year's peak and compared with $14.75 a year ago, which was the highest in 1925. Daily tops a year ago declined from $14.75 Monday to $13.95 Thursday, but swung back to $14.60 the following week. Last week's general average lowered 30c at $13.30, lowest in two months, against $13.60 a year ago and $7.10 two years ago.

Cattle Prices Erratic.

Trading in cattle was two sided practically throughout last week, yearlings ruling strong to higher, while heavy steers and the increasing number of in-between and "grassy" kinds sold weak to lower on ebtremely dull markets. The latter finished 25@40c under a week earlier. Yearlings show 10@15c advance for the week, several loads of 774@970 lb steers bringing $10.65, the week's peak. Best heavy sold at $10.50, averaging 1,400@1,519 lbs.

Corn fed cows and heifers closed on par with a week ago, with in-between grades 50@75c below ten days ago. Calves advanced 75c@$1.00, a few late 170 lb averages late in the week selling up to $14.00. Stockers and feeders closed weak. The general average price for good beef cattle at $9.70 compared with $9.75 last week and $11.80 a year ago.

Lambs Sell Low.

A break of 50c@$1.00 last week carried lamb prices to a new low point for the season and $1.00@1.50 under a year ago, fancy Idaho lambs late in the week at $14.70 comparing with $15.90 a year earlier. Top natives rested at $14.35 at the close. Average price of natives and westerns combined lowered to $14.55, against $14.95 a year ago and $13.65 two years ago. Aged sheep held steady most of the week, with medium and heavy receding 15@25c on a slow close. Feeding lambs declined mostly 25c.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 43,000 hogs, and 17,000 sheep, against a holiday a week ago and 17,021 cattle, 40,926 hogs, and 16,929 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 59,000 cattle, 125,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep, against 52,643 cattle, 127,328 hogs, and 65,098 sheep a year ago.

STOCKS STRONG AS WEEK ENDS; U. S. STEEL LEADS

STOCK MARKET AVERAGES

25 railroads	94.19	93.67	94.11	+.45
25 industrials	162.21	161.14	161.84	+.94
50 stocks	128.20	127.40	127.97	+.69

New York, July 10.—(AP)—A sharp rebound in prices took place in today's brief session of the stock market. Bear traders attempted to extend the reaction which set in late yesterday by attacking some of the popular industrials and specialties but they encountered strong buying support and rushed to cover in many issues. Total sales were 575,900 shares.

The principal business development of the day was the publication of the June unfilled tonnage statement of the United States Steel corporation, which showed a decrease of 170,608 tons, or much smaller than was expected in some quarters. U. S. Steel common, which had sold down to 138¾ in the early trading, snapped back to 140¾ at the close for a net gain of 1¾ on the day. Good buying also was noted in the independent steels, Youngstown Sheet and Tube moving up 1½ points.

Pool Specialties Are Bid Up.

Pool operators, confident of a further easing of money rates, continued to bid up their stocks in aggressive fashion. Case Threshing Machine soared six points to a new high record at 128, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe jumped five, and Advance Rumely preferred, American Republics, Columbia Gas, California Packing, National Biscuit, Postum Cereal, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Wilson company preferred and Woolworth all showed net gains of 2 points or more.

Motors also received good support, with buying stimulated by the declaration of an extra dividend on Nash Motors and reports that sales of popular cars were being maintained at a high rate. General Motors crossed 150 for a net gain of over 2 points. Oils also showed a stronger undertone, but the gains as a rule were small. Resumption of investment buying in the high grade railroad shares was one of the features of the session. Southern Pacific crossed 107 to a new high level for the year and several others moved up a point or more.

Bond Market Holds Steady.

Bond prices held relatively steady. Buying interest was confined to a few semi-speculative issues, but these were able to make little headway. French bonds marked time. Belgian issues attracted better support, but some of the German obligations and the Mexican assented bonds were forced back by realizing sales.

Price movements of railroad liens were conflicting. Chesapeake and Ohio and Erie mortgages continued to gain, but Denver and Rio Grande 4½s, Peoria and Eastern income 4s, and Iowa Central 4s receded a point or more. Texas and Pacific first 5s advanced 1½ points to a new high at 107½ on a single transaction. American Writing Paper issues recovered slightly, but Skelly Oil 6½s remained under pressure.

Curb Stocks Change Slightly.

On the curb exchange price movements showed an even tenor. United Gas Improvement yielded 1⅝ points further. South Penn Oil rose ¼ of a point and Standard Oil of Indiana improved slightly. Tubize Artificial Silk attracted attention with a 4⅞ point advance. Philadelphia Electric suffered a loss of 3½ and Standard Publishing lacked nearby support, selling off 2½@6⅝, a new low record for the year.

Foreign exchanges displayed a heavy tone, with the exception of demand sterling, which was quoted slightly higher at $4.85 13-16. French and Belgian francs each ruled about 5 points lower at 2.57 and 2.32½c respectively, while Italian lire sagged over 12 points to around 3.40c.

New York Loans Decrease.

Passing of the special requirements for credit incident to the July 1 settlements is reflected in today's weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks. Loans, discounts, and investments decreased $142,148,000, leaving a total of $5,446,735,000.

Net demand deposits decreased $161,-948,000, bringing the total up to $4,402,-727,000, while time deposits increased $4,713,000 to $602,897,000. Excess reserve amounts to $30,551,640, an increase of $24,530,840 over the figure reported a week ago.

For her Especially for Her, You Want a Car Like This

Here's a car to make a woman very happy.
It's the Reo Six Special Sedan.
It's just a little nicer, somewhat bigger, just a little more finely finished, and a bit better in every way than the price leads one to expect.
Come in and see it and bring her with you.

The New Reo Six Special Sedan

The Reo Six Special Sedan is the finest model of America's longest-lived car.

Hidden by its charming lines and distinctive body is the same sturdy chassis, the same hushed power plant that have carried Reo into the lead in long life. Yet both have been improved here and there, as it is always Reo policy to add refinements and make changes when they have proved worthy.

No picture here could reproduce the lines, the color choices, the appointments of the Special Six Sedan.

Words of ours could not tell the story of its good looks and luxuriousness as your own eyes, the touch of your fingers to the upholstery, the relaxing ease experienced by riding and driving in it, will reveal its worth to you.

That She May Turn Balloon Tires Quickly and With Ease

With Reo Split-Second Steering you can turn balloon tires in half the time that the ordinary steering gears demand.

Some cars now require two and a half, others three complete turns of the steering wheel to turn balloon tires from extreme left position to extreme right position.

Split-Second Steering does this in one and a half turns.

Not only does this mean quicker steering in dangerous situations—it means far easier driving.

There's a deal of satisfaction in driving a car whose appearance and performance make others say, "There's a Reo"

Her Choice of Brakes

Many women do not like the usual method of applying brakes, especially in emergencies, because it means taking the eyes off the road and one hand off the steering wheel.

For them, a Reo provides Split-Second Braking Plus Standard Control. The standard control is independent of the Split-Second System, not actuated by it, but at hand for use if wanted.

Or you can have your Reo equipped with Standard Braking Control only—just as you will find it on other cars.

For the Man Who Wants HER Driving to Be Safe

A Reo is an exceptionally safe car for a woman to drive. Most noticeable to the woman who first drives a Reo is the extraordinarily easy steering, so swift and easy that only a trial can show you the truth about it.

There's the faster acting Split-Second Braking Plus Standard Control and Standard Gear Shift to make stopping, starting and driving easier.

The long springs, even distribution of weight, deep cushions, and balloon tires make Reo wonderfully comfortable to ride in.

For keeping the driver free from care, pulling through tough spots on the road, minimizing car troubles, there is the same sound Reo construction that has made Reo the longest lasting car in America.

The three extra years of life built into each Reo—for it has been proved that Reo's average life is more than three years above the average life of all American cars—means a very high re-sale or trade-in value.

That cuts down the largest single cost of owning a motor car, the loss due to depreciation.

Come in and See this Finest Model of America's Longest Lasting Automobile—and bring her with you.

WORKSHOPS ON FRINGE OF CITY GROW STEADILY

Building Figures Tell Story.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

The great fringe of workshops around the superworkshop, Chicago, is expanding rapidly, hastening the day when, according to economic experts, the Chicago area will be the greatest manufacturing district in the world. The remarkably steady growth of the industrial cities and towns in the metropolitan area is revealed by building figures covering the principal cities of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Iowa, as made public by S. W. Straus & Co. last night.

Although in many instances the figures for the first six months of 1926 show decreases, in comparison with the same period of last year, the loss is not heavy and the value of the building permits is high enough to indicate important progress.

Take Gary. The value of building in Gary for the first six months of 1926 totaled $10,862,663, against $7,453,419 for the same period of 1925. And for June of this year the volume was $2,914,615, against $946,220 in June of last year, a gain of 208 per cent.

Then, going to Hammond, it is found the first six months of this year showed a building volume of $2,594,200, against $2,707,014 for last year, registering a loss, although not an important one. The volume for June was $348,150, against $340,753 over last year—a slight gain.

But the total of building volume for the district is indeed imposing and, when taken as a whole, indicates the maintenance of the progress that has made the Chicago district a metropolitan giant in such a brief span of years.

On Northern Fringe.

And now we go to Waukegan, Kenosha, and Racine, workshops along the northern fringe that have been making big strides in the last few years. Waukegan reports a building volume of $2,049,328 for the first six months of 1926, against $1,751,148, for the same period of last year. For June, 1926, it was $421,300, against $268,837 for last June. Both are consisent gains.

Kenosha building totaled $2,457,919 for this year, against $2,462,961 for last year—a loss so small as hardly to deserve mention. The June figures were $528,293 for 1926, against $546,980 for 1925. Racine registered a slight gain, having $1,796,449 for the first six months of this year and $1,732,493 for last year. The June figures, too, stepped up. For this year they were $419,967 and for last year $386,860.

Perhaps there may be some complaint in Milwaukee against including that city in the Chicago district, but as eminent college professors are doing so we shall do likewise. And Milwaukee should be proud of its record. The first six months of 1926 gave that city a total of $20,030,528 against $19,657,090 for the same period of last year. There was a slight increase for June this year, the volume being $3,635,670, against $3,407,717 for last.

Evanston a Winner.

And while we are reporting gains, Evanston most certainly cannot be neglected. Although not an industrial city, it is growing at a brisk rate, as indicated by a volume of $8,445,320 for the first six months of 1926 and $6,620,370 for last year. The June, 1926, figures, too, were higher, being $1,561,650, against $1,257,750 for June of last year.

And as figures make somewhat heavy reading for this brand of weather, we shall just touch on two towns to the west, Cicero and Aurora. For the first six months of 1926 the building volume of Cicero was $2,912,103, against $3,499,780 for the same period of last year. And in Aurora they were $2,095,922, against $1,753,696 for the same periods, a gain.

Building figures may make dry reading, but in this case they lend point to the pithy words recently uttered by a writer well known in these parts in telling about a conversation he had had with a friend.

Now's the Time.

"Chicago is going to be a wonderful place in which to live in a few years," the writer's friend remarked.

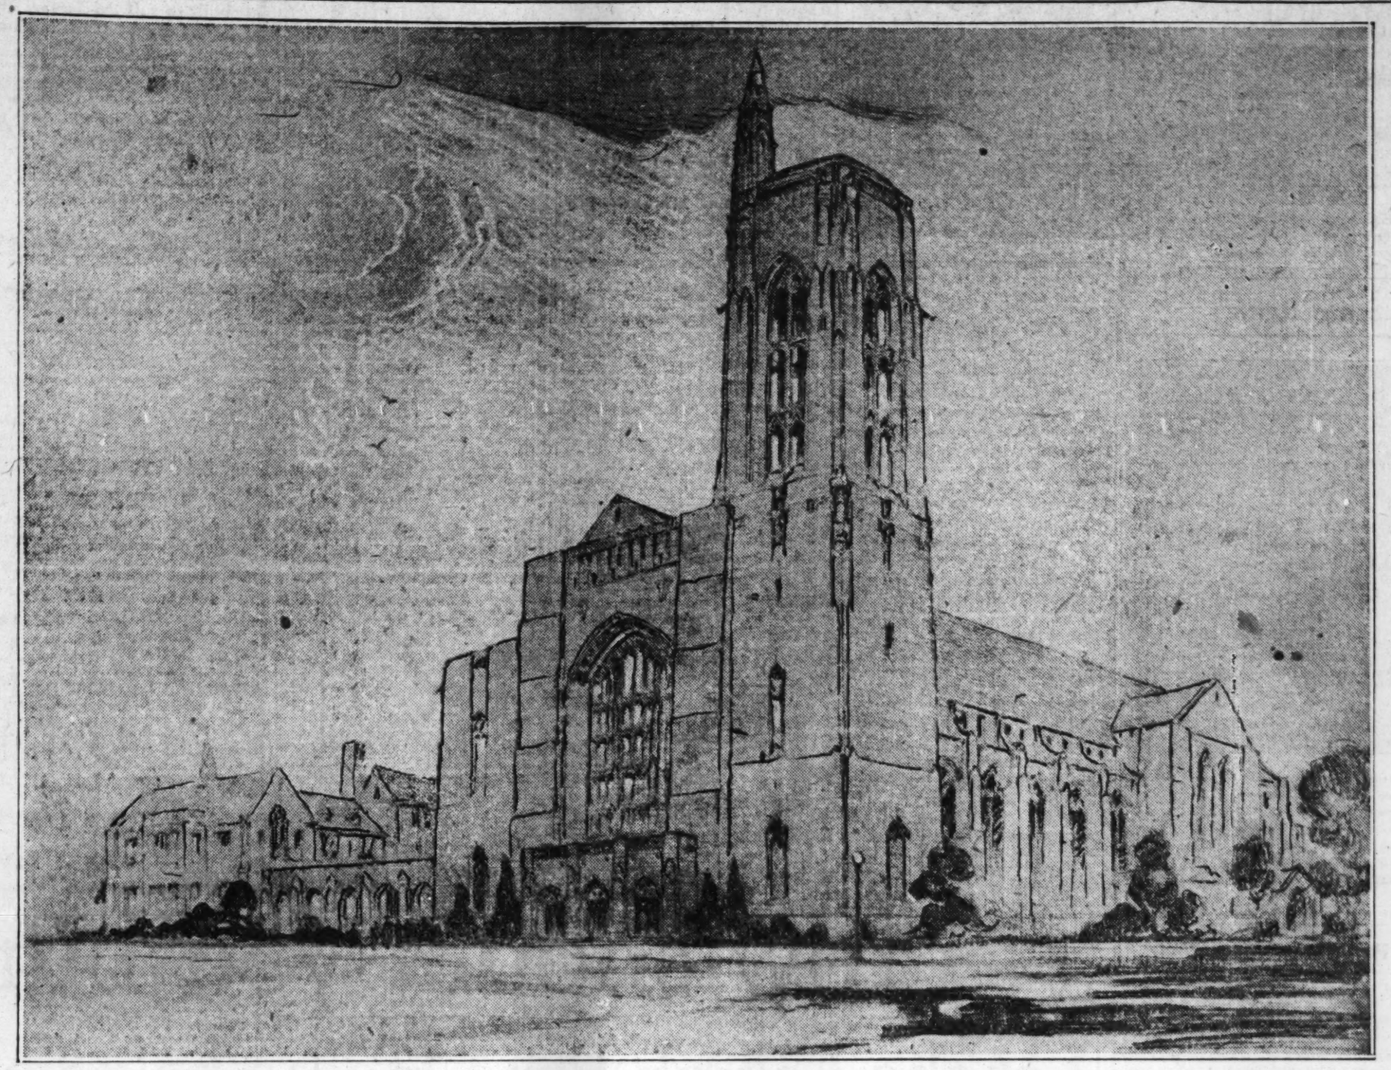
"I had rather live here now, while we are building it," was the writer's comment.

A brief résumé of the figures for the states mentioned previously, and we close. Michigan cities reporting rang up a $119,710,571 total for the first six months of 1926, against $110,084,713 for 1925. The first six months of 1926 in Illinois gave $216,997,677, against $235,607,936 for 1925. In Iowa they were $8,795,155 for 1926, and $12,534,741 for 1925. The Indiana 1926 total was $35,399,575, and $37,209,942 last year. In Wisconsin $34,876,566 for 1926 and $36,571,440 for 1925.

TALL APARTMENT HOTEL IS PLANNED FOR 810 CASS ST.

A tall apartment hotel is planned for the future on the site at 810-12 Cass street, with a frontage of forty-six feet, which Wilhelmina Goehring recently bought from Meyer Rosengard and others. The price paid was not disclosed. John B. Birren of Crowe Bros. & Co. represented all parties in the deal.

SOUTH SIDE'S NEWEST HOUSE OF WORSHIP



Tallmadge & Watson, Chicago architects, designed the above First Presbyterian church, to be erected at the southwest corner of 64th street and Kimbark avenue on a 160x160 lot. This is the present site of the famous old Woodlawn Park Presbyterian church which recently combined with the present First Presbyterian church, the name of the latter being retained for the merged churches. The present church edifice on the corner and an apartment building on an adjoining lot on the south will be wrecked to make way for the magnificent new church group. Details are given in an adjoining column.

HISTORIC CONGREGATIONS UNITE TO BUILD EDIFICE

Will Be on Site of Present Woodlawn Park Church.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Woodlawn is to have one of the largest and finest Presbyterian churches in the country as a result of the merging of the Woodlawn Park Presbyterian church and the First Presbyterian church, two of Chicago's famous old congregations. This was announced last night by O. E. Aleshire, chairman of the building committee, who stated that plans had been drawn by Tallmadge & Watson for a church group which will represent a total investment in land and building of $600,000. The Rev. W. H. Boddy is pastor of the merged congregations.

THE REV. W. H. BODDY.

The site at the southwest corner of 64th and Kimbark is valued by Mr. Aleshire at $100,000. The group of buildings will cost $500,000. This will make the church property one of the most valuable in the country.

Auditorium to Seat 1,200.

Tallmadge & Watson have used Gothic in their design. Bedford stone will be used exclusively for all exterior walls. The main architectural feature will be an imposing tower. The church auditorium will seat 1,200.

The parish house will include a chapel, a gymnasium 42x80, and a large assembly room for various church and community uses and Sunday school quarters.

Working plans are now being made by Tallmadge & Watson and construction is expected to start next winter, with the expectation, according to Mr. Aleshire, of having the new edifice ready for services a year later.

Congregation Numbers 2,300.

The new church combination will have one of the largest memberships in the country. The Woodlawn Park Presbyterian church has 1,400 members and the old First Presbyterian church has 900, making a total of 2,300 parishioners.

The history of both churches harks back to pioneer days in the then village of Woodlawn, and still farther, in the case of the First Presbyterian church, to Fort Dearborn itself, before Chicago even was incorporated.

For the famous old "First" was organized on June 26, 1833, in Fort Dearborn. Since that date it has moved several times and erected several church edifices. It occupied two different sites in the downtown district. Then it moved southwards to 21st and Indiana, perhaps it best known location.

From there it continued its travels southward to 41st and South Park way (formerly Grand boulevard). Services only recently were discontinued at this latter location. The building at that corner eventually will be used for some religious purpose by the colored people who have swept into that district.

Established in 1885.

The Woodlawn Park Presbyterian church, though more than half a century junior to the First, has had an interesting if somewhat settled career. It has never left the corner where it was first established, back in 1885.

The church site was purchased for $500 and on it was erected a $3,000 one room church edifice, built on cedar posts, and with an unhampered view for miles over Illinois prairie. Woodlawn was then a tiny village, miles south of the Chicago city limits.

The church outgrew this diminutive house of worship and the present substantial building was dedicated March 31, 1901. It cost $35,609. It has an organ that cost $3,000.

Retains Name of "First."

In 1905, the church's 20th anniversary, an addition costing $7,268 was opened. This makes the total investment in land and building $33,000 in the forty-one years of its existence.

The combined churches will be known as the First Presbyterian church of Chicago, owing to certain requirements in endowments held by the First church.

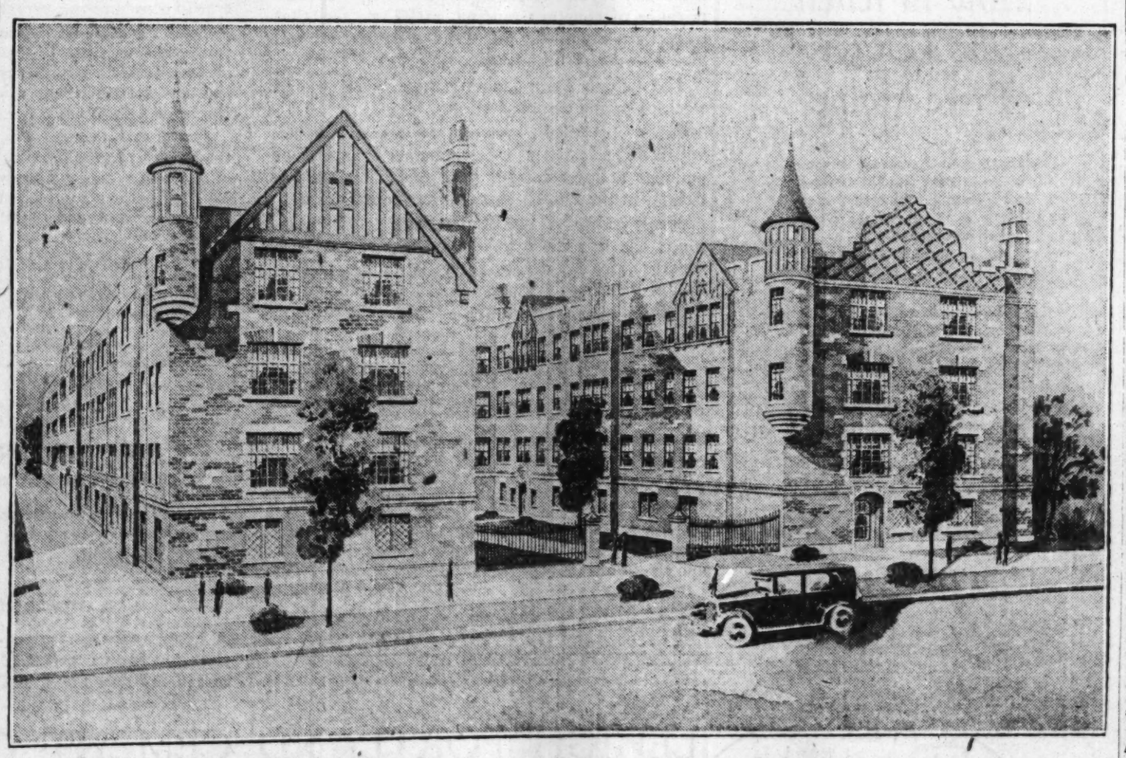
ONWENTSIA CLUB CONTEMPLATES NEW GROUP OF BUILDINGS

Onwentsia, one of America's best known and one of the middle west's oldest country clubs, is contemplating a new and much more elaborate group of club buildings.

According to Cyrus H. Adams Jr., president of Onwentsia, the matter is still in the preliminary stages of unofficial discussion and has not yet been acted upon by the club's board of directors.

Mr. Adams admitted that new buildings undoubtedly would be erected, however, and it is understood that they will contain many features now lacking in the present old building, but which are found in more modern country clubs.

PRIEST CHRISTENS EVANSTON APARTMENTS



Work is under way on a de luxe apartment building at the northwest corner of Oak avenue and Lake street, Evanston, for Samuel Crowen, architect, and John Keane. The structure was named by the Rev. Hugh P. Smyth, for thirty-five years pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, across the street. It's to be of unusually attractive appearance and was designed by Mr. Crowen. It will represent an investment of $327,000 and Baird & Warner have arranged a bond issue of $223,000 at 6½ per cent on it.

Country Club for College Men Planned

Here's the newest in the ever growing list of golf clubs with a specialized membership. It's to be the Big Ten Country club and will confine its members to graduates and former students of ten of the big midwest universities: Chicago, Northwestern, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Ohio and Purdue.

A site comprising 220 acres in Cook county, about a mile north of Bartlett and half a mile north of Lake street, has been acquired at a reported $550 an acre. It is claimed that already a subdivider has offered the club $1,000 an acre.

A clubhouse of Spanish design is to be erected and an eighteen hole course laid out. A swimming pool, tennis courts, etc., also are planned. The membership will be limited to 400.

Ralph J. Gutgsell is president. Lyman Sherwood and James McKeag are vice presidents. James J. Fairweather is secretary. These men, together with Herbert Steger, comprise the board of directors.

The board of governors is made up of Harold Lewis, representing U. of C.; Edward C. Sternaman, Illinois; Branch Rickey, Ohio; Robert Steger, Michigan; Andrew Gill, Indiana; Robert L. Schutter, Wisconsin, and Elmer Oliphant, Purdue.

The executive offices of the club are in the Roanoke building. Williams & Squires were sellers of the site and also brokers.

F. H. WOLF PLANS 2 NEW BUILDINGS IN DIVISION ST.

Two new buildings have been announced by Fred H. Wolf of the district along West Division street. At the southwest corner of Division and Keeler he will erect a three story brick and terra cotta structure containing five stores, eight flats, and a number of offices at a cost of $85,000. He will also put up a building on the north side of Division about 150 feet west of Keeler avenue to contain three stores and ten apartments. Mr. Wolff sees a happy future for the district because of the opening of Division through Humboldt park, thereby connecting the lake and Austin.

Cost of Cutting Streets to Wacker Drive $1,999,125

The value of the land and buildings which will be taken over by the city in the cutting through of streets from Lake street to Wacker drive is placed at $1,999,125. The streets to be cut through are Garland court, between Michigan and Wabash; Federal street, between Dearborn and Clark; Holden court, between Wabash and State, and Fork avenue, between Wells and Franklin. These streets will be of first importance in the speedy clearing of traffic from the loop.

Pastor Picks Name for New Suburban Flat Building

A bit of romance comes to light with the announcement that work is well under way on one of the most luxurious apartment buildings for Chicago's distinguished neighbor, Evanston. The structure is going up at the northwest corner of Oak avenue and Lake street.

REV. HUGH P. SMYTH.

And now for the romance. For many years the property was owned by the Catholic bishop of Chicago. Across the street at the southeast corner stands St. Mary's Catholic church, for which the Rev. Hugh P. Smyth has been the pastor for thirty five years.

So long had the property been in the church's hands that Father Smyth felt it almost as a personal loss when the corner was sold. He continued his interest in the land, and when it was announced that a building was to be erected, he was given the privilege of naming the structure. The name he chose was Church View.

In Select Region.

The apartment building will present a striking appearance, in keeping with the neighborhood. It is only a block from the residence of James A. Patten, who has some fame in Chicago for his connection with wheat, and the homes of other millionaires, so an ordinary building in this locality might present the same unhappy picture as a yellow pup among a group of high bred police dogs.

To go on, the Church View apartments will be of red brick with cut stone placed about at intervals to relieve the monotony of the ordinary wall. Then the sky line will be broken with turrets and peaked roofs. Beams, familiar to tourists of Europe, figure largely in the decorative scheme.

There are to be six apartments of four rooms, nine of five, and twelve of six, and, as previously stated, they will be the last word of last words, with electric refrigeration, wood burning fireplaces, and similar cheering conveniences.

Will Cost $327,000.

The structure, which was designed by Samuel Crowen, is to be of semi-fireproof construction, as is required by law in Evanston. When completed, in October, it will represent an investment of $327,000. The owners are Mr. Crowen and John Keane, president of the City National Bond and Share company.

Ralph Hunt of Baird & Warner is in charge of the financing and has arranged a bond issue of $223,000 at 6½ per cent on the development.

To Recall Days of Hawthorne in New Hotel

The spirit of Nathaniel Hawthorne is to hover over the Hawthorne Arms hotel, which is now under construction at 3434-36 Broadway. For in the interior of the building the decorative features will recall to memory this great novelist of America's earlier days. The lobby, especially, will feel the Hawthorne presence with a collection of paintings, bronzes and statues representing his works.

The new hotel is being erected by Harry Yavitch. It's to be four stories high, including an English basement, and will represent an investment of $275,000 when completed. It is to be set back forty feet from the street and entrance will be through an ornamental gate. A sunken garden and fountain will do their part in helping to make the hotel attractive.

Edward Steinborn designed the Hawthorne Arms, which is to have 102 rooms. The site it occupies measures 46x225 feet. The Chicago Trust company has made a ten year loan of $150,000 at six per cent on the property. Edward G. Blonder represented Mr. Yavitch in the arrangements. The building will be ready for occupancy in November.

$300,000 Hotel Planned Opposite Sheridan-Plaza

Plans have been drawn by Architect Raymond Gregori for a five story apartment hotel to be erected by John and Elizabeth Gregori at 909 Wilson avnue, which is just east of Sheridan road and diagonally across from the Sheridan-Plaza hotel.

The hotel, which will be known merely as "909 Wilson avenue," will contain sixty-seven suites of one and two rooms each. All will be furnished and there'll be hotel service.

Work will start within a month, according to Architect Gregori, with the expectation of having the new hostelry ready for guests by May 1, 1927.

The building will be designed in the Italian style and will have an elevation of red brick with cream colored terra cotta trim.

There'll be no hotel dining room, but a lobby extending across the entire front of the building is planned. A ladies' waiting room and a men's lounge also will be on the first floor.

Construction will be of concrete. The estimated cost of the new hotel is placed at $300,000.

Plan 8 Story Flat Building for Roscoe St.

Work is to start at once on a $1,200,000 apartment building on the south side of Roscoe street, 150 feet west of Sheridan road. The owner is Edwin M. Levin.

The architectural and engineering work on the new structure will be done by the Callner Construction company, which also will erect the building.

Plans call for an eight story structure to contain 125 apartments of three, four, and five rooms each. The site of the new building is 100x166.

The exterior will be of terra cotta. According to the owner, the apartments will be ready for tenants about May 1, 1927.

News of the Architects

Allen E. Erickson has moved his architectural offices from the Sheridan Trust building, 4753 Broadway, to room 1506 in the Chicago building, 7 West Madison street. His new phone is Randolph 5797.

Shoe Firm Leases Store at 53 East Madison Street

Reeve B. Bokemeier of Freeport, Ill., has leased for a term of years from Aug. 1 at an average rental of $11,600 the store at 53 East Madison street, in the Mallers building, to be occupied for the sale of Red Cross shoes. Cerf & Ehrenhalt represented the lessor and L. L. Sachs & Co. the lessee.

Miami Building Permits $20,735,842 for 6 Months

Miami, Fla., July 10.—Miami building permits for the first six months of this year amounted to $20,735,842, or $3,000,000 greater than the entire construction in 1924. The total for June reached $3,834,000.

CLEAR $50,000 IN 2 MONTHS BY LOOP LEASE SALE

An interesting deal in loop realty was consummated last week. It was interesting for two reasons: First, because of the importance of the property involved; second, because it presented a striking example of the quick profits being made in Chicago realty.

In this transaction Pancoe Brothers sold the 99 year leasehold on the property at 226 South Wabash avenue to Samuel Grossman for $50,000. Pancoe Brothers acquired the leasehold from the Northern Trust company on April 1, 1926, so their sale gives them a profit of $50,000 in a trifle more than two months. No so bad.

Mr. Grossman, who operates a chain of corset stores, plans to tear down the present old improvements and to erect an eight story building on the property in a year. The structure will be devoted to ladies' wearing apparel shops.

Former Judges Bernard Barasa and Charles N. Goodnow were attorneys.

LAUDS EFFORTS OF BUILDERS IN WORLD'S GAINS

Organization Key to Success: Braun.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Few people realize the salient power that various associations of building contractors exercise for the general welfare of the building industry in general, asserted Ernest W. Braun, the executive secretary of the Associated Building Contractors of Illinois, last night in discussing the problem of trade organizations.

ERNEST W. BRAUN

He said it seldom occurs in the mind of the public that there are men who have such a high regard for the rights of others that they are willing to lend their best moral and financial support for the realization of a great principle. This principle, Mr. Braun pointed out, embodies the slogan of "By serving the public we serve ourselves."

"The building industry," he stated, "is primarily one of necessity as service. All the incidental and conspicuous comforts and luxuries of the buildings of today, as compared with those of a past generation, are due to the constant effort and application for service of these organizations of builders. These improvements are not merely matters of incident or natural evolution, but they stand out as conspicuous examples of accomplishments.

Seek Better Work.

"These builders' organizations strive to build better buildings; better in that their construction is made safer for occupants from fire and other hazards; more healthful through the installation of the most modern sanitary appliances; more comfortable and convenient, and, lastly, more beautiful in design and decorative features that their occupancy may be a lasting pleasure through continued satisfaction.

"Then, too, the various builders' organizations are concerned in applying the best and safest system of construction to conserve labor and protect it against those hazards always present during the construction period. They are concerned in maintaining a cost of construction that will not become prohibitive and curtail the industry. They are interested in making the construction of buildings an attractive proposition for investors, at the same time keeping the matter within reasonable bounds for tenants.

Help the Community.

"When the associations of contractors accomplish these important things they actually contribute to the attractiveness of the community and encourage more building—more building means a greater earning power for the building mechanics employed and in general reflects a period of prosperity for all classes of people."

Mr. Braun said the building contractors' associations are interested in permitting none but men of high ideals and responsibility, men of experience and of good repute, to enjoy the privileges of membership.

He said the associations realize that nothing can so quickly undermine the good reputation of reliable men as a tacit permission for unreliable and unscrupulous men to remain within their ranks. The builders' secretary said various organizations of general contractors are constantly carrying on campaigns of an educational value to maintain a high standard among building contractors.

Are Well Informed.

"Other privileges enjoyed by contractors, who belong to trade associations, said Mr. Braun, include being posted on improved methods of construction and in improvements for installation, together with getting instruction on a hundred and one details that go toward safer, better and cheaper construction cost.

In conclusion, Mr. Braun said the building public plays safest when construction is done by a contractor who evidences his responsibility through affiliation with a contractors' organization.

How should you build?

EVERYONE has, or should have, a warm feeling for his home—be it a mansion, a time-worn house, or rented rooms. But how many times the costly repairs of the average home, or the annoyance of constant moving, make one feel that some day—soon—he will build a home that will give Permanent Satisfaction.

The Lehigh Prize Home is now in its second week of public demonstration.

Come this week, yourself, to see this home, which was selected as a prize winner by a jury of eminent architects from hundreds of competing designs in the Lehigh Prize Home Competition.

Never before has one home so successfully combined the five most important factors in home construction: Moderate cost; Attractive design; Skilful Planning; Permanence; Fire-safety.

It demonstrates the practical advantages of concrete masonry construction.*

Avoid the common mistakes in house construction

There are definite ways in which home builders often make mistakes, which result in discomfort and direct financial loss. A visit to the Prize Home will help you avoid them.

First: PLANNING—Frequently a home is built from a complex, "tricky" plan, making it difficult to care for, and almost impossible to sell if the occasion arises. The Lehigh Prize Home has a simple, balanced design—a charm that will always endure. In its planning every inch has been used for some good purpose.

Second: COST—Often one unconsciously builds a home with little regard for carrying charges on mortgage indebtedness. This Prize Home, moderate in cost, will have unusually low carrying charges since this type of construction commands a high appraisal value.

Third: REPAIRS—Many materials require constant repair or replacement. In the Prize Home the walls are of concrete building units, surfaced with stucco. Repairs and depreciation will be slight. Concrete cannot rot, rust or decay and never needs painting.

Fourth: FIRE-SAFETY—Many homes are built without thinking of the fire hazard. In the Prize Home, walls of concrete masonry units surfaced with stucco—sills and lintels of concrete—chimneys of concrete block—these are safeguards against fire risk.

The Lehigh dealer can help you

When you decide to build, go to the dealer in your community who displays the Blue-and-White Lehigh Sign. He handles Lehigh cement because it is dependable. Is it not reasonable to expect such a dealer to protect your interests in other ways by handling a line of thoroughly Dependable Materials?

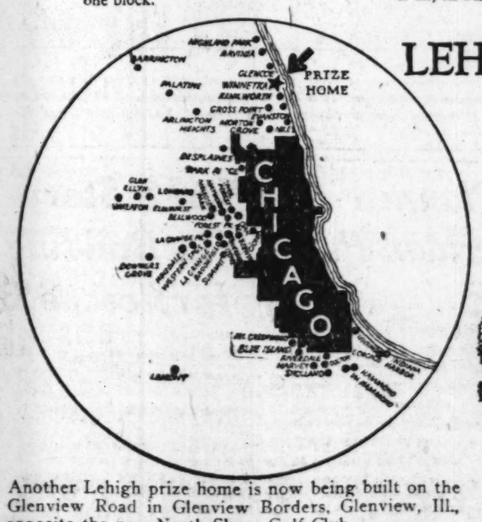
A competent contractor can save you money

Make sure of Competent Workmanship. A good contractor will save you money through skilful building economies.

An architect's supervision

A good architect will invariably save you more than his fee, in correct planning, in accurate estimates and specifications.

*Concrete masonry calls for the use of concrete masonry units (block, brick or tile) for walls, with an exterior finish of portland cement stucco.



Another Lehigh prize home is now being built on the Glenview Road in Glenview Borders, Glenview, Ill., opposite the new North Shore Golf Club.

REAL ESTATORS READY FOR GALA DAY ON THURSDAY

To Hold Annual Outing in Morton Grove.

Members of the Cook County Real Estate board are trusting to the good old month of July to come through with the finest kind of weather for Thursday, the fifteenth. There's a reason, naturally, but the reason in this case has nothing to do with any automatic beverages, but, as likely already suspected, has much to do with a picnic.

WILLIAM KOLACEK [Mabel Sykes Photo]

William Kolacek, chairman of the outing committee of the board, has just announced the plans for the affair, which is the board's annual outing. It will be held this year at Morton Grove, Lincoln avenue and Dempster street, where forest preserve space has been reserved.

Motorcycle Cops on Job.

The picnickers will meet in their automobiles at Lincoln and Western avenues and will leave at 11 a. m. sharp for the grove. They will be preceded by motorcycle policemen, and it is to be hoped, for the comfort of those making the trip, that the gendarmes will leave their sirens at home.

There are to be all sorts of contests, overall and three legged races, kicking balloons, and the like. Mr. Kolacek says that there will be unique races for the ladies, but he fails to disclose what he means by unique. For those of the romance age and even beyond there is to be dancing from the time the affair starts until the close.

In telling about the outing Mr. Kolacek relates how the affair almost ended in disaster this year. It seems that real estators on the south side have long been in possession of a hospitable custom of keeping open house on Wednesday evening. And the affair was announced for Wednesday, July 14.

Date Is Changed.

But to south side real estators Wednesday evening must be held inviolate for the open house. So there was nothing to do, despite the fact that the picnic had been announced in the papers for July 14, but to change the date to the 15th.

The members of the outing committee consist of William Kolacek, C. H. Grosse, Joseph Hall, Frank Hecht, Leland Koch, L. C. Norman, Fred Hummel, T. A. Pike, and Joseph Hammer.

GRAFTON PARKER SELLS FOUR SOUTH SIDE RESIDENCES

J. Grafton Parker & Co. announce the sale of the following residences:

6826 Euclid avenue. Land, 100x134; 11 room brick; for Mrs. Charles A. Woods to Carlos Alling. Consideration, $30,000.

5629 University avenue. Land, 50x175; 11 room colonial brick; for Prof. W. D. MacClintock to Lawrence Newmark, for the use of the Kappa Nu fraternity. Consideration, $36,000. B. L. Basken represented the fraternity.

6820 Chappell avenue. Land, 50x126; seven room almost new colonial brick; for Thomas Ryan to Fred A. Marshall. Consideration, $30,000.

1222 East 56th street. Land, 25x175; 10 room colonial brick; for Prof. John Clark to Dr. Mark Jampolis. Consideration, $22,000.

MANUFACTURING DISTRICT SHAMES LOOP

The Central Manufacturing District for many years has shamed some of our wealthiest loop building owners by erecting buildings with the roof considered as an architectural part of the structure and seeing to it that all penthouses, tanks, and other eyesores were hidden in sightly towers. The obnoxious "shirt front" style of architecture, still used by some of our best known architectural firms, is practically taboo in the attractive industrial districts developed and controlled by the trustees of the Central Manufacturing District.

J. B. Whidden, sales manager of the Central Manufacturing District, sends to The Tribune a couple of pictures which show what has been accomplished in the district in the way of settling the roof problem.

The above is one showing how two big tanks were tucked away in an attractive tower at 2001 Pershing road. These contain 250,000 gallons of water and because of their size would have been a conspicuous blight on the landscape if exposed in the usual way. They supply sprinkler service for a group of buildings over half a mile in length. S. Scott Joy was architect.

"None of these buildings is unsightly, as it would be with the usual individual roof tank," explained Mr. Whidden, "as a result of this tower treatment, and the whole group of structures is better served because of the central supply system that we adopted."

Movie Magnate Purchases 11 Room House for $45,000

John J. Cooney, president of the National Theaters corporation, has purchased from Rose Sullivan the new eleven room house at the northwest corner of 80th street and Paxton avenue on a lot 80x125 for a reported $45,000. Harry C. Moylan of Draper & Kramer was broker.

BUYS BERTEAU RESIDENCE.

Ernest A. Franseen bought the eleven room residence of Fred Andrew at 1453 Berteau avenue. J. E. Sterback of Whiteside & Wentworth's uptown office represented both parties.

Plan $100,000 Building at North and Marshfield

A three story store and apartment building will be erected at the northwest corner of Marshfield and North avenues on the vacant property, 75x125 feet, which I. Schuman sold to Morris Comess for a reported $48,000. The building will cost $100,000. E. C. Sumerfield was broker in the deal and Irving Greenspahn was attorney.

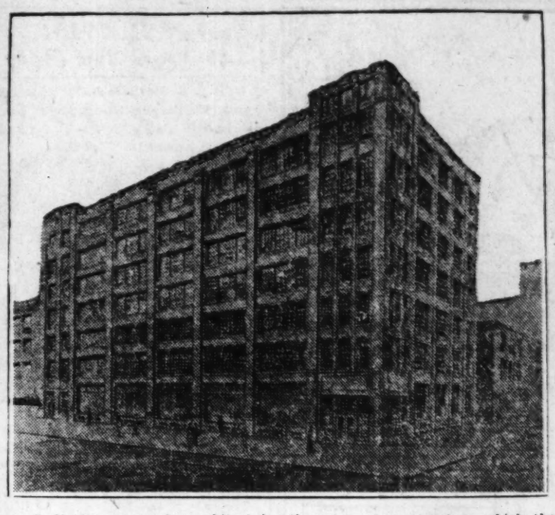
SCHREIBER-BOSWORTH CORNER SOLD.

The nine apartment building at the northeast corner of Schreiber and Bosworth avenues has been sold by Philip Zundel to Lawrence Cunnally. John J. Kern & Co. were brokers.

SELL EVANSTON RESIDENCE.

The heirs of Elizabeth G. Erwood have sold the seven room residence at 1107 Colfax street, Evanston, to Edward G. and Dorothy E. Ince. Smart & Golee were brokers.

AT ELM AND WELLS



S. N. Crowen is the architect for the seven story structure which the Emil J. Paidar company, manufacturers of barber and beauty shop equipment, is erecting at the southwest corner of Wells and Elm streets. The foundation is being constructed so as to permit the addition of four stories later. The building will represent an investment of $400,000.

Brokers' Notes

The Wittbold Realty company has engaged Charles G. Robinson as sales director and will enlarge its sales organization. The firm proposes to put considerable property in the Niles Center district on the market.

Hinkamp & Co., Inc., announce that they are opening a brokerage and insurance office in Western avenue. Yes, Western avenue is the longest street in the city with lots of addresses, but as the 104th carbon copy of the announcement furnished us by Mr. Hinkamp can't be read we are unable to pass on the information. And it's just too hot to plague Mr. Hinkamp by telephone for a correction.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Drollinger are spending their holidays in the west. Mrs. Drollinger is alumnae delegate from Chicago to the Kappa Alpha Theta national convention. After a tour through the Canadian Rockies they will return home, arriving about Aug. 1.

H. Waiss & Co., for the last five years located at the northeast corner of Kenmore and Argyle, have moved to suite 1109-19 City Hall Square building.

Krenn & Dato recently distributed $30,000 in bonuses to members of their sales force. Each sales man received ten per cent of his earnings for the period from July 1 to Dec. 31, 1925 The firm takes this method of distribution to reward salesmen for long service.

Emil Borg Buys Building at Newgard and North Shore

Emil Borg bought the thirteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Newgard and North Shore avenue from Gustaf Sanders for a reported price of $105,000. The buyer gave in part payment the six apartment building at 1434-36 Warner avenue at a reported price of $50,000. L. M. Ellert & Co. represented both parties in the deal.

KIRK'S MAP IS PUBLISHED IN NEW HANDY SIZE

Here's important news for real estate brokers, real estate owners, real estate editors, and, in fact, any Chicagoan who uses a map of his city and surrounding towns and wants his map both accurate and up to date. A brand new edition of Kirk's "Map of Chicago and Suburbs" has just been published, with every one of the 54 plates entirely new and carefully revised

MRS. FRED W. KIRK [TRIBUNE Photo.]

For several years the Kirk map has been revised every six months, the size also being changed twice a year. This summer it's a little bit larger than the small pocket size. Instead of being 4¼x6¼, the new edition is 5x7, a handy size to slip in the side pocket.

Fred W. Kirk, an engineer, at one time with the sanitary district, and Mrs. Kirk work together in keeping their map up to date. Mrs. Kirk handles the business end and also sets up type and assists in the makeup. We believe their map is the most accurate one of Chicago published. In order to forestall the usual phone inquiries (yes, people call up and ask where it can be bought), we'll add that presumably it'll be found in all book and stationery stores.

Garage and Automobile Showroom for N. Crawford

A garage and automobile showroom will be erected by Skobel & Greenberg, builders and realtors, on the property which they recently acquired at 4118-20 North Crawford avenue. Maurice L. Bein is the architect.

PLAN A $195,000 BUSINESS BLOCK AT CICERO-IOWA

Structure Will Have 24 Apartments.

Construction is expected to start in a week or two on a $195,000 store and apartment building at the southwest corner of Cicero avenue and Iowa street, from designs by Sidney Minchin, Inc., architects and engineers.

It will be owned by the Iowa Building company and will occupy a site fronting seventy-five feet on Cicero avenue with a frontage on Iowa street of 135 feet.

Mr. Minchin's design calls for twenty-four apartments all containing four rooms. In addition there'll be three offices and on the Cicero avenue front will be four stores.

The building will be of face brick, with terra cotta trim. The main entrance to the aparment section of the building will be through a court entered by means of ornamental gates on Iowa street.

HOME THIS WEEK DESIGNED ALONG ENGLISH LINES

Oak Park Couple Builds Unique Residence.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Before the cooler days of autumn have begun to make themselves felt this house now under process of construction at 1135 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, Ill., will be a completely finished residence, and the home building problem of one more young couple happily solved.

LOUISE BARGELT. [Chambers Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rasmussen are the owners of this small, distinctive house, and every home builder knows with what interest they are watching each step in the progress of its erection. Allen E. Erickson, 7 West Madison street, Chicago, is the architect.

In design this home is the English cottage type with steep gabled roof lines. The entrance is of common brick fashioned in the same manner and forming an extremely harmonious elevation when viewed from all angles.

To Be Well Insulated.

It is being built of wood on a concrete foundation and covered with a manufactured sheathing over which heavy waterproofed paper is applied. Besides this sheathing, there will be further insulation between the walls and covering the entire ceiling of the second floor. This will add to the warmth of the house in winter and to its coolness in summer. A gas fired furnace, automatically controlled, will be installed, contributing to the general interior cleanliness and offering infinite comfort in the saving of labor involved.

The unusually large windows to the right of the entrance indicate a two story residence. All the windows are the English casement style, made of wood. They slide together in pairs with special hardware so that each window can be opened to the full width from the inside. The screens are to be of copper and will fit on the inside, and instead of the usual strength glass in the main windows, a polished plate glass will be used.

Stained Wood Beams.

The living room rises to the level of the second floor ceiling, with stained wood beams overhead. The plaster here is to have a rough broom finish, while the remainder of the house will have a sand floated plaster finish. An open stairway and balcony contribute all the atmosphere such features provide, and in the fireplace real logs are to be burned.

To the left of the reception hall is the dining room with its built-in cupboards, and looking through a large plaster arch you see a brightly decorated breakfast room with painted furniture. This room has both east and south light, which makes it cheery in the morning.

In the kitchen is a large standard sink, which is forty inches from the floor so as to provide the maximum comfort in using it. There is electric refrigeration and built-in cases and cupboards with ample space for china and other equipment. The working table under the cases extends continuously along under the window and is made of a vitreous material, which is desirable and sanitary to work on. The places for storage of bread and vegetable boxes are all metal lined. Electric outlets have been placed throughout the house and especially in the kitchen for convenience.

Floors of Hard Wood.

The main rooms are to have no wood trim around the door or window openings. The floors throughout are of hard wood with a dark stain, and waxed. A special tile floor is planned for the entrance vestibule and bathroom. Linoleum is in the kitchen.

The lighting fixtures are to carry out the Old English effect throughout. They are to be of wrought iron of natural finish. The heavy plank door which bids the guest welcome at the entrance will have hinges of hammered wrought iron.

Observe in the plans the bedroom on the main floor with toilet and lavatory adjoining it. On the upper floor there is a second bedroom, with two closets, windows on two sides, and bathroom near, but not opening into it.

The general floor space is 39.9x25. The size of the lot on which this house will stand is 50x160 and the approximate cost to build, depending on type of construction and equipment, from $10,000 to $12,000. A house of this size could be built on a 50 foot lot.

FRANK W. BLANKLEY.

William E. Harmon & Co., of which Frank W. Blankey is manager, have purchased about 115 acres bounded by Ashland avenue, Robey street, 75th street, and 78th street from the Dewey & Vance Land and Investment company. The price paid was $175,000. The firm has been negotiating for the property for some time and will develop it into a high class subdivision. The Ashland avenue frontage will be reserved for business purposes and the rest will be given over for residential uses.

The sale of the large piece of property belonging to the Sheffield family in Cornelia street, between Sheffield avenue and Halsted street, was announced during the last week. The property, in the possession of the Sheffield family for fifty years, covers a quarter mile frontage in Cornelia, with a depth of 150 feet in Sheffield and Halsted. It was first conveyed by George St. John Sheffield of Attleboro, Mass., and Henry E. Sheffield of Cleve land to Thomas J. Roche of Chicago for a reported $97,500. Mr. Roche subdivided the property into forty-one lots. It is understood that apartment buildings representing an investment of $1,500,000 will be erected on the property. Mitchell Bros. were brokers.

Harvey W. Slason will erect an eleven story hotel in East 55th street, near the lake, to cost $300,000. Plans for the building are being prepared by H. R. Wilson & Co.

Buys 3 Old Residences in Kinzie St. for Lumber Yard

The Vilas-Harsha Manufacturing company has purchased two pieces of property 69x125 feet and 72x100 feet, south front, in Kinzie street, between Hart and Robey, from Henry P. Meyers, Myrtle Gibeault and Heinrich H. Ludwig for a reported $55,000. The property is now improved with three old residences which will be torn down to make way for a lumber yard.

MORT H. SINGER.

Jacob Franks and others gave a 99 year lease on the property at 255 to 261 Clark street, between Jackson boulevard and Van Buren street, to Mort H. Singer and the Empire circuit company. A theater will be erected on the site. An annual rental of $15,000 is to be paid for the ground.

The Lakeside club property at the southwest corner of 42d street and Grand boulevard was sold to Nettie F. and Cyrus H. McCormick by a master in chancery for $78,518.

Yale university sold to William Gordon and others for $5,000 the property in Harrison street, 100 feet west of Claremont avenue, 26x125 feet.

William M. Gibbons made a 104 year lease on the ground at 45 and 47 Jackson boulevard, from Eugene S. Kimball and Katherine D. Keyes, and then bought the building on the site. The basis of rental gives the property a valuation of $9,615 a front foot.

To July 11, 1896; 30 Years Ago Today

EUGENE S. PIKE.

Eugene S. Pike has sold to Henry M. Stevenson a lot 157x175 feet at the southwest corner of 93d and Pleasant avenue. The buyer will improve the property with a fine residence to cost $16,000.

Real estate dealers of late have been paying considerable attention to the northwest part of the city, in the neighborhood of Milwaukee avenue and Jefferson street, and the present terminal of the Metropolitan L at Logan square. The different electric lines under construction will give that section excellent transportation facilities. All this property lies within a radius of seven and a half miles of the city hall. Lots in that district sell for from $300 to $700 and acres bring from $2,000 to $4,000.

Hessenmueller and Meldahl have just completed plans for a fine apartment house to be erected at Oakley boulevard and Taylor street for Mrs. E. Kies. The building will be divided into eighteen apartments of from three to four rooms and it will cost $80,000.

Pays $85,000 for Building in Stony Island Avenue

Two Homes—Two Years

FIREPLACE

Adequate fire protection demands the use of Metal Lath around chimney breasts, flues and back of kitchen ranges.

CORNERITE

The use of Metal Lath in all corners is an inexpensive means of eliminating the great bulk of corner cracks.

Which will be yours—a home which will "stay new" or one whose interior appearance will be spoiled within the first year or two of home ownership?

You must make your choice when building. A little extra in the plastering budget will give your plasterer an opportunity to do a Better Plastering job—free from cracks, lath streaks and discolorations—free from the dirt streaks which go with any plaster crack—free from unnecessary redecoration expense.

As a matter of fact, a BETTER PLASTERING job on metal lath is the most economical plastering job you can buy. It costs a trifle more to begin with, but it pays out within the first two years.

And there is another point about Better Plastering on metal lath. Not only does it save redecorating expense, but it makes a residence fire-safe as well. A fire starting on one floor will not break through for over an hour—plenty of time for everyone to get out and for the fire department to arrive and extinguish the fire.

PAYS $1,000 AN ACRE FOR MARK MORTON ESTATE

Large Farm in Illinois Central Area Sold.

Another important acre deal in the Butterfield road district of Du Page county is reported in the purchase by Harry A. Reckas, Greek real estate operator, of the east 115 acres of the original Mark Morton estate which Mr. Morton sold about six months ago.

The property lies at the southeast corner of Butterfield and Lea roads, immediately south of Wheaton and a quarter of a mile east of the intersection of the Butterfield and Naperville roads. It is across the street from the Gregory farm which Mr. Reckas bought and sold within the last ninety days.

Mr. Reckas paid a reported price of $1,800 an acre for the property and it is understood he is contemplating subdividing. Tutules & Dignan represented the buyer and Lindheimer & Wells the seller. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were the attorneys.

Buys Stade Farm.

An undisclosed purchaser has taken title to the Henry Stade farm of 125 acres at the northeast corner of Sauk trail and Central avenue, a mile and a half west of the Illinois Central electrification terminal. The price was not given. The property, which has been owned by the Stade family for several years, was purchased for investment. Loeb & Hammel were brokers.

Herman Goldwyn has sold to Oliver Salinger twenty-five acres located at the corner of 55th and Crawford avenue for an undisclosed price. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were attorneys in the deal.

$40,000 for 40 Acres.

Rudolph Zajaczeck bought from John Ellers forty acres located at the northeast corner of Tuohy and Elmwood avenues, Elk Grove, for a reported price of $40,000. The buyer proposes to subdivide the property.

Carroll J. Lord of Chicago has purchased from Gilbert D. Johnson and Brother the 345 acre Indian Lake development immediately north of the Biltmore country estates. The property lies west of Lake Zurich and north of Barrington. The price was not disclosed.

NEW YORK REALTY EXPERT PRAISES LONG TERM LEASE

Interesting comment regarding the relative merits of long term ground leases and ownerships in fee was made the other day by F. T. H. Bacon, New York real estate expert. The discussion arose over the Wendel homestead at 39th street and Fifth avenue, which has stood for years despite the modern improvements surrounding.

"It is futile to say that the undeveloped plot at Fifth avenue and 39th street is holding up New York," he said. "Any one acquainted with the history of New York real estate knows that the policy of the estate owning that plot is anything but nearsighted.

"I believe that the long term lease, when properly developed, is perfectly safe and comparable in safety with fee ownership, and this method of operating certainly insures a more just and equitable distribution of profits. Long term leases with proper renewal clauses, with the land improved adequately, create a leasehold estate of ample security for mortgage money."

Mr. Bacon said the tendency to long term leaseholds will become more and more pronounced, especially in populous centers. Titles in fee, he stated, will be deemed too valuable to sell for any consideration.

A. A. Lewis Company Pays $509,400 for 58 Acres

The A. A. Lewis Realty Trust has purchased fifty-eight acres at the southwest corner of Dempster street and Crawford avenue for a reported price of $509,400. The property is in Niles Center and runs west to the Evanston Golf club. The brokers were Ira D. Malbrough and S. J. Gould. The firm plans to subdivide the property, restricting it to high grade apartment buildings and fireproof commercial structures.

Amazing Lumber

{NOT CUT FROM TREES}

As sheathing... provides insulation at no extra building cost
. . . many other uses

AS SHEATHING
Celotex supplies the insulation needed back of brick, wood or stucco exteriors. Here it replaces the rough boards formerly used, gives greater strength to the house walls and makes building paper unnecessary.

NO home built today need be too hot in summer, too cold in winter, noisy, damp, or wasteful of fuel!

An amazing heat-stopping lumber now enables you to enjoy the great comforts and advantages of insulation without adding one cent to building cost.

Its success has been tremendous. More than 90,000 homes have been erected with it. Everywhere, progressive builders are adopting it. They say it has set a new standard of American building practice.

This amazing lumber is Celotex. It is not cut from trees, but is manufactured from the long, tough fibres of cane into broad, strong boards. Thus, unlike ordinary insulation, Celotex is not an extra item in building. It insulates while it builds . . . insulates better . . . builds stronger walls.

AS SHEATHING (the boards that cover the outside of the house framework) Celotex simply replaces the rough wood lumber formerly used. Here, it provides the insulation needed back of wood siding, shingle, brick or stucco exteriors at no added building cost.

It gives you very important advantages over wood sheathing.

In addition to providing insulation, Celotex makes your house stronger. A wall sheathed with Celotex is many times more rigid than one sheathed with wood lumber.

This is because Celotex is applied in broad boards which afford a greater angle of bracing than the narrow wood lumber.

It saves labor costs, too. The big, broad boards are easier and quicker to apply than wood sheathing. No special tools or extra framing are needed. Any type of exterior finish may be applied over Celotex.

OTHER USES. Elsewhere, Celotex costs a trifle more than ordinary construction, at first, but is a great economy.

Under plaster, replacing lath, it costs a few cents more per yard, but gives added insulation, greater strength, and less upkeep expense because of no lath-marks, fewer cracks.

Moreover, with the walls and roof of your house covered with Celotex, a smaller, less expensive heating plant and smaller radiators will keep you comfortable.

And year after year, Celotex will save from 25% to 35% of your fuel bill.

NEW COMFORT for old homes. In houses already built, a big measure of this comfort and economy is being secured by lining attics and basements with Celotex. That helps a lot and costs but little. These great advantages are available for everyone who builds or buys a home right now!

IF YOU ARE GOING TO BUILD talk with your architect, contractor or lumber dealer about Celotex. Leaders in these lines advise its use. All lumber dealers can supply it.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO BUY see that Celotex is used before you put any money into a house. Now that Celotex has made insulation practical, heat-leaking houses are a poor investment. The authorities say that such houses are becoming obsolete: hard to sell, rent or borrow money on.

Meanwhile, send for the free Celotex Building Book. It explains fully this great improvement in building. Just mail the coupon below.

INSULATING LUMBER

NOW . . . Celotex Houses are BONDED!

To help buyer and seller, this Gold Bond is issued to prove that insulating lumber was used.

A nation-wide demand has come for insulation, now that Celotex has made insulation practical. People refuse to put up with living in old-time heat-leaking houses. They want the new standard of home comfort and economy which Celotex brings.

But Celotex is usually hidden in the walls and roof.

To protect the buyer . . . to assist the seller . . . to provide insulation evidence for every owner to use in transferring property or transacting loans, The Celotex Company now issues a Gold Bond, signed and sealed by the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York—a certain guarantee!

Before buying a house or any building ask to see this bond.

Before building arrange with your lumber dealer to supply it to you.

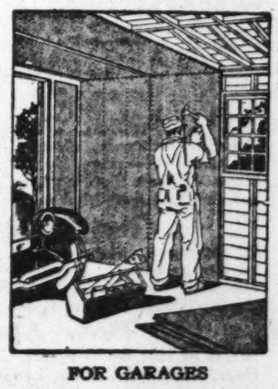
Some day it will prove very valuable. For it will prove to buyer or banker that your house provides all the comforts and economies of Celotex insulation . . . winter-warmth . . . summer-coolth . . . easy and economical heating . . . protection against wind and dampness, colds and sickness.

And a few years from now, unless your house is insulated it will be far below the standard . . . out-of-date, hard to sell, rent or borrow money on.

UNDER PLASTER
On inside walls and ceilings, plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex. This eliminates the use of lath and gives stronger, insulated walls: less apt to crack and free from lath-marks.

FOR OLD HOUSES
In homes already built, a big measure of Celotex comfort and economy may be secured by lining attics and basements with it. In the attic an extra finished room can be made by nailing Celotex to the roof rafters. In the basement line the ceiling with Celotex.

IN THE ROOF
Most heat beats into houses through roofs in summer, causing hot attics. Most heat leaks out through roofs in winter, causing high fuel bills. Celotex applied over or under roof rafters gives the needed protection. Both uses are recommended.



FOR GARAGES
The heat of your car itself, after running, will keep a Celotex garage warm unless the weather is way below zero. It costs but little to build a garage of Celotex; and anyone can line a garage already built, quickly and easily, as shown here.

FARM AND GARDEN

Kicking Cow Proves to Be Asset Rather than a Liability

Starts Fine Dairy Herd on the Farm of B. L. Thomas.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

BERT L. THOMAS is the only farmer I ever saw or heard of who thought enough of a kicking cow to have her picture taken and preserved in the family album. No one blames him for treasuring the dingy photograph of Meah Minnie after they have heard the story of this grand old black and white cow. A bronze statue of Min would be erected at Thomas' front gate if there was enough money in dairy farming to justify the expenditure.

No one blames this queen of the pastures for leaving scores of battered buckets along her trail. It all started one night at milking time in M. S. Campbell's barn at Genoa, Ill. about twenty-three years ago. A prowling cat came mewing along the top of the stanchion to get his squirt of warm milk and sprang onto Min's back. Then with bellows and snorts the fur flew—the bucket, milk, and stool went flying over the cuckoo's nest. After that the fur flew every time a milker with his stool and bucket came near her.

Min is now dead, but she was one of the greatest factors in the building of the good herd on Thomas' farm, as well as many other herds in the Chicago dairy belt. Every animal except two herd bulls in the Thomas herd of twenty-six pure breds are offspring of Meah Minnie. Ever since Mr. Thomas sold Min in 1911 he has kept a herd of from 20 to 30 animals and sold about $1,000 worth of young cows and bulls each year. His cows have averaged 10,000 pounds of milk containing 3.5 per cent, or 350 pounds, of butterfat annually for the last three years.

Making a Fine Record.

His best cow of the Meah Minnie strain will produce about 16,000 pounds of milk containing 500 pounds of butterfat this year. To date she has produced officially nearly 13,000 pounds of milk and more than 400 pounds of butterfat and her record does not end until October.

Bert Thomas, who lives a half mile north of Greenwood, Ill., was a member of the first cow testing association in Illinois. A. J. Glover, now editor of "Hoard's Dairyman," was the association's official tester, sent out by the University of Illinois. Mr. Glover's first tests of the Thomas herd twenty-four years ago showed that his cows were producing about 5,000 pounds of milk containing 200 pounds of butter. At that time it took all the money received for the butter, selling at 20 cents a pound, to pay the feed bill.

"When our first test was finished Mr. Glover showed me that my cows were only producing enough to pay their feed cost, which was then about $40 a year," said Mr. Thomas. "We made some money raising heifers and selling them to other farmers for milkers. But my cows were not the right kind, and Mr. Glover advised me to get a dairy breed. He said that he knew of a cow, referring to Meah Minnie, owned by Mr. Campbell, that could be bought for a song. I bought old Min for $60 and got my real start in dairying."

A Cow Tamer.

In his neighborhood Bert Thomas was considered quite a cow tamer, and he bought Min with the full confidence that he would be able to "break her of that devilish kicking habit." But after a few trials he gave up and used her for seven years as a breeder and nurse cow. She produced six calves on the Thomas farm, two bulls and four heifers, which served as the foundation of his present fine herd of Holsteins. Today there is not a kicker in the entire herd of eleven milkers, five two year old heifers, three yearlings, and seven calves.

While her kicking habit was not handed down to her offspring, Min was branded as a kicker, which is always unpopular with dairymen. But, fortunately, records showed that Meah Minnie was of a royal family. She was sired by Rijaneta's Prince Herbert. Her dam was Meahmine. With a good family tree back of her, Min was kept long enough to prove that there was royal blood in her veins and that her kicking habit must be credited to the impatient cat.

Even in this day of high record cows a dairyman has a right to be proud of a herd that averages 10,000 pounds of milk with 350 pounds of butter fat. Mr. Thomas has been selling his cows while they are young at an average of $200 a head. The bulls average about $100 each, sold as calves from five to twelve months old. Cows from the Meah Minnie strain have been sold by Mr. Thomas at prices ranging from $150 to $385 a head.

Diversified Dairy Farming.

"With conditions as they are today in the Chicago dairy territory I am able to make some money in the dairy farming game by selling surplus milk cows," said Mr. Thomas. "I pay my running expenses with my milk check and the money we get from chickens and eggs, and whatever I get out of the surplus cattle is profit.

"I make a go of it running a diversified dairy farm by having something to sell almost every time I go to town. Dairying is our main business, but we raise a few pigs, chickens, vegetables, and fruit, and sell all that we don't need here on the farm.

"On my 47 acre farm I manage to grow all the roughage for my live stock and buy about a ton of concentrated food each month. At present prices my concentrated feed costs about $35 a ton or $420 a year," he said.

Official records kept by the McHenry Cow Testing association, working in coöperation with the extension department of the University of Illinois, show that Mr. Thomas' total average feed costs on a hundred pounds of milk for the last few years are as follows: 1921, $1.08; 1922, $1.02; 1923, 80 cents, and 1924, 85 cents. During 1925 and up to the present time the cost of feed in producing 100 pounds of milk on the Thomas farm has been from 61 cents to $1.28. These figures do not include any of the numerous other costs involved in the production of milk.

On the forty-seven acres Mr. Thomas has about seven acres in fruit trees and vegetables, and forty acres are used in the growing of corn, oats, barley, alfalfa, and clover for roughage. About two-thirds of the corn is made into silage. This year he has the following crops: Corn, 19 acres; oats, 6 acres; barley, 5 acres, alfalfa, 4 acres, and sweet clover, 6 acres.

From a flock of 150 chickens Mrs. Thomas sells all of the eggs to special customers in Chicago at a premium price of from 5 to 10 cents a dozen above the local market price. The eggs are gathered twice a day, candled, and shipped in twelve dozen size cases.

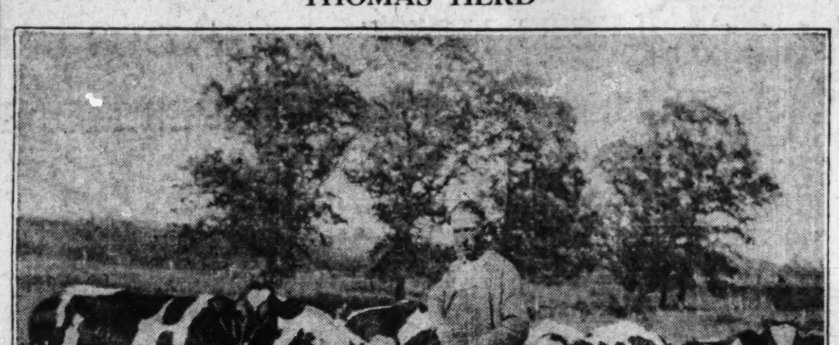
Labor Costs Avoided.

Mr. Thomas never pays out any cash for labor. He avoids hiring help by trading work with two of his neighbors. They use one another's machinery in order to avoid equipping their small farms with a full line of implements.

Mr. Thomas' herd was the first in his county to be accredited under the coöperative state-federal plan of testing cattle for tuberculosis. He was the first farmer to test his herd for tuberculosis by private test in McHenry county, and has had his cattle under state-federal supervision since 1918. He is one of the organizers of the Pure Milk association, started in the Chicago milk zone more than a year ago by men with herds that have passed the tuberculin test.

Bert Thomas is one of those farmers who "would make a good living on a rock" while "some people would grow poor on a mountain of gold."

THOMAS' HERD



ALL FROM A KICKING COW—Bert L. Thomas is shown here knee deep in blue grass on his farm near Greenwood, Ill., with a part of his herd of dairy cattle, all offspring of a cow that refused to be milked by any man. The cows in his present herd have officially produced annually an average of 10,000 pounds of milk, containing 350 pounds of butter fat, for the last three years. The Holstein in the foreground will produce about 16,000 pounds of milk with 500 pounds of butter fat this year. Mr. Thomas' herd was in the first cow testing association in Illinois, the first accredited tuberculosis free herd in McHenry county, and the first to be given the private tuberculin test in his county.

"We'll let them go till morning—"

SO says the hostess, leading the way out of the dining room, and the guests rejoice—even the ones who say,—"Oh, let's do them now."

Washing stacks of cold, soiled dishes the morning after is not so pleasant. It ruins the whole day.

With a Classic Sink Fixture in your kitchen, washing dishes can be done so quickly, easily, pleasantly you'll never hesitate to let your guests do their share towards cleaning up.

With the working unit that's changed as easily as a light bulb

The whole job is over and done with in no time and there's no "morning after" in the kitchen.

The Classic spray, a brush and plenty of good hot water will put your dishes and glassware to rights in a surprisingly short time. (And no red, swollen hands afterward.)

The Classic has scores of convenient uses, but this is one that appeals to women most.

You can get a Classic from your plumber. Price, $15.00. Or call, write or telephone.

A Recreational Opportunity

The Shaded Areas are ten miles southwest of Land o' Lakes, which is located on the C. & N. W. and on the line between Wisconsin and Michigan. This property is accessible by auto, and the entire frontage is sandy beach, and most of it has ample shade. It is a good game refuge and in the center of the best hunting grounds in Wisconsin. The present owner logged the pine from these lands over twenty years ago.

The peninsula in Island Lake is of ample width for a road in center and cottage sites on either side. It would be an ideal place for a hotel or clubhouse and cottages.

SIGNS POINT TO 1926 AS BANNER BUILDING YEAR

Spend Over 3 Billion in First 6 Months.

America's great progress in building construction is continuing at the pace established after the close of the war and for the first six months of 1926 the estimated value of construction was $3,500,000,000. This information is contained in a survey made by the Indiana Limestone Quarrymen's association and is based on reports from several hundred cities and towns. The figures for this year are approximately $500,000,000 over those of last year.

"For the last three years building construction has set new records in an effort to make up an enormous shortage and to keep pace with our industrial expansion and population growth," says Thomas J. Vernia, president of the association.

"The long predicted major reaction has failed to materialize. The talk of a serious recession is now characterized by some authorities as largely psychological. Checking over the reports from some of the principal cities, there is little sign of a general slump. In New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Houston, Dallas, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, Atlanta, Boston, Detroit, Baltimore, Indianapolis, Seattle, and many other cities construction is well maintained, figures in some instances running well ahead of last year.

New York District Leads.

"Total construction for the month of June, as shown in preliminary reports, amounted to approximately $235,000,000 for the entire country. New York City and vicinity continues as the leading zone of activity. Texas is one of the most active states, Houston chalking up huge gains over last year. Other leading Texas cities report broad scale activities.

"Developments throughout the major portion of the south are greatly augmented, with the exception of Florida, which shows less spectacular increases than heretofore. Building operations of good volume, however, are anticipated in all the larger Florida cities during the ensuing months.

"Residential construction continues to head the nation's building program, amounting for about forty-four per cent of the entire volume. Demand for public works accounts for eighteen per cent. Commercial building, which is thirteen per cent, and religious and educational construction, amounting to ten per cent, show clear increases. Industrial construction accounts for eight per cent, and miscellaneous building about 7 per cent of the total.

Several Different Types.

"It is interesting to note the class of construction in greatest demand in various sections of the country. For instance, in New York and the northern New Jersey district a remarkable increase in residential building is noted, while a slump in this type is apparent in the southeastern, northwestern, central western, Pittsburgh and Texas districts.

"In Texas and the central west commercial building is quite active. The Pittsburgh district reports a greater volume of public works. A surprisingly small percentage of public works construction is going on in New York and the northern New Jersey district, although contemplated projects in that section indicate the hesitancy is but temporary.

"In considering the growing expenditure for building construction of late years, it is well to remember that despite the immigration barriers, there are 2,000,000 more persons each year for whom housing facilities must be provided. Moreover, there must be new mills and factories to provide food and clothing. Along with this national growth has developed a tendency to dismantle antiquated buildings and erect modern structures in their places. This is an item of no small importance in the construction totals.

Will Advance Go On?

"It is, of course, debatable whether building activities for the rest of the year will continue at the high rate of the last six months. The enormous amount of building commitments to date makes it seem probable that any recession during the summer months would be easily offset by larger fall activities. Construction is progressing along a stable course, and it is reasonable to expect that the volume this year will reach, if not exceed, the record breaking figure of 1925. Conditions are basically sound, and the belief now is that the barometer of general business is more likely to rise than to fall."

Foundry Equipment Firm Adds to Chicago Plant

The Chicago branch of the Hill & Griffith company, manufacturers of foundry equipment, has secured from the B. & O. C. T. railway additional acreage adjoining its present plant at 4606 West 16th street, where it will erect additional buildings. The main office of the firm is in Cincinnati, but the improvements here will be carried out under the supervision of the district manager, M. Z. Fox.

Something to remember until you have an Asbestos Roof

PERIODIC destruction of whole city areas by fire leaping from roof to roof has led many cities to bar inflammable roofings from within their limits. They demand that their roofing be a blanket of protection against the tremendous hazard of roof communicated fire.

Make your roof fire-safe

In the meantime, ever increasing thousands of home owners are giving their roofs the fire-safety of asbestos roofings whether such safety is required by law or not.

For, in countless cases, Johns-Manville Asbestos Roofings and Shingles have saved buildings from what seemed certain destruction. Made of indestructible asbestos rock fibre, they are proof against sparks and flying brands, giving a priceless protection against fire.

The blow torch test which shows the fire-safety of Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles

With this protection goes an almost unbelievable permanence. Asbestos resists the elements as well as it resists flame. It cannot rot, rust or corrode. Hence Johns-Manville Asbestos Roofings and Shingles will outlast the buildings they cover. They scorn the need of either repairs or replacement.

Asbestos is economical

This means economy. Put Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles on your home and Asbestos Roofing on your business buildings and you pay less per year than with other types of roofing. Your banker will recommend the economy of asbestos roofing as quickly as your fire-chief will endorse its fire-safety.

Nor is the first cost of asbestos roofing necessarily high. Johns-Manville No. 70 gray asbestos shingles will beautify and protect your home at a cost comparable to other less permanent roofings. Get prices from your roofer and compare. The names of Johns-Manville dealers in shingles and roofing appear below. Get in touch with the one nearest you, or, if you prefer, fill out the coupon and mail it to us direct.

Re-roof for the last time

Lay Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles right over the old shingles. You save time, money and the muss of torn off shingles, and get a beautiful, permanent, fire-safe roof.

Watrous Plumbing Fixtures

Installed in Every Type of Modern Building

A MORE representative group of up-to-date buildings could not be found than those pictured above, nor could any show a wider range in character or purpose.

In the new Augustana Hospital, illustrated on the left, every detail of equipment represents the ultimate in medical and surgical progress. The farthest advance in hotel, theatre and office building design is illustrated in the Eitel Central Block, seen in the upper illustration; and the picture at the right shows a typical modern industrial structure—the home of the famous Paris Garters.

Each of these buildings furnishes an example of Watrous plumbing installations, in which modern sanitary equipment reaches its closest approach to perfection in hygienic and economical operation.

Watrous

Flush Valves and Duojet Closets

Clogging and Overflowing Prevented—Water-waste Avoided

WATROUS FLUSH VALVE INSTALLED IN COMBINATION WITH DUOJET FLOOR CLOSET

A FEATURE of design in the Watrous Duojet Closet avoids the narrow outlet passage beyond the trap which the usual single-jet type requires in order to establish syphonic action, but which often causes obstruction and overflows.

In the Watrous Duojet Closet a thorough and immediate flush is effected by means of two powerful converging jets. The outlet passage is much wider beyond the trap than at the entrance, so that anything that can enter can escape at the other end.

The speed and certainty of Duojet action eliminates the water-waste occasioned by the longer and less certain method of single-jet operation.

The Watrous Flush Valve delivers the exact amount of water needed by the bowl with which it is used—and no more. Maximum economy is therefore assured when it is installed in combination with the water-saving Duojet Closet.

The Watrous wall bowl, shown on the right, operates on the same Duojet principle as the floor type, and has the self-evident advantage of simplifying the work of cleansing the toilet-room floor. It also promotes speed and economy in the erection of new buildings by avoiding furred ceilings and closet connections in floors.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by Sara Moore

HUMAN NATURE.

I do not fall for fame or gold,
Nor shall love wreck my reputation;
My ruin may be wrought, no doubt,
By more insidious temptation.

No handsome devil dazzles me,
I drink no dangerous amount;
Disaster dogs my heels at that—
I've opened a new charge account.

Blueprint:
The business sense that I possess
Results in frantic S O S,
And safety first for little me
Lies in these letters: C O D.

EXCITEMENT IN THE SUBURBS.

Our little town spreads through a park;
The village, just like Noah's ark,
Is filled with twos and twos;
There are no spares at all out there,
And since each unit is a pair,
Each one is some one's whose.

I never talk with any man,
Unless by some neat social plan
His wife and my man chat;
By two we lunch, play bridge, or dine,
By two accept, by two decline;
Suburban life's like that.

But dashed traditions loom ahead;
Eight bachelors, all thoroughbred,
Have rented for the season
The residence of M. E. A.;
And since eight odds have come to stay,
There is the very deuce to pay—
It threatens civic treason.

Encamped here at our twosome doors—
Eight extra men . . . all bachelors!
Ah, well, luck doesn't rain. It pours!

MAMIE HICKEY'S DIARY.

My tenderness was sweet, and deep, and gentle—
Experience warm heartedness has cooled;
The next young and romantic husband
Who'd touch my soul will be but badly fooled.
The sigh, "Alas, my wife misunderstands me!"
Will stir me to no ardent sympathy,
For I have learned the trouble is most always,
That wives do understand—too perfectly!

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

1—The diaphanous bolero and georgette-and-jet fringe skirt of this model are outstanding features of the summer mode.

2—The all-white evening gown of chiffon is worn with a scarf of green chiffon, and jade and enamel pendants.

3—The irregular tiered skirt of this grege mousseline frock is an important summer style feature.

4—Pale pink chiffon, girdled a la Egyptienne, in silver lame, is trimmed with strands and buckle of pearls.

DROOPING HEMLINES MARK THE MODE.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—If you want to "step out" in fashionable circles this summer, you would better see to it that your hemline droops somewhere in its course around your skirt. The skirt itself may smartly follow an even line all around the horizon of the hem, but in that case fashion insists on a drooping panel, a cluster of fringe, or a little fish tail train that terminates a goodly number of inches below the bottom of the skirt. A few years ago when skirts were cut on the bias, with a seam in back, it was one of the worst crimes against good dressing if even the slightest sag appeared, and a lot of us sat up nights and got wrinkles worrying over a fraction of an inch too much skirt in any particular spot around the hem. Today, along with other evidences of the changing times, that crime has become a virtue, and since straight skirts do not sag even with age, Paris puts the sag on in the beginning by innumerable devices of differing sorts.

Distinguished women, who never wear the wrong thing, are seen wearing long, raggle-taggle panels of unhemmed chiffon at the sides of their short, tubelike skirts. Of course, the mere fact that such women have taken up the idea makes it a distinction. It does give a much needed grace and a positive kind of charm to a frock. That is probably because this introduced droop has its inception in an unchanging principle of beauty. It lengthens and enhances the line, and it also makes the in motion aspect of a gown a good deal more attractive.

The evening mode in Paris is not a brilliant one, from the color standpoint. I have never seen so many black, white, and neutral toned frocks as during the present social season. The present habit of sticking to unostentatious color schemes is more than made up for by two things, the originality of the embroidery used on beaded frocks, and the exquisite cut of the simple chiffon frock — these, and the irregularity of the hemline.

I have chosen for our sketches today four models that were selected from a good many hundreds of frocks that are to be seen during the height of the social season in Paris. They represent the ideal evening frock from several different angles, as worn by the discriminating woman.

Our first model is one of the outstanding successes of the season, and it is a flawless creation from that genius of the Paris couture, Chanel. I have seen it worn by a half dozen women whose names are of awe inspiring importance, and it seemed equally personal to each. Marquise de Jaucourt wore the particular frock sketched. It is made of black crêpe georgette over a foundation of black crêpe, and the straight skirt is entirely hidden by fringes of black georgette covered with black jet spangles. These spangles are held closely to the figure by lines of stitching that rise to points in the center front to just above the knees, from which point to the hemline they form a novel flounce. At the right side of this flounce is a cluster of longer fringes that hang almost to the ankles and give the enviable irregular hemline in a different sort of way.

The waist, which is made of black georgette, blouses just to the normal waistline and is straight then to the hips where it is finished by a curved band of georgette. Over this simplest of blouses is worn a black bolero, of crêpe georgette, naturally. The bolero is banded with black jet paillettes, and a knee length flat tassel of jet and georgette hangs from the right shoulder in back. The décolletage of the bolero in back is extremely deep, rounded and edged in jet. This dress presents the elaborate evening gown that is approved in Paris by the socially prominent woman.

Our second figure is the opposite—the evening gown of extreme simplicity. Comtesse Henri de Zogheb appeared recently in this gown at Le Touquet. It is no more ostentatious than the rising of the moon, but it outshines any number of ornate frocks that are designed solely to blast the eye in the first glance. The material, in fact all of the gown, for there is no trimming, is white mousseline de soie. The bodice is a straight sheath, with a rounded neck and armholes, and the skirt is draped by the expert, so that it falls in a series of flat cascades at the left side front, the points falling well below the bottom of the skirt. The skirt is cut with a long tunic which shows about two inches of the white foundation beneath.

Such a dress demands definitely decorative accessories, and Madame la Comtesse has chosen two jade and enamel fobs which are decoratively placed on the bodice and the flat girdle. In addition to this she wears a long scarf of tender, spring green chiffon, which is draped over the right shoulder, and which serves to give additional variation to the hemline. Add a number of bracelets and you have the complete ensemble, with silver slippers and mauve tinted stockings to make the finale.

Our third model is another one of those uncomplicated evening frocks that are so difficult to achieve and so much in favor with women to whom dressing is an art conquered. This dress was worn by Lady Davis at one of the smart dinner dances not long ago. It is also of mousseline de soie, inch color that is called grége, and which is the shade of the outer shell of the cocon, neither gray, silver, nor beige, but a bit of all three. The skirt is made up of a series of scantily circular tiers, each of which is allowed to sag fashionably in a point on the right side, so that the result is a sort of cascade of ripples and points. The girdle is a negligible folded strip of mousseline passing beneath a carved ivory buckle, which seems to catch and hold the drapery of the tiers. The blouse is straight, with a V-neckline and completed by a scarf of self-material that is like a folded collar around the neck, and is caught under a big chiffon flower of the same tone as the dress.

Our last model is one of the Drecoll successes, worn by La Baronne de la Gatinerie. It also is of chiffon, in palest pink, with a buckle of pearls attaching the Egyptian girdle of silver Lamé, and lines of pearls edging the drapery at the center front of the skirt. The bodice has suggestions of cap sleeves, these being bands of pink chiffon which form oval draperies under the arms, and meeting the panel of chiffon which makes a short train in back.

The neckline is gathered ever so slightly on a bias band, making that becoming fullness in front and back which is always attractive for every figure. La Baronne wears with this gown a double string of pearls and the wide bracelets that are now so much in vogue.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

By CLOTILDE

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

A CAP FOR THE BABY.

THIS lovely baby cap is something I feel sure all prospective mothers will be delighted with. Besides being so pretty and dainty looking, it is entirely practical, as it can be easily removed from the quilted silk lining and opened out perfectly flat for laundering.

The materials required are ¼ yard of the finest dotted Swiss, 1½ yards of the tiny lace beading or insertion, 1½ yards of half inch wide thread or Valenciennes lace edging, and 5 yards of quarter inch wide pink or blue ribbon.

The diagram with measurements given should make it perfectly easy to cut the cap. After it is cut out, roll and hem all edges; then whip the little beading or insertion on all around. This beading is lace and not over ¼ inch wide. Then roll and hem the edges of the piece that lie back over the cap, whip the beading on and then the lace edge around the shaped edge of this piece. Then this shaped piece is overhanded in tiny stitches to the middle of the beading around the face part of the cap.

It is laid back in place on the cap and then the lace edging is whipped to the middle of the beading around the face of the cap and across the bottom of the back. Where the edging ends each side of the back lacing the edges must be turned in and hemmed nicely. And where the edging ends on the shaped piece of the cap it must be hemmed and caught invisibly over the lace edge of the cap.

The ribbon is run through the beading up the back as the picture shows and drawn up to fit. The pretty rosettes and little rose, both made of the ribbon, make the right finish; and instead of the usual tie strings the ribbon is braided, fastened to the inside of the cap at the bottom on one side, and fastened to the opposite side with a small snap.

The quilted silk lining cap can be bought and the cap basted to it, under the turned back piece around the face.

This little cap would make an acceptable gift.

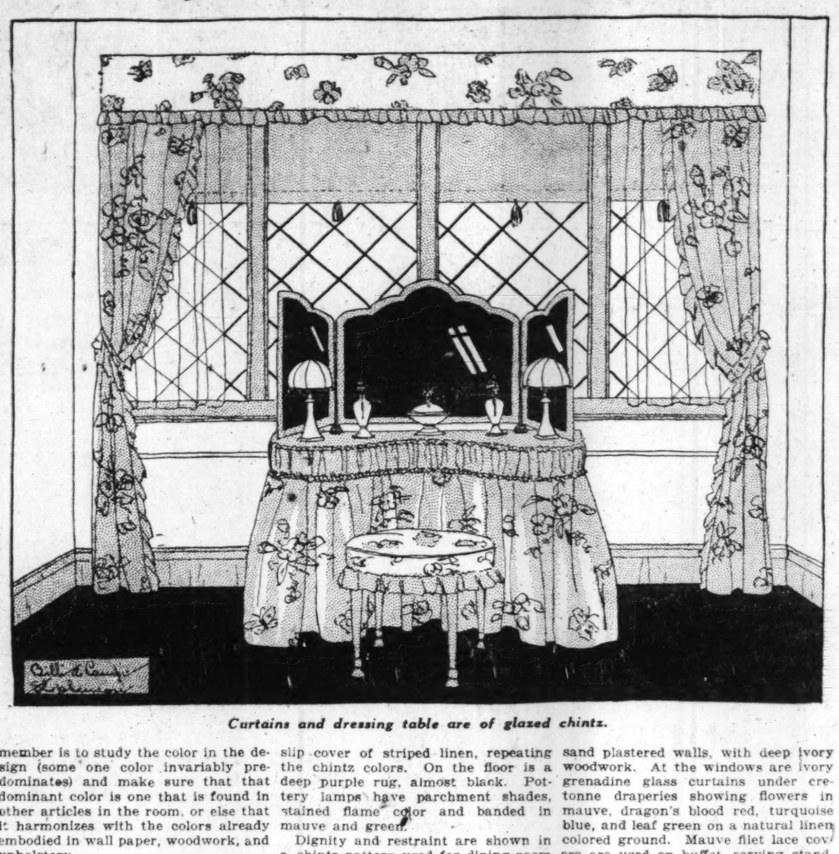
The HOME HARMONIOUS
by Anita de Campi

CHINTZES ENLIVEN ANY ROOM.

EVERY home needs at least one room that is gay with chintz. Home makers have learned that decorative textiles are of inestimable importance in the attainment of beautiful surroundings. The chintzes and cretonnes now being made offer a myriad of possibilities. New and refreshing patterns from abroad, smart color combinations, novel ideas to enliven any room, all with an air of refinement, are embodied in these lovely fabrics. Patterns come in the widest variety, so that there is a wealth of good styles from which to choose. Crisp, fresh looking glazed chintzes are to be had in designs of quaint charm. Lovely old historic chintzes for the New England cottage are being reproduced. Almost any woman is bound to be interested in a room fitted with hangings, bed covers, or slip covers, and upholstery of chintz.

Joyous indeed is the thought that it is no longer necessary to have a bulging pocket book in order to have a truly decorative home. Excellent domestic cretonnes and printed linens may be obtained at $1.25 to $1.50 a yard, while delightful patterns are to be found as low as 45 cents. Representative types of design range from the bold and startling colors of the ultra-modern patterns to the quaint charm of delicately flowered colonial chintzes. And in this wide range are designs suitable for use in every room in the house. Living room, library, bedroom, and dining room can share in the fascinating decorative schemes which are now made possible.

Every one knows that color is an important element in the decorative scheme of any room. Obviously then, in rooms where plain, natural walls and furnishings cannot be changed, colorful chintzes are bound to play a leading role in transforming the drabness to a fascinating gayety. The proper handling of different colors may work seeming miracles in changing the size, light, and relative warmth or coolness of a room. Yellow has the greatest light giving power. Colors composed of a considerable amount of yellow are luminous or light giving colors. Red, and shades composed of red, have a tendency to come forward and make things seem nearer than they are. Blue and violet, and their derivatives, are darkening colors, having an opposite effect to that of red tones and yellows. Colors in which red and yellow predominate give the illusion of heat, so that they are particularly well adapted to use in north rooms. Those dominated by blue and violet give the effect of coolness and should be used in rooms where there is a great deal of light and sunshine. In selecting chintzes, a good rule to remember is to study the color in the design (some one color invariably predominates) and make sure that that dominant color is one that is found in other articles in the room, or else that it harmonizes with the colors already embodied in wall paper, woodwork, and upholstery.



Curtains and dressing table are of glazed chintz.

Charming and interesting is an informal living room in which the walls are tinted a light soft green to match that in the chintz window draperies. Woodwork is painted a deeper mauve than the chintz background. A pattern of soft green foliage, with pheasants in gold, green, and flame, shows to advantage backgrounded against the mauve. The richness and warmth of the coloring heightens the livableness of the room. In addition to window draperies, the same chintz is used for slip covers on a large sofa and on two arm chairs. A third chair has a slip cover of striped linen, repeating the chintz colors. On the floor is a deep purple rug, almost black. Pottery lamps have parchment shades, stained flame color and banded in mauve and green.

Dignity and restraint are shown in a chintz pattern used for dining room draperies. Paneled walls are tinted a pale parchment yellow. The furniture is walnut, with chair seats upholstered in powder blue denim. At the arched windows are chintz draperies with flowers in powder blue, gray, bright orange with blue—green leaves on a black ground. These draperies are unlined so that, hung against the light as they are, the rich, clear colors glow with a softly illuminated effect. On the buffet are pieces of rich old brass, the candelabra fitted with powder blue candles. The floor is rugged in deep blue chenille.

Another dining room has natural sand plastered walls, with deep ivory woodwork. At the windows are ivory grenadine glass curtains under cretonne draperies showing flowers in mauve, dragon's blood red, turquoise blue, and leaf green on a natural linen colored ground. Mauve filet lace covers are used on buffet, serving stand and dining table. On the buffet is a lovely set of amber glass. Above hangs a decorative panel of Japanese brocade. Over the serving table is an arch-topped mirror. A wrought iron fernery of graceful design stands in front of a group of windows. Repeating the deep red of the flowers in the chintz is the upholstery of the chair seats.

In a lovely sun room, window draperies and box cushions for the jade green reed furniture are made of glazed chintz showing clusters of flowers which seem to bring the freshness and perfume of the garden directly into the room. The design is in gay, naturalistic colors on a pale lemon yellow ground. An edging for the draperies is made of short accordion plaited ruffles of plain, jade green glazed chintz, and the seat cushions for the furniture are piped with the green. Accessory cushions are covered with linen, repeating the colors of the flowers. On the floor is a black and ecru fiber rug. The walls are pale lemon yellow and the woodwork is green.

Modernistic is a sun room done in black, white and red. The walls are a rough white plaster, the woodwork marbleized black. At the many windows are draw curtains of sunfast cretonne, showing an amusing futuristic pattern in black and red on a white ground. The furniture is painted black, decorated with a fine line of scarlet. Black and white checked gingham, finished with short, saucy ruffles of red, makes interesting cushions. Lamp shades for the black wrought iron lamps are made of white parchment paper, banded in black and red. A card table, incessantly called into use in this room, is painted brilliant scarlet.

Pink is the dominant color in a young girl's room. The walls are painted pink with panels set off by wooden moldings. Moldings and woodwork are painted white. At the windows are glazed chintz roller shades, done in a daintily refreshing Dresden pattern. The window curtains are of ruffled white silk marquisette, dotted with pink. The same dotted marquisette makes deep flounced covers, over pink, on the twin four post beds. Between the beds is a quaint stand, holding a glass lamp with a plaited chintz shade of plain pink, banded in apple green. Above the stand is a delightful set of old-fashioned hanging shelves, backed by a panel of the flowered chintz. Pink and white washable rag rugs are used on the floor.

Illustrated today is the dressing table corner of a lovely bedroom. Walls in this room are a pale mauve and woodwork is old ivory. Chintz, flowered in mauve, old gold, deep green, old blue and ivory, on a pistachio green ground, makes floor length draperies and lambrequins. Mauve silk gauze glass curtains hang beneath. A simple table, topped with a three way mirror in a mahogany frame, is hung with a deep flounce of the same chintz to make the thoroughly feminine dressing table. A little round stool is upholstered to match. Amethyst Venetian glass pieces lend a finishing charm.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

JELLIES AND JAMS FOR SUMMER USE.

SOME years ago a woman followed the idea advocated in this column of using freshly made currant jelly, while it was at its best, or soon after it was made, and was quite delighted with the reactions she got. Some people whom she entertained, with some anxiety because they belonged to the privileged classes, voted the idea good and the jelly with all the qualities of the fresh fruit remaining in it and enhanced, delicious. She had, as her mother had had, the idea that jellies and jams were made for winter use, and that it was next to a sin to use them at once after making them.

We could give half a dozen reasons why, with our modern markets supplying us with fresh fruit the year around, it is more logical today to use the freshly made conserves in summer time, especially if we are not highly expert and experienced in combining fruit juices and sugar, or combining them with cooking. These things will serve us best during July and August, before September's great wealth of fruit comes. Then we may give more attention to putting up some for winter use.

How to get on without using sugar always concerns some people in their summer preserving; therefore they have to settle what can be canned without sugar, or with but a scant amount. There are few varieties of strawberries that are good canned. They fade and grow pallid in other ways, while with sugar delicious jams may be made, and only three-fourths of a cup of sugar to the berries—considerably reduced in quantity by cooking them without water first, and to evaporate their own juice, is needed. In this way less sugar is required, by a considerable amount, than in the old ways, and a fine product is secured.

Of course, cherries can be canned. And as to canning, the one who attempts it should never, never wait until her fruit is in the house before she tries to find out how to put it up, as so many people do every year.

The hot pack canning and oven canning are more in vogue now than the once so popular cold pack, and they are easier, or considerably less work. The hot pack always has been used a good deal for preserves, and it is also excellent for canned tomatoes. If we give careful attention to the subject—there is no end of printed matter on it, including books solely devoted to it, as well as sections of cook books—we may conclude it is best to adapt the method to the particular material we have in hand, with a careful consideration of the effect we wish to secure.

Bureau of Home Economics.

It is always well, any year, to apply to the national bureau of home economics of the United States department of agriculture for the latest bulletins on the subject of canning and preserving. Often some member of that bureau will give her whole attention for weeks, and even months, to the business of canning and preserving fruit, and the results of her experiments will then be made available to any one applying for them. It is one of the things the government does for us. The bureau has been described by its head as "a sort of clearing house for the needs of housewives." It works to give the most economical of modern methods of preparing foods, and similar work. This means that old recipes which leached out the mineral matter from vegetables, destroyed the vitamines, and perhaps rendered the protein as indigestible as sticks, are not credited, and new ways of cooking to preserve and protect all these food elements have been worked out.

Old Rules Impracticable Today.

In using market berries and fruits for our jams and preserves it is difficult or impossible to follow the old rules because these directed the quick use of the berries after they were picked, etc. According to the old rule, berries must neither be picked nor made into preserves on a wet day. Today we do not try to make jelly on a wet day, if we are wise. On a dry day the cooking can be done often in half the time, because the evaporation is so much more rapid. This, and low temperatures in the cooking, are both helps to the preserving of the aromas or essential qualities of a given fruit.

Full Flavored Fruits.

Many fruits and berries get to market that are not full flavored because too unripe, or because of their journeyings. It is not in many cases well worth while to preserve such berries, though when used alone they may pass. In combination—we make many sorts of combinations today — their lack of quality is especially evident. Each berry has a day when it is at the height of its season, although representatives of it may appear in the market several months before and after that date. But the weather of any given season may be such that the day when a given berry in its own locality is at its best may vary from year to year by a week, or two or three. Raspberries, for instance, ought to be at their best about now, but this year good berries came to market in June, and we shall have some sort of berry with us for about three months more, though now is the time for jam.

Now is probably the best time for currants this year, although in some years they might by now be a little too ripe for the best jellies. If at any time there is a week of rain in a community the berries picked immediately after will not be of the best sort for preserves; they will not be as rich in flavor as they might be, and they will spoil more quickly.

Hot Fruit.

Not only hot apple sauce, but hot blueberries and other hot fruits, like hot peaches, have considerable dietetic worth and should be used in summer time as in winter, especially by those who do not readily get up high powered digestive energy, that is, if these are agreeable to them. There are probably many people who might object to finding out, being prejudiced.

Uncooked Currant Jelly.

This title is a little misleading, because the currants are cooked, but the jelly is not. This jelly is bound to have more of the currant flavor than one cooked, and it will keep the flavor and a beautiful color and quality for months, while cooked currant jelly often grows dark and of a flavor much unlike the freshly made. To make this, wash the currants, drain them well, and pick them from their stems. Some people do not pick them from the stems, but one gets the best results by doing so. Add one to four tablespoons of water to a quart of currants, or instead of adding water mash a few of the currants and put the whole to cook gently until all burst and are tender. Drain the cooked currants through a jelly bag. To each cup of juice add a cup of sugar, stir until it is well dissolved, and then pour it into glasses. Often it will stiffen in the covered glass over night, but it is a good plan to set the glasses of jelly under a glass in the sun for half a day. When set, cover with hot paraffin.

Second and Third Extractions.

There is so much jellying quality in the currant that the fruit may be cooked two and three, or even four times to get a juice that will jelly. Simply cover the pulp with water, cook gently and drain. These extractions may be used with other fruits like raspberries, which contain but a little pectin.

On Not Making Bar-le-Duc.

There are always some people who hunt each year for a recipe for bar-le-duc, which was formerly made as a superlative French conserve by those whose time was paid for at about two cents an hour. It took a wicked amount of time to make it, judged by our modern standards, and now there are few people who would appreciate its particular quality. The true bar-le preparation was made by removing each and every seed from each and every currant with a needle and then the seeded currant was cooked like a jelly or jam. Its flavor was in no way superior to that of an uncooked currant jelly, although its consistency was different.

Black Currants.

The black currant is one of the fleeting July fruits. The demand for it seems slight, but always the practiced eye will see it in our markets during this month or even early in August. Jams made of it are a hobby with the English, who believe they have certain medicinal value, etc. To us there is something spicy or foxy and queerly indescribable and even hateful about the raw fruit, but when cooked it is interesting and decidedly pronounced of flavor. Perhaps the reason the English like to use it to flavor hot water is that hot water is not an inspiring drink, and some throats will close against it, while they will open for a flavored hot drink.

Black Currant Jam.

To each two cups of black currants, which have been washed and stemmed, add one-half cup of water and cook gently until the currants burst. If they are not freshly picked the skins may be tough, in which case it may be best to crush them slightly before putting them to cook. To finish the jam, add as much sugar as there was fruit, by weight, adding it a little at a time to the cooked currants, stirring all the time. When the mixture has cooked to the jam stage or will set—this is from 218 to 220 on the candy thermometer—put into glasses or jam pots and when cool seal. For nicest work black currants should be "topped" as well as "tailed," but the little withered flower on the top colors with the juice and is usually left on. The jam can be sieved to get it out.

Black Currant Jelly.

If you want to drink hot water well flavored make the jelly for that purpose. The English recommend it for colds, but plentiful water drinking by those who scant their liquid supply, as so many people do, is good for almost anything. To make the black currant jelly, wash and stem one pound, or as many pounds of the fruit as you choose. Add one-half cup of water or a little more to each pound of the currants and cook them till tender. Drain off the thick juice, using a jelly bag or just one thickness of cheese cloth. Mix this juice with an equal measure of sugar; stir until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved, pour into small jelly glasses and set in the sun under glass. In an hour or two you may have a delicate jelly much preferable, it seems to us, than a cooked black currant jelly. You can mix the juice half and half with red currant juice. If the juice is hot it will jelly almost as soon as sugar is added to it.

Cooking Comment on Uncooked Jellies.

If the juice is hot when sugar is added to it an uncooked jelly is a little surer to be a success, because in all jelly making it is highly essential to get the sugar fully and promptly dissolved.

Raspberry Jam.

A cup of raspberry jam can be made in ten minutes by mashing the berries, heating them to the boiling point, straining, and then adding the sugar, measure for measure, gradually. This should jelly perfectly. In order to cook the pulp so it will come entirely away from the seeds it is necessary to add a little water to the raspberries before heating them, but this may be a second extraction to be used in some combination, the flavor of the raspberry being capable of successful extendings. This is a seedless jam and of high repute, while one with seeds has had many a bad name given it.

Blackberry Jam.

Many a cook book gives the following direction for blackberry jam: "Make like raspberry jam"; but the raspberry is long on flavor, and a great many market blackberries are not, although a fine blackberry jam might leave the opposite impression. You cannot "fill" a blackberry jam and you can use half and half of a filler with even the strawberry jam. The true blackberry flavor seems to be best retained when the berries are well heated so as to cook out some of the water in them—cause it to evaporate—before the sugar is added. After that, to make a superior jam, sieve the berries before adding sugar. The evaporation is hastened if the berries are mashed before putting over the fire. There is more water in the blackberry than most people realize.

Strawberry Jams.

There are still strawberries to be had. In fact, in some parts of the country fine strawberries are obtainable up to the first of August, but the large ones, with hollow central cone of space, make almost too mild a jam and are not pretty in the cooking until after sugar is added. Yet it is best to cook strawberries about fifteen minutes before adding three-fourths their measure, after the cooking, to make a jam. See that the sugar is well dissolved, then cook to 220 on the candy thermometer, or till two drops fall from the side of the canted spoon. Half carrots and half strawberries makes a mild and pleasant summer breakfast jam. Grind the carrots, cook tender with one-fourth their measure of water in top of a double boiler, sieve, combine with equal parts of reduced strawberries, add three-fourths the measure of the combination of sugar, and cook to 220.

Sally Will Take Hundred Youngsters to the Circus

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

HERE'S news about our next party that will make everybody happy, I know. The party will be on July 22, a week from next Thursday, and I'm going to take a hundred girls and boys to the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus. It comes to town next Saturday.

I don't need to tell you what a treat the circus will be. All of you know that it is one of the big treats of the year. But I do want to tell you about the party I've arranged and how much we're going to do the day we go.

First, there'll be the side shows and the Congress of Strange People — dwarfs, giants, fat people, the "Men from Mars," and lots of others. Then we'll see the menagerie with its dozens of trained animal acts, hundreds of acrobats, wire walker, and trapeze performers and its hundreds of funny clowns. But the fun won't be over even then—for we'll stay and see the old west show with Cy Compton, one of Buffalo Bill's own men!

And all this is yours to enjoy just by writing a winning letter telling me why you'd like to be my guest at the circus. You can say what you like—anything that will let me know how much you'll enjoy the party—and then I'll invite the hundred girls and boys whose letters show me they'll enjoy it most. The only things to watch are to be sure you have your letters in my hands by next Thursday morning and to give your street address and age. I've mentioned address and age all the time this summer, but some girls and boys still miss out on the chances by forgetting to give one or the other, so be sure you don't make this mistake. Then watch next Sunday's paper for the names of the hundred lucky winners.

Now for the winners who'll see Colleen Moore in "Ella Cinders" at the Chicago theater next Thursday! I've chosen them and their names appear below. Their invitations will be mailed to reach them by Wednesday. So if your name is on the list, watch for your invitation by Wednesday morning.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send cycle to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

To Make Some Child Happy.

I have a 2 year old female dog would like to give to any one who will care for her. She is part collie, loves children, and is a good watch dog. W. C. L."

This sounds like a most attractive pet. If you'd like to have her, write at once.

Mother of Eleven Children.

"Has any TRIBUNE reader a twin stroller she no longer needs for her own child to give to this mother of 3 children? If you have clothing your children have outgrown I would appreciate it for my 10 months old twins.

"MRS. F. P."

Who is going to give the twins the carriage which will enable them to get all the sunshine and fresh air they need? And if your babies have outgrown their clothing, why not let it be put to use here?

Asks for a Rug.

"I would like to know if some one has a rug she no longer wants. I would be so grateful for one and I cannot afford to buy it. I should like to have one 9 by 12. Mrs. J. N."

If you are thinking of replacing your old rug while it still may be used, this woman can make good use of it. Let us hear from you.

Use for Castoff Clothing.

"A most deserving widow and mother is in need of clothing—dresses and underwear. She wears size 38 and can make things over. She would appreciate having what your readers discard. Mrs. S."

May this deserving woman have your castoff clothing? If it is not the exact size she can cut it down or make it over.

Free Piano Lessons.

"I am a teacher of piano and I will gladly give free lessons to any boy or girl who is anxious to learn and cannot afford to take lessons otherwise. C. S."

This is a generous offer, indeed! Would you like to take advantage of this splendid opportunity? Write in at once.

Wants a Bugle.

"Being a World War veteran with overseas service and having belonged to a drum and bugle corps for about five months after the war, I am wondering if some of your kind readers could give me a bugle they have no more use for. W. S."

Can you give our bugler the instrument he wants? If you have one you don't care for I can think of no better way to dispose of it.

Where Clothes Count.

"For over a year my husband was out of work, during which time our three children suffered greatly. He now has a fairly good paying selling position but does not earn enough to pay our debts, keep us and provide decent clothing. I think he could do better if his clothing were not so shabby. Perhaps there are men who have discarded clothing good enough to wear which he might have. He wears size 36. Mrs. V. A. S."

With appearance counting for so much to a man with this sort of a position he could probably do a great deal more if he had less shabby clothing. Have you any in this size he may have?

For a Worker.

"I am badly in need of a few dresses and a spring coat so I can look for employment. I wear size 32. I also need shoes, as mine are entirely worn out. Size 5 or 5½ will fit. G. W."

Can you help this young breadwinner? Your castoff clothing, if not too shabby, would certainly improve her chances.

For Some One's House.

"I have a marble mantel, three marble washbowls, and three water tanks to give to any one who would care to have them. Mrs. B."

If you're planning doing a little remodeling, you might have use for one or all of the above articles. Write in for them.

Hammock to Give.

"I have a hammock I shall be glad to give to any one who'd like to have it. S. H. H."

Think of the delightful hours one could spend under cool shade trees with this hammock! How would you like to have it?

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that the grasshopper, laboriest flyer that he seems to be, should be able to take to the air, set his course, and bear on and on for days without stopping? Yet it is known that swarms of grasshoppers hatched in the waste lands of Africa, have repeatedly flown across the Mediterranean sea, alighted in Europe and done great damage to crops. It is known also that such swarms hatch in the waste lands on the slopes of the Rocky mountains of Colorado, take to the air and never stop until they have reached Iowa, 500 miles away.

To cover this distance these insects, being comparatively slow flyers, must keep on and on for days and nights without ceasing. They probably fly three or four days, some say a week, without ever turning off their engines.

The chest of the grasshopper, if you stop to examine it, is a sturdy contraption. In it are hidden the muscles that drive those wings in their rapid and vigorous vibrations. In it also are the muscles that furnish the kick to those powerful legs that make it possible for the grasshopper to outjump a greyhound. If man could leap as high in proportion to his size as a grasshopper can he would need a parachute with which to descend or he would be smashed to pieces.

Grasshoppers take those long flights when the regions in which they are born become overpopulated. They know by instinct that their teeming numbers must have new pastures. They fare forth to find them. Yet they rarely seem to prosper after their pioneering. They rear new families in new lands but the members of these families seem to have lost their vigor.

When, a generation ago, the grasshoppers came out of the Rockies and devoured the crops of Kansas and adjacent states, the farmers were much alarmed. They thought the pests were there to stay, that it might be impossible thereafter to grow crops. The grasshopper mothers did, in fact, drill holes by the Kansas roadsides, did lay their eggs in them, did hatch out innumerable young ones. But these succeeding generations were puny compared with the original pioneers that had taken to the air in the Rockies and driven on and one like mail carrying airplanes for days without end. In a few generations the race had run out and grasshoppers, as a menace, had disappeared.

MR. SLIG'S HERO

BY KYM DONAHEY

PUCKERBUSH was in a flutter. Bandits had been prowling about the edge of the town and several of the leading animals of the place had been robbed. Grandpa Swigley had lost a pocket knife, a bunch of keys, and a new plug of eating tobacco. Mr. Skittels had been robbed of his watch and his tooth brush, which he always carried in his vest pocket. Several other animals had lost little or nothing, and everybody was terribly excited.

The chief of police.

"This stealing ought to be stopped!" Mr. Nickeldick told the chief of police, who was a plump policeat in a handsome uniform.

"That's a good suggestion," answered the chief. "I'll take up the matter at once and see what can be done."

The chief of police thought the matter over for several days and finally decided it would be best to give the thieves warning, so he pasted up several notices, which read as follows:

THIEVES TAKE NOTICE.

The citizens of this town have been greatly disturbed lately by being robbed. I ask you as a favor to me to please stop, as it is causing me a great deal of worry.

Your friend,
ABI SKIMP,
Chief of Police, Puckerbush.

The citizens of Puckerbush gave the chief of police a vote of thanks for his prompt action and everybody felt that the trouble would now end; but it didn't do a bit of good.

The very next night an old clothes duck was robbed and the Woppelgops' ice chest was broken into. This fresh outbreak caused the chief of police to have a nervous breakdown and the whole town was outraged.

Mr. Nickeldick called a massmeeting of the citizens, who packed the courthouse to the doors.

The meeting was opened by Mr. Nickeldick, who introduced Mr. Hoggelgog. Mr. Hoggelgog recited a poem, after which Miss Woppelgop sang a pretty rabbit song. Next a collection was taken up to buy flowers for the stricken chief of police, and the meeting broke up.

Mr. Slig was held up by two weasels.

On the way home from the meeting Mr. Slig was held up by two weasels, who robbed him of a box of cough drops and a cast iron watch. The opossum was terribly angry and he wanted Mr. Nickeldick to call another meeting, but Miss Woppelgop had a cold and couldn't sing, so the idea was given up.

"I'm goin' to load my old gun and go out and put a stop to this robbing," Mr. Slig told Mr. Nickeldick. "It's gone far enough."

Mr. Slig got out his gun and gave it a good oiling. He polished the sights and loaded it with a mighty charge of carpet tacks and cockle-burrs.

"I'll bet me my watch charm I put a stop to this thieving," he said to himself. He buckled on a huge sword, two pistols, and in each of his boots he stuck large hunting knives.

Mr. Slig waited until evening and then he made his way down toward the river where the thieves were known to be camped.

When Mr. Slig drew near the river he sneaked along cautiously. In spite of all his weapons he was somewhat frightened. The tips of his ears went to sleep and his tail quivered, for he thought he saw something move in the grass.

He squatted behind a great tree and waited for some time, but nothing happened.

Among the roots of the tree behind which Mr. Slig was sitting was a heavy springed rat trap. It belonged to Johnny Wattels, the badger, who had placed it there many days before in hopes of trapping a frog. The trap was cleverly hidden under the long grass and Mr. Slig was quite unaware of its presence until his nervous tail happened to touch the trigger of the trap.

Leaped into the air.

It snapped on the end of Mr. Slig's tail like the report of a gun. The opossum leaped into the air; there was a stinging sensation at the tip of his tail.

"I've been shot," he bellowed, and he bolted for home. The long sword got between his short legs and he turned several flip flops in the air. His gun was discharged as it fell to the ground and Mr. Slig thought an army was charging on him. He jumped to his feet and ran for his life. The trap, which still stuck to his tail, jangled along behind.

He thought he was being chased by a troop of cavalry and he ran as no opossum ever ran before. He passed a blackbird that was flying in the same direction. Presently the trap struck a tree and fell from his tail.

"They're afraid to chase me into town," thought Mr. Slig. In a few minutes he dashed into the public square, where he was quickly surrounded by the excited citizens.

"I've routed the thieves!" cried Mr. Slig. "About a hundred of them began firing at me and I fought them off. I think I have been shot some place."

A veterinary duck.

Billy Skittels pointed to Mr. Slig's tail, which was bleeding slightly where the trap had snipped it. Mr. Slig looked at the blood and promptly fainted. They carried him into the barber shop, where a veterinary duck dressed the injured tail.

For some reason or other the thieves disappeared and Mr. Slig was given the full credit for chasing them away. As he carried no accident insurance on his tail, the town took up a collection for him. He was given a medal for his act of bravery and the chief of police himself pinned it on Mr. Slig's prominent chest.

Betty came home crying as if her heart were broken from a school picnic to which her big sister had taken her. Mother met her at the door and exclaimed, "Why, Betty, whatever has happened?"

Betty, choking back her sobs, haltingly replied, "I hurted myself."

"O, Betty, how did you do that?" cried mother in sympathy, looking at the tiny bruise on Betty's chin.

"I doesn't know for sure," Betty said, "but I thinks I felled over the school building." G. I.

Shortly before little Ann's birthday she began coaxing for a bracelet just like mother's.

"Why, Ann," mother objected, "bracelets are so expensive, and besides you're too little to wear one like mine."

Ann's chin began to quiver, and mother hastily added, "But isn't there something else you'd like, dear?"

"Well, w-well," choked little Ann, "I s'pose I could take a book, but I thought I'd wike to be styled up a w-wittle!" K. D.

Elizabeth's uncle delighted in teasing her. One day at dinner he glanced at the clock in the next room and said to his little niece: "Now listen, Elizabeth, and see how I can make the clock strike. Strike, clock!"

The clock obeyed, but quick as a flash the 4 year old exclaimed: "Uncle Will, you're des like de roos'er dat crowed to make de sun come up!"

G. S. S.

As I handed 10 year old Josephine fifty cents to buy firecrackers, I said, "Remember, when you fire your crackers what the Fourth of July means. This is the 150th anniversary of the founding of our country."

She answered, "Gosh, ma, I thought this country was 1926 years old."

EVERY FLY, every mosquito, every roach in a room breathes BLACK FLAG and drops dead-er'n a door nail. It's the deadliest insect-killer ever made. . . . . .

The bugs are helpless—they cannot escape BLACK FLAG. It strangles them! It is the surest, swiftest death ever discovered for insects which besiege the home. It contains a secret, vegetable ingredient which lets no bug survive—not one! But it is absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

Try this better insect-killer. It is death, swift, unavoidable, for every bug and every kind of bug which chooses your house for a playground. BLACK FLAG completely rids a house of fleas. Roaches, ants and bed-bugs too. There are two forms of BLACK FLAG—Liquid and Powder. Buy the one you prefer at drug, grocery, hardware and department stores. The Powder is 15c, up. Powder gun, 10c. And by the way—just compare the low prices of the Liquid! A word to the wise.

GRANDMOTHER AND GRANDDAUGHTER WEAR THE SAME STYLES

SPECIAL PATTERNS
by May Manton

The maizes of the dance—here is one of them carried out in georgette for the girl of from 12 to 16, sketched at the extreme left. The belt of taffeta slips through the point of the bertha, echoing the V-shaped front section of the skirt.

Next, for a girl of the same age, comes a simple cape of two tones of chiffon—one in flesh pink and one in deep rose—shirred at the neckline. This wrap tops a party frock of pale green chiffon set off with ecru net and a cluster of pink roses.

For the traveling costume of Miss Ten-to-Fourteen we suggest a compose suit, seen in the center, comprising skirt of plaid alpaca topped by a plain color jacket.

Fourth, an afternoon model for the same age is made of heavy white tub silk with touches of smocking and contrast of old blue grosgrain.

And old General Wear finds an ally in navy and white polka dotted wash silk, at the extreme right, which may be worn by her of from 8 to 14. A blouse of flesh pink crepe is the conclusive note of chic.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Since Grandma had her fashions lifted, since the day when she forsook her mob cap and black alpaca for a small felt hat and a jumper costume, there's no telling "the girls" in the family apart. For example, there were those three who sat near me the other day at a certain smart restaurant. Each wore a narrow brimmed felt chapeau with dented crown, a two piece frock, and one strapped shoes of brown alligator. Yet I heard that it was the widely known Mrs. X——, her daughter, Mrs. Y——, and her 15 year old granddaughter, Miss Y——!

The vogue of the composé for both young and old has resulted in a wide variety of selection for the girl of from 10 to 14.

We show in the center of our page a traveling costume designed for this age which exemplifies the present latitude of fabric. The skirt is a plaid in brown, beige, and red, and it may be any one of three materials. Taffeta would be good; so would a woolen mixture; but undoubtedly the most practical suggestion points to alpaca. This last is a fabric which is always admirable for the young girl, and this season its serviceability is rendered more palatable by the vogue of alpaca in adult circles. The fact of it is that the plaid alpaca skirt combined with a coat of plain color is the particular version of the composé suit which has been sponsored by a number of smart Parisiennes.

If this last named fabric be chosen the accompanying jacket may be in self material. Otherwise it will be in woolen. And, whatever the selection of weave, the jacket is carried out in a dark brown to match the darkest tone of the skirt. Here a smocked blouse of white crêpe is worn, but for the wearer of this tailleur who has passed 12 one prefers a blouse with boyish collar and tie.

There is a resort type of composé which we have borrowed from the chic Parisienne and which is especially adapted to the girl in her early teens. It comprises a coat of dark blue flannel, cut on the familiar boyish lines and trimmed with brass buttons, and a skirt of white flannel which is frequently laid in broad plaits at the front.

Speaking of flannel, the prestige enjoyed by this material among those who are grown up has many a reverberation among the younger set. One of the favorite resort coats for the younger generation is the tailored, straight line model of white flannel. As to the short flannel jackets used also for this purpose by the mature, these belong much to the picture of youth and one finds them chiefly in navy or striped editions, and quite often trimmed with brass buttons.

Resort coats, in general, run the same gamut for the youngsters as they do for their mothers. Among the more unusual of these are adorable little jackets of challis which are worn in connection with the crêpe jumper frocks so constantly assumed by both old and young. Then there are long, straight line affairs of chintz and cretonne, of Breton peasant petticoat material and hand painted crêpe. The most customary phenomenon, however, is the wrap of knitted wool, especially that in pure white. A rival of the snowy variety is that in the popular chevron design.

One might assume that most young things would be as prejudiced against pongee as they are against carrots. For both of these commodities are branded as "wholesome." However, the practicality of pongee may be overcome by some such detail as a gaily hand painted belt. Such belts are a feature of some charming pongee one piece frocks in natural color which are offered by one of our shops as "exactly the thing for that day when she has to go into town with her governess to keep a dentist appointment or do some shopping."

Undoubtedly pongee has a rival—and that a formidable one—the present day wash silks. These, in their more sober moods, make admirable travel frocks and their variety of design certainly gives them an advantage over pongee. Polka dots, especially those of white on a navy ground, are as much enshrined here as in other domains and at the extreme right we show a model for the girl of from 8 to 14 which utilizes wash silk in this design and coloring.

Naturally this young lady knows a number of salient style points: for instance, that the bolero is good, and that flesh pink is exceedingly chic in combination with navy. So she makes the bolero an integral part of her costume and wears it over a blouse of flesh pink crêpe with a self-color bow of crêpe under the color. Her skirt, box plaited in front and plain in the back, is topped by a white kid belt.

This costume, so admirable for a trip on the train or for city street wear, or for a resort morning, may of course continue its career in the fall schoolroom. Save for that one indemnity, the crêpe blouse, it possesses undoubted assets of serviceability. Here one finds it completed by a navy Milan hat of tricorne shape, but let me hasten to say that the girl of this age is as partial to her broad brimmed hat of Milan with its simple band of belting ribbon, or velvet, or grosgrain, as is her mother.

Wash silks in more frivolous spirit hold a large place in the resort mornings of the young. White with border stripes in pastel tones is an especially charming effect, and there are both one piece and jumper styles to attest to this fact.

In the good old days when young things of 12 and 13 confined their literary excursions to "Little Women", and "Rose in Bloom" one might not have expected it. But nowadays, when freshmen in the high school inform you that Hedda Gabler is really an insipid creation, one knows that she, the young thing, understands exactly what it is all about, and that the best way to be sophisticated is to be just as simple as you can.

A perfect example of this school of logic is offered in the evening (or afternoon) frock for the girl of from 12 to 16, pictured at the extreme left. This model, sketched at an exclusive uptown shop, is executed in maize yellow georgette—there's really nothing better for her party frock—and there isn't one touch of outside trimming to spoil it save a narrow girdle of taffeta in deeper tone which ties in a flat bow at the back. Yet how sophisticated it is!

This air of maturity is achieved by that V-shaped seaming of the skirt, a V echoed by the dip of the picoted bertha. This bertha, as you will see from the back view, is rounded as it crosses the shoulders.

Some girls in their early teens are seen with beaded motifs on their party frocks of chiffon and georgette. Such trimming, however, is not in the best taste—no more than is the low décolletage or the sleeveless corsage. There is really nothing more approved than are these simple untrimmed little models which depend for their charm upon originality of cut and grace of effect. A touch of lace is, however, altogether in the spirit of youthful simplicity, and so, too, are the delicate net footings which set off our second model—a party frock of light green chiffon. Here the net footing is in écru, and it is found on the original cap sleeves, as well as on the pointed tiers. The yoke is also of écru net.

HOW TO ORDER CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin [coin preferred; wrap it carefully] for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, Chicago Daily Tribune.

Note—Clotilde patterns are made in New York exclusively for The Chicago Daily Tribune. They are perfect in fit, up to date in style, and the easiest of all patterns to use.

THIS pretty model, pattern 2730, will be becoming to slender women and will help to make full figures look more slender. It is cut in two pieces, front and back. The dress is cut down in the front at the neck, and a collar having mitred corners finishes it there. There is an applied front band and the belt closes under this, slipping through slashes each side of the front and back. This serves to hold the gown nicely in place without confining it too much. Then the short sleeves, which are really just long shoulders, have a shoulder strap or band that is sewed in the neck seam. These bands form epaulette shoulders.

If long sleeves are preferred a one piece sleeve section is included in the pattern. This style of a dress will be ideal for a hot afternoon, made with the short sleeves, and using tub silk for the material. A three or four inch hem should be allowed for at the bottom, and if the dress is a wash one, the hem can be stitched on the machine; but one of the tub silks will look best put in by hand.

Pattern No. 2744, is a pretty design for a young girl's frock. It is a slip-on dress slashed down from the neck in the center front, underfaced and rolled with the collar and tie-strings, which are cut in one. The two piece flared skirt is attached to the waist in a scalloped outline, and the drop shoulders form short sleeves. A one piece sleeve section is included in the pattern pieces, if a full length sleeve is desired. Taffeta,, crêpe de chine, georgette or chiffon, would be lovely materials for a design of this kind.

The dress should be bound around the bottom, and generally a contrasting color and sometimes a contrasting material will be used to good advantage. A tiny piping of the same can be used to set the skirt on to the waist, or the escalloped edges can be simply clipped at the bottom points, turned in and two rows of stitching, one quarter of an inch apart, used to hold the two together. The edges of the short sleeves should be bound to match the rest, and the facing for the slashed opening and the collar and tie-strings should also be cut from it.

Dark blue satin for the skirt and one of the figured georgettes or crêpes for the upper part would make a lovely dress, using pattern No. 2700 for it. The two piece, flaring skirt is extremely pretty and finishing with a narrow bias binding around the bottom will be about the only real work attached to making it. A row of small buttons of the blue satin, put about three quarters of an inch apart, would look well down the middle front of the skirt.

The waist is cut in two pieces and is long. On the front at the shoulders there is slight fullness, always a becoming feature. The sleeves extend to the neck, forming saddle shoulders, and the neck line is cut in a rather deep V in the front and finished with one of those straight collars that extend into long tie strings. These are held in place by being slipped through two slashes just where the neck opening ends. These slashes must be bound.

The sleeve pattern provides for short sleeves and full length ones made of one or two materials, the long ones being gathered into narrow wristbands.

A belt covers the waist and skirt joining.

2730—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2¾ yards of 40 inch material.

2700—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅛ yards of 40 inch black material with 1½ yards of 40 inch figured material.

2744—Girls' dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2⅛ yards of 40 inch material.

Embarrassing Moments

Within Earshot.

The college boy is supposed to have no embarrassing moments, if we are to take the standards of college life depicted by the popular novelist, yet it was as a college boy that I had the most terribly embarrassing moment I ever expect to encounter.

Among a dormitory crowd one of the professors of the school had, by his marked attentions to a certain girl and to many girls in general, earned the sobriquet of "Old Flaming Youth," a cognomen applicable to the old widower, seemingly.

One Easter morning, with other members of the "bunch," I was on my way to church. As we passed the home of this professor I glanced up the terrace and, nodding, said: "The den of Old Flaming Youth." As I did so I stepped beyond a big maple tree that was between me and the curb of the street. There, complacently sitting on the curbing, fixing a tire, was the venerable beau, looking up at me, with a surprise equaled only by that of Columbus when he sighted America.

My face, the living image of an exhibit of beets, I gulped out, "Good morning, doctor." The "bunch" howled. W. C. McP.

Saying It Backwards.

I think the most embarrassing moment that ever occurred in my llife happened recently at a dance. A young man asked me for the dance, to which I replied in the affirmative. After we finished he thanked me by saying, "I enjoyed this dance immensely."

I attempted to return the compliment and replied, "The pleasure is all yours."

You can imagine the scene following this remark. M. D.

Anxious to Know.

It was our last day of high school. Several of us were sitting in the annual room discussing our faculty. We were all talking rather loudly, and suddenly I yelled: "Well, I hate to graduate without finding out whether Miss R.'s hair is her own." There was a moment's silence and I turned around to gaze into the icy eyes of Miss R., standing in the doorway.

The worst part of it was that I had to read a poem dealing with the virtues of each teacher that night at commencement. When I came to Miss R.'s name, the whole assembly burst into laughter, for the story had got around. Both Miss R. and myself could have died of mortification.

D. D.

Her Man "Friday."

I had been in the habit of calling a man who comes to help my mother clean house "Friday," not intending that he should know I made fun of him.

My mother asked me to put up a screen for her and I, not thinking the man within hearing distance, replied, "Have your old man Friday do it, he's here."

Immediately he appeared from around the corner, where he had evidently heard the conversation, and went out and put up the screen.

There is no need to tell how I felt.

M. W.

They Looked Alike.

At our office there are two men who look much alike. One is the sober and dignified president of the company and the other is the sociable file clerk and handy man.

One morning as I went into the office I noticed a man whom I thought to be the file clerk, stooping over the file drawer. I went up and slapped him on the back with the remark, "So you are working for a change, eh?"

Imagine my embarrassment when the sober and dignified president looked up. I stuttered for some time, trying to find words to excuse myself. He always talked to me after that and never failed to mention how funny I looked when I saw who I had hit on the back. F. H.

Caught.

We have a sedan, and whenever we went out for a ride I would just put on a coat and some slippers, never bothering to put shoes on. I always wore slippers during the day because shoes hurt my feet.

One night after supper we went out in the car and we had been gone for about a half hour when the car stopped. My husband got out to see what was wrong. He found something wrong, and we had to ride home in a street car. You can imagine my embarrassment as the people stared at my slippers. H. D. W.

Short of Change.

I was waiting for the street car one evening, as I was returning from my boy friend's home, when I saw a woman friend. I tried to avoid her as I had only a dime with me, but she saw me and naturally said, "Hello."

The street car came along and we both got on. She walked right in without paying her fare, expecting me to pay it.

Imagine my embarrassment when the conductor followed her into the street car to get the fare.

Did I ride home? I did not. I walked home that night. H. B.

When All Was Quiet.

The bus being crowded my son sat on the front seat and I sat in the rear. Just as the bus stopped and all was quiet my son called back to me, "Mother, are you and daddy married?"

Every one looked at me and roared.

BEAUTY ANSWERS by Gabrielle Doumic

ELLA S.: THE FORMULA FOR the cleansing cream is as follows: 2 ounces oil of sweet almonds, ½ ounce spermaceti, ½ ounce white wax, ½ ounce rose water, 20 grains powdered borax, and oil of rose, 4 drops. Melt the spermaceti and white wax together at a moderate heat, add the oil of sweet almonds, stirring in thoroughly. Dissolve the borax in rose water and add to the mixture slowly. Beat briskly and thoroughly until cold. Add 4 drops of oil of rose. The odor of the rose water evaporates in the beating, hence the oil of rose. Be sure you get the oil of sweet almonds and not oil of peach stone, or any other substitute.

MISS ELSIE: IT TAKES ABOUT two minutes to brush the teeth properly. There are five sides to every tooth to be cleaned—the side next the cheek, the side near the tongue, the top, and the two surfaces between the teeth. Move the brush in circles on the outside of your teeth and gums. Clean the side toward the tongue and the top by moving the brush straight in and out. After cleansing the mouth and teeth with the brush it is well to rinse the mouth with limewater, which is the best alkaline mouth wash there is. It is inexpensive and easily made. Send stamped, addressed envelope for directions.

MOTHER: AN EXCELLENT PRE-caution against drying the skin when doing housework is wearing old gloves. They keep out the dirt and help keep the hands soft and white. If necessary to put the hands in strong soap water, wash thoroughly afterward and rub with a mixture of gycerine and rose water—one-third rose water to two-thirds glycerine. Or substitute plain water for the rose water and add five drops of carbolic acid to two gills of the mixture. Wipe off after using. Send stamped, addressed envelope for additional suggestions on care of the hands.

MOTHER: FOR THOSE ENGAGED in sedentary occupations it is well to start the day with a fairly substantial breakfast of, say, fruit, cereal, egg, toast, or rolls and coffee. At luncheon they may eat lightly. This is preferable to the no breakfast habit which many young people have acquired. When they eat no breakfast they are prepared to eat heartily at noon, causing drowsiness and making them not so alert, mentally, for their afternoon work.

BERTHA N.: IF YOU HAVE BEEN getting sufficient sleep and wake up feeling unrefreshed, it is possible your digestive tract is out of order. Eight hours should be sufficient sleep. Perhaps you do not get enough exercise. If not, try to spend some time out of doors each day. Arrange to walk three or four miles daily. If this is impossible, send a stamped addressed envelope for some exercises called "My Youth Preservers," which you may do at home.

MYRTLE.: A PERMANENT WAVE given by an experienced operator is not harmful to the hair. If it has a drying effect, massage the scalp with olive oil or sweet almond oil, and brush the hair every morning and night. Washing the hair every two weeks is not too often. I have instructions for shampooing the hair in printed form, which I'll gladly send you on receipt of a stamped addressed envelope.

ETIQUETTE FOR VISITORS - - - - - - By Persis Standish

TWO letters in my mail today refer to problems of girls about to embark on unchaperoned vacations, and therefore assure me that there are many who will want assistance. The first letter is from a girl whom we will call Sally. She received a letter from a friend who has recently married and lives in the east, asking Sally to "spend her vacation" with the newly married pair in their new home. Of course, she really wants Sally because she begins by saying, "I hear you are to have your vacation July fifth and wondered if you wouldn't come and spend it with us."

Now Sally's problem is this: Her hostess does not know that this year Sally will have a three weeks' vacation, whereas she only had one week last year. Sally thinks she would love to go, but she does not want to spend the money to go for just one week and she is in doubt as to whether her hostess wants her for more than that time. The hostess should, of course, have said "spend a week with us" if she meant a week. I advised Sally to write and tactfully say that as she has such a long vacation this year she thinks she had better go into the country somewhere near home where the railroad fare and hotel rates are reasonable; that she would like nothing better than visiting her friend, but that she feels that as her vacation is to be such a long one she had better take two trips this year, as she must economize. Then the hostess has the chance of writing to say that she would be glad to have Sally for three weeks, or she has the alternative of saying that the future plans of herself and husband make it impossible to have any one stay longer than a week, etc.

Of course the hostess should have stated in her first letter just how long she expected Sally to stay. No invitation to visit is a bona fide invitation that does not state the time that the visitor is expected to stay with exactitude. A thoughtful hostess will even suggest a train that will bring her visitor at just a convenient time for both of them.

Dates Are Essential.

When you write to invite any one to visit you either for a week-end or a fortnight you should specifically mention dates, as well as days, because many people confuse future time or are vague about it, and terrible things can result from being indefinite about such things.

A friend of mine was giving two large but informal teas not long ago. She invited a newly divorced husband and wife, the wife to the first tea and the husband to the second, but by some fluke they both came to the same one and made themselves and everybody present most uncomfortable.

Now let us suppose Sally receives the reply to her letter asking her to spend the entire three weeks with her hostess in the east, and that the letter has mentioned the train she is to take, and that all is ripe for her departure. What are the things obligatory to each?

The hostess must meet her guest, if possible at the train. If it is not possible she must send some one, either her husband or another member of the family, to meet her. She must then take her to the house and pay for the conveyance that takes her there. She must have the guest room prepared to receive her. There must be a comfortable bed, a comfortable chair, a convenient mirror and, if there is not a table or desk in the guest room, she must tell her guest that she is free to use the desk in the living room. If a hostess cannot provide these comforts for a guest she should not invite one to spend any length of time with her. A week-end, perhaps—but not longer.

Then she should show the guest where the bathroom is and she should have provided special towels for her use. If she has to share the bathroom with the family, she should have one particular towel rack apportioned for her.

Entertainment.

After these things are done for her physical comfort the hostess next plans for her entertainment. She introduces her friends to her guest. She gives a party in her honor and says so on the invitations. This party can be rather large and take in her entire circle, if she wishes. Then it is up to her friends to honor her guest.

If the latter is an unmarried woman the hostess and host provide her with masculine escort to various places and may even see that she is left alone with such men friends as they find her particularly interested in. This gives them a chance to go to bed early and not make the strain of the visit wearing on the young husband who has to be up early to go to business each morning.

If a guest stays for several weeks it is not necessary to entertain her either every day or every evening, because, if she likes you enough to make you such a long visit, you may suppose that she will be glad to spend time in your company without other entertainment. The hostess, in fact, should make her guest feel so at home that she will forget that she is visiting. To do this it is absolutely essential that she allow her to dispose of some of her own time and allow her also to spend part of the day in her room without going in to talk to her or bother her even with solicitude for her pleasure.

When the guest is ready to leave the host and hostess both try to make her feel that her visit has been all too short and that they hope she will repeat it in the future. They go to the train with her and wait until it leaves before they leave the railroad station.

A Blessing or a Curse.

Upon the guest depends almost entirely the success of a visit. A guest can be a blessing or a curse, as she chooses. A beautiful and charming girl who will have all the eligible men at her feet the first few days of a visit can make the whole community hate her if she stays but a day too long. A woman can sound like a provincial idiot if she makes one wrong criticism of the town she is visiting. A darling in her own home may seem like a demon to the young husband if she keeps him waiting every morning to get shaved while she occupies the bathroom curling her back hair. And to feel that one must keep the conversational ball rolling continuously for three weeks because one is on a visit is to resemble a phonograph rather than an ideal house guest.

The qualifications for an ideal house guest are simple, but they are also definite. First, be on time for meals. Take your baths when the men of the family are absent, if you have to share a bathroom. Never criticize any of your host or hostesses' friends. Be enthusiastic about the entertainment provided. Do not be too insistent about wanting to go out. Retire to silence during family discussions. Never mention your home town to the disadvtange of the place you are visiting. If there is only one servant and you are causing extra labor try to help by keeping your room in perfect order. Never leave your personal belongings, such as handkerchiefs, bags, etc., about the house.

Do not accept invitations that do not include your hostess. Allow the family a little privacy and get some for yourself by retiring to your room occasionally. Do not talk too much. Allow your host and hostess time to keep up with their reading. Never stay a day longer than you have been invited to stay, even if you are urged to do so.

Sharing Expenses.

If you go to a restaurant with your hostess or ride in cabs with her do not allow her to defray all expenses simply because you are in her town. When you leave write a letter immediately telling her what a lovely time you have had. This must absolutely be done within a week. When she is giving a party for you send her flowers. After you leave send her some little remembrance for her home even if it is only a small thing like a book, or a spoon, or a handkerchief. Write to such of her friends as gave parties for you thanking them, also. Be sure and call on them before you go, if possible. Don't forget to speak of the many things her husband did to give you a good time and to admire his cronies. Let them both feel that you think they live in an enviable environment among charming people and that you would be glad to come back next week and all will be well.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Face Young

"Brings Out the Hidden Beauty"

If every woman knew of the wonderful rejuvenating and beautifying qualities of Mercolized Wax, druggists could not begin to supply the demand for this remarkable product. Just think! You apply the wax to an aged, faded, withered skin, and that skin gives way to one of youthful loveliness, clear, soft, delicately tinted.

How is this accomplished? By actually peeling off the defective outer skin which covers up the true skin underneath. This is a painless process, for the thin veil of outer skin has no nerves. Nature renews complexions in exactly the same way, constantly shedding tiny particles of the surface covering, or scarf skin. But in time this process slows up. Then Mercolized Wax comes to the rescue and hastens the skin shedding. This is the secret of its marvelous success. So if your skin is old-looking, sallow, over-red, blotchy, parched, rough, oily—the stubborn scarf skin—just peel it off! Get rid of it! Have you pimples, freckles, moth patches, liver spots? Peel them off!

It's the sensible thing to do. And simple. Just apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime, as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flecked off with the wax. No harm. No detention indoors. No inconvenience. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—the kind women envy and men admire—and you easily look from 10 to 20 years younger!

Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store today, use as directed—and join the vast multitude who are praising the virtues of this wonder-working product.

TELLING FORTUNES BY ASTROLOGY

According to This System Your Character Is Influenced by the Sign Under Which You Were Born.

by Doris Blake

WOULD you like to know the outstanding characteristics credited by astrology to your birth month? Yes? Then—

Dec. 2 to Jan. 20. [Capricorn.] Symbolized by the goat, as these persons make their dependence on the head and threw their whole powers into the execution of their mental plans. They are thinkers, reasoners and philosophers in business schemes. They are the natural heads of corporations and large enterprises. They are positive, executive and determined. It is difficult for them to economize. They want to be recognized as the heads of whatever they are in, or they lose interest.

Jan. 20 to Feb. 19 [Aquarius.] Persons born under this sign belong mainly to the mercantile interests of life. They are intuitive and are remarkably good judges of character. They are public spirited and are frequently found as politicians. They have a great deal of the psychic in them. Their minds are well adapted to pleasing the public in whatever department of service they may be engaged. Some of our best financers come from this sign. They have much pride of personal appearance. They may go to extremes in setting value on public opinion. Some of the most faithful and devoted wives be found in this sign, which always gives a fine devoted love nature.

Feb. 19 to March 21 [Pisces]. These persons are extremely careful, anxious, restless, and thoughtful. They are great students, aquisitive of knowledge from every available quarter. They are anxious bout money matters, dreading dependence on others. They are usually upright, honest and just in their deangs; also sensible, affable and kind. Frequently we find men of this sign an walking encyclopedias of knowledge. A lack of self-confidence is the most frequent fault. They should marry a self-reliant person who would help push them forward. There is a strong philanthropic spirit in them and much symathy for the suffering and needy.

March 21 to April 19. [Aries.] The brain is the most active organ of the body. Natural lovers of scientific thought, reason, philosophy, and of educational pursuits are born under this sign. They are independent characters, and stubborn, and can be controlled only through reason. They cannot work in the same manner as others, but must do everything their own way. They are not apt to be mechanics. A love of harmony is the dominant feature of their natures. Order, elegance, and beauty they thrive under. Much electric fire is in them. They love music and dancing.

April 19 to May 20. [Taurus.] Characterized by the common phraseology of "stiff necked." They are unyielding and are natural conquerors. They will have their own way at all hazards. They are imitators rather than originators of thought. They adapt themselves readily to society, in which they often become leaders. They are sensitive to psychic influence. They are governed by their sensations and are influenced in their decisions by their feeling, appetites, and passions. Their passions and sex nature are strong, and they are in danger of excess in that direction.

May 20 to June 21. [Gemini.] These people belong to the realm of education, art, and mechanics. Such persons are always active, restless, and anxious. They are never satisfied. Always there is a restless want of something, they know not what. Lack of continuity of purpose is common. They are changeable, generous yet niggardly, bold yet cringing, warm hearted yet cold. The complexity of the sign of the twins is demonstrated throughout the whole life. Really two distinct natures are at odds all the time. These people have too many irons in the fire for great success. They are active and must be doing something every minute. They are liable to be inconstant in love affairs.

June 21 to July 22. [Cancer.] Maternal instincts dominate here. Great lovers of home and family are born under this sign. These people are anxious to lay up money to provide for the future. They are industrious and economical to the point of miserliness often; but are kind, loving, and sympathetic. Their love nature is their weakness. Their whole lives are devoted to their loved ones. So remarkable is their devotion to their children that a father born in this sign will get more love from the children than the mother, thus recognizing the great mother-nature even on the positive side.

July 22 to Aug. 22. [Leo.] A great variety of inclinations and dispositions mark this sign. People are usually active and aspiring, energetic but subject to extremes. They can readily adapt themselves to almost any condition of life. They are easily led and sometimes misled by those professing friendship. They make highest attainments in the mercantile and intellectual spheres in life. On account of a sensitive and emotional nature, they are inclined to act from their feelings and often are misunderstood as a result. They have a disposition while young to imitate the life and habits of those around them, and are apt to jump at an act from conclusions too quickly.

Aug. 22 to Sept. 23. [Virgo.] The minds of these persons are fine and discriminating. They are apt to be peculiar about their diet, and often seem notional to those who do not understand their nature. They have great endurance and aptitude in the acquisition of an education. Their eyes are keen and discriminating, taking in a situation at a glance. Their judgment and love of color is excellent, and they make successful artists. They want things tasty, nice, and elegant; otherwise their appetites and dispositions are affected. They have a strong love nature but also have great power of self-control.

Sept. 23 to Oct. 23. [Libra.] Foresightedness is the leading characteristic here. These persons are positive and decisive in everything they do. They are not prone to reason except from the standpoint of intuition and observation. They are susceptible to the psychological influence of other minds. They possess strange foresight and they dislike being asked for reasons for their conduct, as they can rarely give them.

Oct. 23 to Nov. 22. [Scorpio.] Strong appetities and strong passions belong to this sign and a high temper and strong jealousies, also. Persons are proud and apt to be pretentious. They have great tenacity of life, but are rather inclined to be idle, and specially disinclined to work with their hands. They set too much value on external things and are inclined to be extravagant and self gratifying. In everything they are inclined to think of self first.

Nov. 22 to Dec. 21. [Sagittarius.]—The leading characteristic of this nature is executive ability. These persons are bold, fearless, determined, and combative. In everything they do they are decisive. They are apt to be too quick to decide, act, and speak. They are persons of one thought and one idea at a time. They throw their entire energy into a single purpose. They are prophetic in a way; they are foresighted about events. They hate hypocrisy, anything hidden or secret. They are the most honest of human beings. They go to extremes because they are overzealous and sanguine in what they undertake.

MY GREATEST THRILL

Almost a Tragedy.

Returning home from school one day after a downpour of rain resembling a cloudburst, I had to cross a creek. Fields and roads were flooded. I drove my horse through the water and stopped on the bridge to view the landscape.

The creek was roaring over the stone road in front of me also. I started to drive through, but my horse was swept away by the strong current. Both buggy and horse were floating on toward the "deep hole," as they called it, and against the stream.

I pulled on the lines to get my horse more to the right and away from the deep water. As he resisted, I touched him with the whip and in doing so I unconsciously drew the lines still tighter. Then something happened. My horse could not move.

I realized that the ends of the lines were trailing in the water and had wound themselves around the axle of the front wheel.

I was obliged to reach down into the water and unwind them.

Looking up, I saw the situation. The roaring, foaming yellow water had made me dizzy and I thought I was floating into eternity. I had been forcing my good sensible horse away from the main road and perilously near the edge of the deep ravine leading under the bridge and near a roaring current.

The dizziness left me, I turned my horse back to the road again, and drove on, trembling and weak from this encounter with the waves, but in those dreadful moments I thought of heaven, home, friends, and even insurance. Past, present, and future floated before me like a panorama.

And I had wished to see the creek overflowing!

Well, I saw it. M. E. B.

Close-up of a Moose.

Did you ever long to see the wild creatures in their native haunts, always without success, and then find at your very door one of nature's glorious creatures in all his majesty and beauty? If not, you don't know what a real thrill is.

I had mine two weeks ago and the awe is with me yet, and will remain with me always a pleasant memory.

I was in a cottage within the city limits of a small northern Minnesota village. Rising early one morning I scanned the leaden skies for prospects of fair weather after two weeks of rain. Turning my eyes in the direction of the garage, I stood for a moment paralyzed. My heart pounded and my arms fell limp and helpless by my side. There at the pump, with his nose in my sprinkling can, was a large bull moose with gigantic spreading horns. He was perfectly at ease, unconscious of the nearness of civilization and human habitation. I was filled through and through with a strange feeling of awe mixed with reverence.

Then I gave a wild cry for my husband to "come quick!"

The moose heard, of course. He shook his great head, pawed the ground and in two leaps was in the clover. Soon he reached the cover of the bushes but he still had a long way to the solitude of his forest home.

In Front of a Train.

I got my greatest fhrill while I was attending Normal school. With two other students I was walking on the railroad tracks from the school to the station. A high wind was blowing from the south.

As was the fashion, I wore my hair curled and tied with a ribbon at the nape of the neck. My hair ribbon became loose and, taking off my hat, I handed it to one of my companions while I retied the ribbon. She held the hat by the rubber elastic which, worn under the hair, kept the hat in place on the head.

The wind snatched the hat out of the girl's hand and it rolled down the track. I started in pursuit and had it almost in my grasp when a stronger gust of wind swept it off again.

At the same instant a long whistle announced the approach of a train headed for Chicago. I knew from the sound that it had not yet passed the station, and, thinking I would have time to secure my hat, I sprinted down the track directly in front of it.

The engineer whistled, but the hat was only a few inches away. Then a wild shriek from the whistle, a jump to one side, and the train thundered past me, accompanied by a veritable whirlwind of dust.

The white-faced engineer shook his fist at me from the vanishing cab window, and I caught a fleeting glimpse of curious passengers and trainmen as the train whirled along.

I lost my hat. C. H. D.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Getting It Free.

The cheekiest person I ever met was the man who came to my office one evening as I was leaving and detained me perhaps fifteen or twenty minutes while I advised him as to his legal rights in regard to a certain matter. When I had finished he jumped up, thanked me, and went out. The next thing I heard was that he had employed another lawyer to try his case for him along the lines I had advised him. D. D. Mc.

Five Times and Out.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a young woman who lived with her mother, with whom I had rented a room for a few months.

The daughter watched the papers closely for the best movie pictures and would invite me to go with her to the shows.

When we approached the window together her invitation expired, as she always stepped aside and I had to pay for the tickets.

After the fifth trip of this kind I rebelled against her invitations to the theater. L. W. R.

How to Collect.

The cheekiest person I have ever met was my brother's mother-in-law. I married a poor man and was endeavoring to make a little money by making and selling an excellent face cream.

She came, with her daughter, one afternoon and told me she would like two jars of the cream. After receiving it, she said, "You can collect for this from your brother" (her son-in-law). "He owes me a little money."

I made no reply, and never told my brother about it until years later. L. H.

With Love and Sympathy.

I have lilies of the valley in my garden. They grow beautiful and large. One year I picked a huge bouquet—there were many dozens of flowers. I took them to a club meeting, announcing I wanted the bouquet divided so each member would receive an equal share.

One member had received word of the death of a friend in Fairbury, Ill. Without consulting any one, she appropriated the entire bouquet, made a funeral piece, and sent it to the funeral as a personal offering, with her love and sympathy, no doubt. G. B.

Taking the Thanks.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a girl in our office. She refused to contribute $1 toward a present for one of the other girls who was leaving, but accepted thanks for her portion of the gift with the rest of us and grandly said, "O, that's all right. You're perfectly welcome."

Can you beat that for nerve? E. H.

Getting the Sewing Done.

Most women who have a knack for sewing are imposed on. I am laden at all times with sewing for my small children, but I have a friend who smilingly asks me, "O, I have a bundle of things, some bloomers to be made and some to have tapes put on—would you run them up for me?" Then she can't locate the bundle and phones me weeks later, saying she will send them over for me to fix.

I then have gumption enough to say I am overworked with my own sewing and she remarks, "O, but you remember you spoke about fixing them." R. E. E.

Calling Back the Gift.

The cheekiest person I ever knew is one of my neighbors. She baked a fresh cherry pie the other day and, knowing we had no cherries, she brought half of it over and said she knew we would enjoy a piece of warm pie for lunch.

We were eating our lunch and were almost ready to start on the pie when she came running in and said she hoped we had not eaten it, as she had some company and it would just make enough for them! T. E.

Charges Collect.

The cheekiest person I ever met was my husband's brother-in-law, who sent us a wedding present—charges collect. Mrs. M. J. Mc.

Pushed It Away.

When I was first learning to drive the car I parked it one day downtown along the curb right at the head of the parking line, so I wouldn't need to back out. Another fellow came along, and seeing space behind my car, he pushed mine back and grabbed the space I had. That was my cheekiest experience and I may add, not the least exasperating. E. L. R.

Three Dollars to Pay.

A friend in Missouri wrote us that he and his wife would visit us in Indiana. They were to start from the home of his wife's mother who is extremely wealthy.

About the time our friends were to start there were torrential rains in the upper Mississippi valley. The rivers at St. Louis were so high that all trains were delayed and several were wrecked.

Our friends did not arrive on schedule. I met every train for three days. Finally, I prepaid this telegram to the mother: "John and Ruth have not arrived. Did they start?"

Three days later I had a leisurely, long-winded reply, the gist of which was that John and Ruth had started when they said they would and that they would doubtless arrive eventually.

The telegram cost three dollars and was sent collect! E. H.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Why Castoria?

Years ago Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups were the remedies in common use for Infants and Children; Castor Oil so nauseating as to be almost impossible and the others all containing Opium in one form or another, but so disguised as to make them pleasant to the taste, yet really to stupefy the child and give the appearance of relief from pain.

It required years of research to find a purely vegetable combination that would take the place of these disagreeable, unpleasant and vicious remedies that from habit had become almost universal. This was the inception of, and the reason for, the introduction of Fletcher's Castoria, and for over 30 years it has proven its worth, received the praise of Physicians everywhere and become a household word among mothers.

A remedy ESPECIALLY prepared for Infants and Children and no mother would think of giving to her baby a remedy that she would use for herself, without consulting a physician.

Fletcher's Castoria safely relieves

Constipation	Wind Colic	To Sweeten Stomach
Flatulence	Diarrhea	Regulate Bowels

Aids in the assimilation of Food, promoting Cheerfulness, Rest and Natural Sleep without Opiates.

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

A New Feature of Chicago's Morrison Hotel
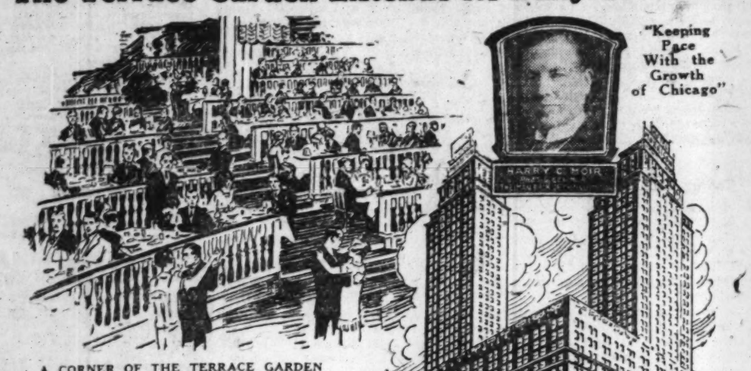
The Terrace Garden Extends Its Daily Service



A CORNER OF THE TERRACE GARDEN MORRISON HOTEL, CHICAGO

OWING to the wide and steadily growing popularity of the Morrison Hotel's celebrated Terrace Garden, the plan of daily meals has been extended to include breakfast, which is served from 6:30 to 11 A. M.

Special "Radio Hour"

Henri Therrien's song-dramas have won extraordinary favor with Terrace Garden patrons, and are featured both at noon and night. They are broadcast from WSWS from 12, midnight, to 1 a. m., while other specialties on the program go on the air at intervals throughout the evening.

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

1944 Outside Rooms, Each with Bath

Every room in the Morrison is outside, each with bath, running ice water and Servidor. A housekeeper is stationed on each floor, and all guests have garage privileges. Yet, with all these conveniences, a guest pays only $3 to $5 for a room that would cost $5 to $8 in any other first-class hotel. At this central location—the very heart of downtown Chicago—the store subleases pay all the ground rent, and the patrons have the entire benefit of the saving.

The Morrison's Ideal Banquet Service

The Morrison is admirably equipped to arrange banquets for all types of social and business organizations. The banquet manager can furnish accommodation for any number—from six to two thousand—in one party.

All guests are invited to visit the tower-roof free of charge

in Chicago's Newest Hotel

For 33 years the Bismarck Hotel has been known to Chicago's visitors for fine food and homelike surroundings.
Now the New Bismarck Hotel—with greater facilities—offers even finer service plus the same warm hospitality and personal attention.
Many new and unique features provide the utmost in comfort for guests. An electric-control system notifies the registry clerk when rooms are ready—eliminating a wait for room assignment. In the rooms a silent signal tells the guest when letters or telegrams are received.

Rooms are large and airy—completely and beautifully furnished. Throughout the hotel, the guest finds a quiet air of refinement—a freedom from garishness.
The same staff of chefs who made the Bismarck famous for food are in charge of the kitchens. Three exquisite main dining rooms and a Coffee Shop have been provided.
The New Bismarck Hotel is conveniently located in Chicago's Loop—a few steps from theatres, shopping and financial districts.

85% of the rooms are priced from

3,000 Mile Sightseeing Tour of 14 Days with 1,000 Mile Ocean Cruise —Like a Trip to Foreign Lands at Cost of Vacation at Home . .

ALL the lure of a trip abroad—all the thrill of crossing the Atlantic—all the glamour of a visit to a tropical isle—all the frolic, recreation, and aquatic sports of a northern seaside resort are merged in the wonderful trip organized this year for the Hollywood Tour.

Before you decide where you are going this summer look into what it offers in a program of wholesome recreation, healthful rest—and magnetic cost. It's like a trip to a foreign land at the cost of a vacation at home.

Every Thursday a Hollywood Touring party sets forth on a varied picturesque "Scenic Circle" with the great metropolis New York and the kaleidoscopic Florida as red letter stops. First it visits the scenic wonder of the world, the great cascade whose name is a household word to Americans—Niagara Falls. Next it travels by daylight down the shore of the Western World Rhine, the Hudson and finally it rounds out the first stage of the tour with a boat trip around Manhattan, parading in splendid panorama the famous skyline, the stupendous bridges, and the amazing drama of the great world port.

Attention New York Visitors

If anyone cares to extend the stay in New York, he may by special stopover without extra charge. Here is a fine chance for those planning a business trip or visit to New York to save money, and net a unique vacation. By taking advantage of the low transportation rates of the Hollywood Tour, you can spend your week or two weeks in New York and then continue to Florida to the best vacation of your life. You may leave with a regular tour or precede it East. The stop-over privilege costs nothing extra. It neither curtails the sightseeing features nor shortens the vacation.

Like a Floating Hotel

Now comes the alluring boat trip down the coast. With the new friends you are sure to meet, with old companions who go with you, you revel in the amusements and entertainment aboard, or idle to your heart's content.

You make the trip on the finest steamship of the Clyde Line, the Seminole, which challenges a trans-Atlantic liner in comfort and fine appointments. For three days, you leave the dull world behind; quit everything except companionship and rest. You promenade the deck, breathing in the invigorating ocean air. It whets your appetite for dinner—and what dinners and breakfasts and luncheons you have aboard the Seminole! You listen to tea concerts at tiffin, and dance at night on the deck. A vacation in itself, this boat ride, renewing interest in life. It gets you in form for the real vacation to come.

Once quartered at the Park View Hotel at Hollywood, a hostelry of the best appointments, you are ready for the round of sightseeing and entertainment that keeps your hours filled with new sights and new amusements. Specially planned motor trips take you to Palm Beach, Miami, and other highlight spots along the Coralline Coast of Florida. You view sports seen only in this unique region.

Most Kindly of Climates

It's the real season at Hollywood, and a revelation in climate awaits you here. An all-year climate, with the glamour of a South Sea Isle, enhanced by the comforts of a northern watering place. The average temperature in June, July and August is 80.5 degrees. The breeze is always in motion; refreshing salt air breezes, heavy with ozone. They free Hollywood from the blistering days and depressing nights of the northern cities.

Sport and Recreation A-Plenty

Every waking hour of your stay in Hollywood is filled with wholesome amusement, summer sports, and entertainment. Something to do always near at hand—golf at the country club, a dip in the surf, aquatic sports at the brilliant $250,000 Bathing Casino, band concerts on the beach, orchestra concerts and dancing at the hotel.

Most for Your Vacation Dollars

By special arrangements with transportation company and unusual rates at Hollywood, the cost of this matchless tour is covered in one low surprising figure. The special price provides all transportation and living expenses there and back again, sleeping quarters and meals on the boat, sleeping quarters and meals at the hotel, and specially conducted sightseeing trips. Everything but meals on train.

Let fancy be your guide, but let your sense of values decide for you. Then you will fill in the coupon and mail it for complete details.

Clip and Mail

There is a paradox of climate at Hollywood. Right on the edge of the tropics, it is cooler in summer than many a Northern city. The average temperature in June, July and August is 80.5 degrees. Nights are 10 degrees cooler. The Gulf Stream about two miles off shore produces air currents which make Hollywood cooler in summer and warmer in winter than elsewhere in Florida.

two things are necessary for a happy Vacation.
Safe Money and personal Service

American Express Travelers Cheques supply both

The carrying of loose money in your pocket is a temptation to criminals and a danger to yourself. Lost or stolen money is rarely recovered.

American Express Travelers Cheques are known everywhere. They are accepted as cash at ticket offices, hotels, resorts, banks, garages, etc.—practically everywhere. About the size of a dollar bill, sky-blue in color, they are easy to get—convenient to carry. They come in $10, $20, $50 and $100 denominations; and they cost only 75 cents per $100—a mere "tip", but a tip that gives you peace of mind wherever you go.

You simply sign your name in one corner when you buy them. When you spend them you sign your name a second time, in the presence of the acceptor. The agreement of your two signatures is your identification. If these Cheques are lost or stolen you get their value back.

Everyone should carry them on every trip. They are especially desirable for vacationists, motorists and women traveling alone with children. They are absolutely necessary for a really happy vacation.

You can buy them at 22,000 banks, American Express and American Railway Express Offices.

Always plan your cruise or tour—and secure your tickets and hotel reservations through

Empress of Scotland

World Cruise

From New York Dec. 2

...like a grand procession of all humanity passing before you—religions, costumes, superstitions, industries, architecture!

Countless new experiences each day—instructive, fascinating—priceless memories.

The world cruise of this magnificent queen of the seas gives you 132 such days...an itinerary of 28,400 miles, 20 countries, 5 continents, 7 seas. Christmas in Holy Land. New Year's Eve in Festive Cairo.

The entire cost, including shore programs, etc., is surprisingly low—as little as 6½ cents a mile. Send for the literature. Compare what you get in luxurious cruising comfort, entertainment and knowledge with a cheerless, rigorous winter at home costing as much—or more.

Ways of Audiences Are Hard to Fathom

By Edward Moore.

THE ways of those mysterious beings, the opera singers, have ever been themes of fiction and song. From the time of the English poet whose name just now evades me, but who wrote something to the effect that Mario could soothe with a tenor note the souls in purgatory—he was writing of "Il Trovatore," of all operas in the world, though the rhyme harmonized—their existence has had a glamour even brighter than that of their cousins of the dramatic stage.

But there are times when the ways of audiences are no less strange, and not always to be explained by the dictum of the wiser showmen that the public is always right. The two performances of "Manon Lescaut" at Ravinia are a case in point.

"Manon Lescaut" opened the season there June 26. For days and weeks before excitement over the possibility of getting tickets reigned. There were even appeals to the music department of this newspaper, though it must have been evident that providing opera tickets hardly comes under any of the music department's functions.

It was given with a super-excellent cast, one of Mr. Eckstein's best, and, though the weather was depressingly cold, there was so much interest and applause over the performance that one would have thought it good for a run. But when it was repeated last Tuesday night, the same super-excellent cast appeared, weather conditions had turned ideal, and, with the tension of an opening performance over, it was more flexible and ingratiating than at first. Yet the audience was of only fair dimensions. Apparently one of the secrets of successful opera giving is to make admittance difficult.

By the way, it has not yet been pointed out in print that "Manon Lescaut" contains not only the best of Puccini's music but several other bits that appeared under other names. One of them is a good start on the tune that ran over the country a year ago and is still running over Europe under the name of "Tea for Two." It is in the second act, about ten minutes before the curtain.

Singers Are Expert Linguists.

Turning back to some technical matters on opera giving, Mr. Eckstein claims that he is ready for any opera in any language, because the Ravinia artists are a group of star linguists as well as star singers. According to his records, his principals come from eleven different countries and they speak something like twenty different languages. If the chorus were included, the number would be greater, but figures there are not available.

Practically all of them are fluent in English, Italian, and French, but there are a lot more. Giuseppe Danise is apparently Ravinia's champion linguist. He sang for four years in Russia under the czarist régime, at which time he learned both Russian and French. But he became interested in languages from an academic as well as professional standpoint, and he has a working knowledge of nearly all the European tongues, including several Slavic dialects.

Lucrezia Bori is easy in Italian, French, and English. Being of Spanish birth, she began with the tongue of her country and added Portuguese before she began on the others. Ina Bourskaya, of Polish birth, speaks that language; also Russian, German, Italian, French, and English. Paolo Ananian also takes a high linguistic rating. He is a native Armenian, and in addition to that language speaks Turkish, modern Greek, Arabic, French, Italian, and English.

Giovanni Martinelli is fluent in the three, as is Mario Chamlee. Edward Johnson adds German to the number, in which he is joined by Elisabeth Rethberg, Luella Mellus, Florence Macbeth, and Alice Gentle. Jose Mojica possesses the four, plus his native Spanish. Louis Hasselmans and Desiré Defrere can both talk to you in Flemish if you desire, or Philine Falco in Dutch, but if these are out of your range you can compromise with any of them in French, Italian, German, or English.

Of the operas presented at Ravinia thus far during the present season, "Madame Butterfly" comes first in point of the international character of its cast, Germany, Canada, Poland, United States, Mexico, Armenia, Italy, and Holland all being represented. In other words, eight different countries were represented by its eight principals. Of the Ravinia principals this year eleven are Italians and eight are Americans. Spain, Germany, Mexico, Poland, France, Belgium, Canada, Armenia, and Holland are all represented.

At the Zurich Festival.

Irving Schwerke, the musical critic of the Paris edition of THE TRIBUNE, took, among his other summer assignments, the modern music festival at Zurich, Switzerland. His report of the proceedings follows below:

"The festival of the International Society for Modern Music, which this year took place in Zurich from June 18 to 23, attracted visitors from many corners of the globe. Among the noted conductors whose services helped to make the performances successful were Volkmar Andreae, Alexander Schaichet, Hermann Dubs, Walter Straram, George Fitelberg, Fritz Busch, and Hermann von Schmeidel.

"Six concerts were given of new and near-new music. Some of the compositions won overwhelming success, others were received with only polite applause. The works performed did not reveal the presence of a new god or even a prophet of voice-power enough to swing a new gospel. The great musical presence the times are seeking was not revealed. None of the proceedings disclosed that Music has stepped forward from where she was some time ago, or altered the direction of her currents. But there was much to indicate that some musicians have stepped backward and that some are floundering.

"The highest point of the festival was 'Litanei' for mixed chorus, trumpets, harps, and percussion instruments, by Felix Petyrek (Abbazia). This work is deeply religious and moving. It strikes a note of profundity seldom realized any more. The general musical contour of the work is Roman Catholic. The composer's treatment of the a cappella style is especially significant, as are also his individual outlook and masterly statement of his message. Another pinnacle was Manuel de Falla's 'Master Pedro's Puppet-Show,' which already has been done in America, and is, I understand, to be taken over by the Adolph Bohm ballet of Chicago. It is music that can be respected and admired; a perfect realization of an ingenuous conception. De Falla may not be the most prolific composer of modern times, but he is certainly one of the best.

"Of the chamber compositions, the work that seemed to merit the most consideration was Frederick Jacobi's Quartet for two violins, viola, and violoncello. Jacobi is a Californian. This quartet is of sturdy workmanship, and while it is not great music, it is direct in method, has vitality, and exhales a healthy atmosphere.

Unique Music.

"Among the orchestral compositions the following two stood out: Five Pieces for Orchestra, opus 10, by Anton Webern (Vienna) are astonishing experiments in sonority per se, and as such are no doubt unique. But to consider them as music which goes beyond the mere tickling of the auditory fancy is out of the question. 'Pastorale and March,' from Symphony for Small Orchestra of Hans Krasa (Prague) is a work of promise. This young composer has a bold technic, good sense of form and orchestral color. He knows what he wants to say and how to say it effectively. Big things are to be expected from him, for he seems to be equipped to produce them. The only piano composition played was Piano sonata, No. 4, in C, by Nicholas Mja-

GOOD MORNING!

I know some folks who'll be interested in the column this morning! Small folks, the folks who are to be Miss Sally Joy Brown's guests at her movie party Thursday at the Chicago theater to see "Ella Cinders." How about it, folks? Going to read what your Auntie Mae writes about dissa mawnin'? ("Slush!" says Father, turning to the stock reports.)

COLLEEN MOORE plays a winning waif rôle.

Well, Sally Joy did so much talking about this picture that I thought I'd just ease around and get the low down on it myself. In other words, see what kind of a critic she really was—or what kind I'd think her.

She's all right, boys and girls. She liked "Ella Cinders" and had a lot of perfectly good reasons FOR liking it. The first one is, it's a picture youngsters will like just as much as the grown folks and that the grown folks—unless they're just hopelessly grown up and WON'T let themselves have a little simple, honest fund now and then; WON'T give way to the urge to be kids for an hour or so and enjoy the way they COULD enjoy a good, old fashioned Cinderella story—that the grown-ups will like just as well as the young folks. (There is ONE long sentence! Maybe you think I got tired writing it—but I didn't.)

The plot of Ella Cinders is a regular Cinderella plot. Tell you about it: Ella is a stepchild. Her father is dead and Ma Cinders, who has two other daughters—Ella's stepsisters—Lotta and Prissy Pill by name, treats Ella just like all story book stepchildren always are treated. Ella tends the furnace and does all the work in a great big house besides acting as ladies' maid, masseuse, and the dear knows what not.

Only One Friend in the World.

Only one friend has Ella in all the hard, cruel world. The iceman.

He is young and strong and straight
'S last name's Lifter. First name's Waite.
He listens at the doors and winders
And hears them rass poor Ella Cinders . . .

. . . and does that razzing get his goat! It certainly does. And does he tell Ella what he thinks of her family? HE certainly does! And does she appreciate his sympathy? SHE CERTAINLY DOES!

One afternoon Ma Cinders and the Pills are entertaining the city mothers in the front room. Card party. Ma and Prissy Pill, rather. Suddenly in bursts Lotta Pill with the daily paper. Lotta is so excited she doesn't know what to do. But she knows what she's GOING to do. She's going to send her photograph right in to the paper for the contest that is announced. It's a beauty contest and the winner will get a free trip to Hollywood and a movie contract.

"WHO," asks Ma Cinders proudly, "could better represent our fair city than my Lotta!"

"Ah-hh h hh!" murmur the city mothers and Lotta looks it. (Lotta nerve!)

Ella Has Initiative.

When Lotta comes in with the tidings, Ella is also in the room making things happy for the guests—putting coal on the fire. She creeps up to listen, is discovered, makes quite a spectacle of herself—for which see pix—and is hauled out of the room by one ear—Ma Cinders' favorite method of escorting this unhappy child into the background.

But Ella has the something that spells success—initiative. The village photographer will charge three dollars to take pictures of the hopeful beauties. Ella hasn't the three—but she tends the neighbors' children three evenings at $1 a tend, acquires the needed capital and hies her to the photographer's all dressed up in her vurra best—which is a vurr' POOR best, as you will see. And is "taken!" How?

I wouldn't tell you. A lot depends on that photograph, you see, and if I'd say thus and so—why it would spoil thus and so for you when you see the movie. Anyhow, Ella is photographed.

Then—a ball is given at which all entrees are supposed to be present. Of course Ma and the Pills go, all dressed up like Christmas trees. Ella, as she helps them put on their trimmings, asks softly if, please, she mayn't tag along.

"I could wear one of your old dresses——?" she says hesitatingly, her eyes as big as sugar plum pies. Lotta gives her a look, and Prissy gives her a look, and Ma Cinders gives her a TERRIBLE look and says, "WHAT ABOUT ALL THAT IRONING——?"

Along Comes the Iceman.

And so the cruel stepmother and the two cruel stepsisters go to the ball and poor little Cinders Ella (see how the name fits?) goes out on the front stoop, sits down, and cries. She's pretty brave, but this time she just can't help herself.

And then along comes—guess? Fairy godmother? Nope—nor a godfather, either. Nobody less than the strong right arm that hustles ice of a morning. Strong right arm attached to a strong young man who says . . .

But—guess what he says.

Guess what he does.

Guess whether Ella Cinders goes to the ball.

Guess whether she wins the contest.

Guess what happens when she goes to Hollywood—IF she does.

Guess if she stays there. And then guess a lot about the iceman—for there is much, much more to the iceman than you'd ever think from what I've written.

Colleen Moore as You Like Her.

You will have gathered by this time that "Ella Cinders" is no deep scientific work. No mooted questions are brought up for discussion. The "searchlight of candor" is turned on no "issue" whatsoever. No sir, "Ella Cinders" is just a nice, sweet, simple, old fashioned little affair, nicely directed and photographed, pleasingly acted by everybody, and bringing little Colleen Moore to those who like her as they like her best.

Lloyd Hughes is awfully nice in it, too. He's been seen in a lot of pictures with Colleen Moore and they do tell me that the reason for this is that Colleen's husband thinks he's a fine and wholesome type, the sort of chap he doesn't mind having embrace the adored youngster who is his wife. Besides, he considers Mr. Hughes a good actor—so do I—and that the rich young man he so often plays—and at any rate the strong, upstanding fine chap he ALWAYS plays—as played by him is just what Colleen Moore's usually impoverished, lovable, and mischievous heroine needs.

The supporting cast you'll approve of.

I THINK you'll approve of the whole picture. That is, of course if—what I said in me opening paragraphs . . .

See you tomorrow!

Havelock Ellis

By H. L. Mencken.

IT is a curious fact, and not without its dark humors, that Havelock Ellis had passed his 67th birthday before the first book about him was published. For the chances seem to be very good that he will be remembered as long as any other Englishman of his generation, and perhaps far longer than any save a corporal's guard. Such a man, one would think, would be a great deal discussed and written of. But it has not been so. I have read him constantly since the '90s, when his first book, "The New Spirit," was new, and I have had certain polite contacts with him for ten years, but until Dr. Isaac Goldberg's excellent "biographical and critical survey" of him came into my hands, a month or two back, I knew little more about him, as a man, than I knew about the Grand Lama of Tibet.

Goldberg's book, in a way, explains why this should have been so. It shows Ellis as a man almost fabulously careless of the usual fruits of fame. He seems to have absolutely no desire to make a stir in the world. No man that I know of has done more, in his time, for the liberation of the human mind, and yet no man has done less to press his own ideas. When, in 1897, the first volume of his great work, "Studies in the Psychology of Sex," was suppressed by the English Comstocks, he accepted the fiat without resistance, and kept on with his labor quite unruffled. The six volumes, by a delightful irony, are now published in the United States, but in England they are still under the ban, and Ellis, so far as I know, has never made any effort to have it lifted.

His admirers at home, I suspect, were eager to challenge the Comstocks and make a martyr of him. If so, he gave them no aid and comfort himself. The job that he had planned was still ahead of him, and he kept at it serenely. To this day the generality of Englishmen seem to know little about him. His celebrity is greatest on the continent, and he has had his largest influence, perhaps, in the United States.

Ellis' inquiries into the psychology of sex constitute but a small part of his life work, and in his own view, perhaps, they are less important than other things he has done, but it is probable that he will be remembered for them long after some of his other enterprises are forgotten. They had the astounding effect of breaking down one of the oldest and most rigid taboos known to man. When he published his first volume the subject of sex was never mentioned save with ribaldry: the almost universal view of it was the Abraham Lincoln view. When his sixth was done the thing had become respectable, and the book shops of the world swarmed with treatises upon it. More, its study had become scientific.

That change is sometimes ascribed to Freud, but I don't think that Freud had half so much to do with it as Ellis. The defect of Freud was that he concerned himself almost exclusively with the pathology of sex—that is, with such manifestations of it as were unusual and, to the average person, alarming and revolting. Ellis concentrated his attention upon what was normal. For the first time the every day manifestations of sex were examined calmly and scientifically, without bias or prejudice. For the first time the basic facts were disentangled from the ages old mesh of superstitions and false observation, and sexual phenomena were discussed like any other natural phenomena.

The effects of this inquiry were tremendous. Not only was a vast mass of new and valuable knowledge unearthed, but the fact was made plain that that knowledge could be imparted decently, without pious snuffling and dishonest evasion. At one stroke the subject came out into the open, after unnumbered centuries in the shadows. Today, despite some lingering snarling by prudes, it is discussed frankly and honestly, and even the highest ecclesiastical dignitaries are found arguing that its elements should be imparted to the young. It seems to me that this is genuine progress. I don't contend that the discussion has solved any of the fundamental problems; on the contrary, I am convinced that most of them will forever remain insoluble. But when an ancient taboo is broken down something is gained that is more valuable than the solving of problems—and that something we owe to Ellis.

It is unfortunate that, in the United States at least, his services in this field have obscured his service in others. His writings on sex, in fact, constitute but a small part of the body of his work. What interests him most is not the specific problem, but the general attitude of mind. The thing he has flung himself against is the general human disinclination to take in new ideas; the utopia he has preached is a utopia of free spirits. His enemy is the unyielding prejudice, the immovable axiom. He sees life, not as a series of cowardly yieldings to rules, but as a gay and somewhat gaudy adventure, an endless experiment.

His first book, "The New Spirit," was in form simply an eloquent protest against the boiled mutton complacency and stupidity of Victorian England. It was published at the very beginning of the revolutionary '90s, and all the younger men of that electric decade quarried it to good effect. In it was the first adequate essay in English upon the Zeus of the new movement, old Henrik Ibsen, and in it, too, were capital chapters on such earlier free spirits as Diderot, Heine, and Whitman. The thing he spoke for was "a quickening of the pulse of life"—in brief, Emerson all over again, with a new assurance borrowed from the physical sciences. Emerson sat in a grove, mooning over the emancipation of the human mind. Ellis saw and proved that this emancipation could be made real.

"The New Spirit" is now forgotten, but in its day, I believe, it had an immense influence. The young Englishmen of the '90s got more out of it than convenient facts; they got the new orientation that they needed. It threw out its ripples, too, upon the continent. The gladiators of the New Germany movement read it, and it was translated into French by Henry Bérenger, now French ambassador to the United States. I remember well the splash that it made, and the eager borrowing of its ideas.

In those days, I suspect, Ellis was himself somewhat uncertain about his path in life. Trained as a medical man, but an artist at bottom, he seems to have stood somewhat irresolute before the arts, especially literature, and the sciences. In these days of narrow specialization it may seem incredible, but it is a fact that at one time he was editing both the Mermaid Series of old English dramatists and the Contemporary Science Series—both of them works of the first importance. The former remains unchallenged to this day; to the latter Ellis contributed two books of his own, "The Criminal" and "Man and Woman."

During the '90s and until near the end of the first decade of the new century, the sciences seemed to have first call upon him. It was in those years that he published his "Studies in the Psychology of Sex," his "Study of British Genius" and his "World of Dreams." But after 1910 and especially after the beginning of the war he turned to the fine arts, and to the period since 1914 belongs his fine series of books upon the art of living: the three volumes of "Impressions and Comments," the "Little Essays of Love and Virtue," and "The Dance of Life."

These volumes revealed a new Ellis. It was not so much that his ideas changed as that his manner changed. His earlier scientific books had displayed him as an adept at clear exposition, but their style was naturally somewhat barren and formal. But in the first volume of the "Impressions and Comments" he blossomed forth, almost surprisingly, as a master of colorful and eloquent English, a stylist in the best sense. What he had to say was still apposite and important, but even more important was the charming way in which he said it. The three volumes were widely read, and I daresay Ellis made friends in quarters where he had been long under suspicion.

So he stands at 67, still in full vigor and with plenty of work still ahead of him. He has fought a long and a good fight, and it has been for things worth while. I believe he'll not be soon forgotten.

SOME THOUGHTS ON SUMMER VACATIONS

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—This is presumably written as of July 11, and also as of New York. But as a matter of truth, it is written as of July 1 and likewise as of the Broadway Limited en route to Chicago. By the time it reaches the eyes of its gentle readers, if any, your correspondent will probably be trying desperately to hole a last long putt on a golf course somewhere hard by the south shore of Lake Michigan.

BURNS MANTLE takes a holiday.

Your surmise is correct. The vacation spell has set in. Funny things, vacations. Funny, at least, in the sense of being curious. 'Most everybody looks forward to them. All the happy people I know have them planned out months ahead. At the first smell of spring they begin dragging in railroad folders and brightly colored literature. By the first of June they are half way there in their minds. A lot of them have been there and back. They didn't like it. One chap I know makes at least a dozen mental round trips, and then stays home. He has been nearly every place the last ten years. Every place that advertises. I left him sitting on the porch of the Frontenac hotel in Quebec sipping a cordial when I left home. But his wife had just called to him to put out the light and come to bed, so she could go to sleep. So I suspect he is back and all unpacked by this time.

I have a different and a much more practical system. I never go any place until I have some definite word from there. This year I did casually plan a few short trips. I thought I would throw the golf clubs and the family into the back of the Florida model and dash up to the Lake Placid club for a few rounds of golf and a little post-graduate work with Dr. Dewey in simplified spelling. And from there I thought some of running over to watch Cal, who is, or will be, only 20 miles away, toil all day, like Peter, and catch nothing. Then I was going down to Westhampton and watch the playful breakers try to roll Percy Hammond up on the beach. And from there I was going back home and superintend the workmen as they laid the last of the tiles on the last of our mortgages.

But the night the major suggested that she thought she would take the other hundred dollars and go out and see her mother something told me I was going west.

Leaving Broadway Stranded.

I feel a little guilty leaving the Broadway play producers practically without a guide for a month. They are so helpless. For instance, just before I left I promised John Golden that I would go down to Atlantic City and see a play of his that was worrying him and tell him frankly just what was wrong with it. I did.

It was all right, I said, except for the prologue and the first three acts. These should be rewritten on a different subject.

"I don't think so," said John, greatly relieved. And that practically was that.

In New York I left sixteen comedies still playing while their managers prayed the cool weather would continue. They were.

"Abie's Irish Rose"	At the Republic
"Is Zat So?"	At Chanin's
"Cradle Snatchers"	At the Music Box
"Pomeroy's Past"	At the Longacre
"The Last of Mrs. Cheyney"	At the Fulton
"Alias the Deacon"	At the Hudson
"Laff That Off"	At Wallack's
"The Patsy"	At the Booth
"One of the Family"	At the Klinger
"Love 'Em and Leave 'Em"	At the Times Square
"Square Crooks"	At the Maxine Elliott
"Love in a Mist"	At the Gaiety
"What Every Woman Knows"	At the Bijou
"At Mrs. Beam's"	At the Guild
"One Man's Woman"	At the 48th Street
"The Man from Toronto"	At the Selwyn

If it happens you are going east this summer, to the Philadelphia sesqui or to see your wife's mother, or anything, you might like to know that my choice of six of these would be "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," "Cradle Snatchers" (vulgar but funny), "What Every Woman Knows" (because of Helen Hayes' performance), "The Patsy," "At Mrs. Beam's," and "Alias the Deacon." Throwing in "Love in a Mist" for good measure on Madge Kennedy's account.

Dramas Worth Seeing.

There were eight dramas, too:

"The Half-Naked Truth"	At the Cort
"Craig's Wife"	At the Morosco
"The Great God Brown"	At the Klaw
"The Shanghai Gesture"	At the Shubert
"Lulu Belle"	At the Belasco
"Kongo"	At the Biltmore
"The House of Usher"	At the 49th Street
"Sex"	At the 63d Street

Being a serious drama lover, you should choose "Craig's Wife," and "The Great God Brown" (if you like O'Neill) first, but you will probably want to see "The Shanghai Gesture" and "Lulu Belle." Being you, and having heard a lot about them, I probably would, too. "Kongo" is a good rough melodrama, but not likely to please the women folk overmuch.

There are fourteen musical shows still playing, and none of them is without its attractions. They are, in the order of production and not of merit:

"Earl Carroll's Vanities"	At the Earl Carroll
"The Vagabond King"	At the Casino
"Sunny"	At the New Amsterdam
"Cocoanuts"	At the Lyric
"Song of the Flame"	At the 44th Street
"A Night in Paris"	At the Casino de Paris
"The Girl Friend"	At the Vanderbilt
"Iolanthe"	At the Plymouth
"Garrick Gayeties"	At the Garrick
"Kitty's Kisses"	At the Playhouse
"The Great Temptations"	At the Winter Garden
"The Merry World"	At the Imperial
"George White's Scandals"	At the Apollo
"Grand Street Follies"	At the Neighborhood
"No Foolin'"	At the Globe

You can't miss it far choosing any of the revues. Mr. Ziegfeld's "No Foolin'" is the most beautiful and the cleanest, Mr. White's "Scandals" the snappiest, according to Broadway standards. "The Great Temptations" is the most flashy. "The Merry World" is a happy compromise and "A Night in Paris" a good average.

"Iolanthe" will enthuse the Gilbert and Sullivan fans, and "Song of the Flame" and "The Vagabond King" stand alone as the finest operettas of the season. "Sunny," with Marilyn Miller, is still the champion of musical comedies and "The Cocoanuts" is the most riotous of the fun shows, largely because the Marx brothers make the fun.

If you must know, all the revues are pretty naked, excepting "No Foolin'."

Philadelphia Stages a Spectacle.

Stopping in Philadelphia, you will probably want to see the big spectacle "Freedom," for which R. H. Burnside has been training some 4,000 amateurs and professionals for months. Acting Secretary Dulsell of the Actors' Equity association made the city of Philadelphia post a bond of $50,000 the other day to guarantee the 500 Equity actors against walking home. But I really don't think that should make you suspicious.

Getting back to vacations for a paragraph or two, before we leave Indiana—for this is written as of the next morning after breakfast—vacations are really wonderful in that they pick you up literally by force and throw you down somewhere else. And being somewhere else is what you need.

If you had your way—or at least if I had my way—you probably would stay home and do more damage trying to fix things around the house than the vacation allowance would even pay for.

The major figured up one day the money we had saved by

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

BITS of news, mostly about the things to be shown next month and in September, float in with the Friday heat; and bits of news help a lot when it's a matter of uttering a column for a July Sunday. . . . Some of the bits are from Mr. Horace J. Liveright, who recently came to Chicago long enough to have a debate with Mr. John S. Sumner as to the sex-aspects of plays and books, and shook up those present with a frank chat about clothes and comportment in the Maison Liveright.

WALLACE EDDINGER He's staying on to head the new week's bill in the Palace.

Not at all discouraged by two profitless years of fooling with the theater, Mr. Liveright says he will stage not fewer than six plays in the new season, and that he may go as high as eight. One of these is the dramatization Patrick Kearney has made of Dreiser's interminable "An American Tragedy," for which, Mr. Liveright explains, the cast is complete save that he lacks an actress for the seductive Sandra. The five others listed as certain by Mr. Liveright are "Black Boy," by Jim Tully, who writes so enticingly about tramps and bums and the like, and Frank Dazey; "The Wild Man," a comedy by Marc Connelly, who used to write witty pieces with George S. Kaufman, and Herman J. Mankiewicz, co-author with Mr. Kaufman of "A Good Fellow" (about which I hear nice things); "Balloons," by Edwin Justus Mayer, whose play about Cellini named "The Firebrand" ran a season in New-York and failed wherever else it was tried; "When the Devil Was Sick," by Arthur Pollock, who writes about the drama for the Brooklyn Eagle; and "Cover-Charge," Samuel Shipman's dramatization of Cornell Woolrich's like-named novel. . . .

Paul Robeson, a Negro actor heard in Chicago not long ago as a singer, is to be made a star in "Black Boy." . . . As to "When the Devil Was Sick," Mr. Pollock bases his play not only on George F. Hummel's novel named "A Good Man," but also on a scenario by Mr. Liveright, himself. . . .

And Mr. Liveright's contemplation of other plays leads him to suspect that he may stage a making-over by Mr. Mayer of Christopher Marlowe's "All for Love" and what he describes as "a modern-dress version of Shakspere's 'The Taming of the Shrew.'" Among Mr. Liveright's few and futile adventures as a producer has been the New-York exhibition of "Hamlet" in store-clothes.

Other Bits of News.

"Bubbling Over" is given out as the name of the piece wherein Cecil Lean and Miss Cleo Mayfield [Mrs. Lean] will fare forth as stars. As the piece in preparation for Miss Beatrice Lillie and Charles Winninger is named "Bubbles," and as the populace has a tendency to fall into confusion where one title suggests another, the chances are that one of the shows will get a new name. . . . Hugh Cameron, Miss Jeannette MacDonald, and Miss Brenda Bond are named as of the cast with Mr. and Mrs. Lean.

Among the visitors in Chicago is Miss Queenie Smith, who is my notion of a clever song-and-dance soubrette. She has been in "Tip-Toes," a definite success in New-York; and she expects to be in it soon in Chicago. . . . A London venture with the piece is likely to be deferred because of the difficulty of finding a cast for it over there.

Another visitor is Mr. Burns Mantle, my neighbor to the immediate left. This column was his in other years, when he wrote about the drama in Chicago to the benefit of THE TRIBUNE and to the betterment of the public's taste and understanding in matters of the theater. . . . His Year-Book of the Drama for 1925-'26 will soon be on sale; and there isn't and never has been anything else of the sort so good as Mr. Mantle's.

"The Vagabond King" will this week click 350 in its New-York run. . . . It is bulletined for the reopening, about Labor-Day, of the Great Northern; and, like all other Chicagoans who have heard the operetta, I hope that Dennis King comes in the title-part.

One of the industrious minor playwrights, De Witt Newing, has tackled the task of making into a play Arthur B. Reeve's popular stories about Craig Kennedy, the detective.

And Other Bits.

Owen Davis, with an empty afternoon to kill, used part of it up in making a dramatization of Homer Croy's novel named "They Had to See Paris!" . . . I've again lost count not only on the number of plays Mr. Davis has written in the quarter-century since he left Harvard, but also on the number bearing his name listed for production this season. He was said a year ago to have had more than two hundred pieces staged.

Samuel Shipman, also, seems to be involved in many of the season's new plays. He is mentioned above for the dramatization of "Cover-Charge" which Mr. Liveright is to put on. His name recurs in the bits of news as co-author with Kenneth Perkins of "The Swamp Angel," a melodrama whose locale is the Louisiana levees.

"A Match for Three," by Hadley Waters and Mrs. Katherine Havfland Taylor, and "People Don't Do Such Things" by Lyon Mearson and Edward M. Schönberg, are new pieces listed for production. . . . The title of the second suggests the "tag" of "Hedda Gabler."

Dan Totheroh's name comes back to print as the author of "Daughters of Music." . . . The author won some attention in New-York last year for a piece called, I think, "Wild Birds," in which some of the play-reporters said they discerned merit and promise and the like. It was stated soon thereafter that none of six or seven stars would ever again know happiness unless she got the rôle of a wild little plum-picker in a piece of his named "Fruit of the Earth." I read that piece; and my reaction was wonder as to what the six or seven actresses saw in it.

Miss Binnie Hale, who is popular over there, is to have in London in "Sunny" the rôle Miss Marilyn Miller has in New-York. I have already noted that Jack Buchanan will be the London performer of Jack Donogue's part. . . . "Sunny," from all reports, remains the most popular of all the song-and-dance shows in New-York, where it has been on view since October. Its receipts for the week ending the 3d instant were said to be higher than the receipts for any of the new shows, including Mr. Ziegfeld's and George White's.

The title of the piece wherein Leo Carrillo is again to try to be a star has been changed from "Hold 'Em Up!" to "The Stolen Lady."

Glenn Hunter, who is expected to act here next season in "Young Woodley," has been acting one of John Barrymore's old rôles, Peter Ibbetson, with a weekly-change company. . . . Mr. Hunter is perfectly cast in "Young Woodley": his rôle is even better for him than was Merton of the Movies.

Mrs. Rida Johnson Young's "Cock o' the North," a failure in New-York when given there as "Cock o' the Roost," is a failure in London, also. . . . "Rose-Marie" is still running profitably in London, where it long since broke all the records of Drury-Lane.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

HAL SKELLY, who performs the title-rôle of "The City Chap," takes over the management of the piece with tonight's transfer from the Woods to the Harris. . . . Wallace Eddinger, when he shall have played this week in the Palace, is to go with Miss Margaret Lawrence [Mrs. Eddinger] to Rochester, there to engage in the try-out performances of a piece by Mr. and Mrs. Hatton called "Long Island Love." This seems to be a play other than the one by the Hattons called "Treat 'Em Rough!" which has been tentatively bulletined for the Adelphi when the Messrs. Archer shall have turned that theater back to Mr. Woods.

Heat, the Fourth-of-July week-end, and the strike of the transportation workers combined to give to the New-York theaters a heavy loss. The current issue of Variety reports that the night of the 3d instant ticket-brokers were on the sidewalks offering seats even for the shows charging five-fifty for a dollar or so.

Closings last night in New-York were of "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," "Song of the Flame," "The Man from Toronto," and "One of the Family." . . . The first-named had been through a real run, with Miss Ina Claire, Roland Young, and A. E. Matthews as the principal players. "Song of the Flame," also, is said to belong in an authentic list of last season's successes there: Mr. Mantle so classifies it in the adjoining column. "The Man from Toronto" was a hopeless venture. "One of the Family," shown here in the Princess last November, had been kept going in New-York since late in December with cut-rate tickets and a commonwealth arrangement among the actors, who included there as here Grant Mitchell and Mrs. Louise Closser-Hale.

The new things of the week in New-York are "My Magnolia," a Negro piece, postponed from last week, and "The Blonde Sinner," a piece with songs, by Leon De Costa, who wrote the mess named "Kosher Kitty Kelly." . . . A third piece that had been scheduled for this week, "Honest Liars," is postponed until the 19th.

Changing Playbills

"Frosty," with Miss Sybilla Bowhan, in the Adelphi.—A play by Augustus Bowhan about which no information is vouchsafed save the statement that the locale is the Canadian Northwest. Indications are that the play has not yet been acted. Miss Bowhan may be recalled as the young woman who had the rôle of Wanda and the song-and-dance about the totem-pole in last year's run here of "Rose-Marie." . . . Opens tonight.

"The City Chap," in the Harris.—The song-and-dance version of "The Fortune-Hunter" that has been running six weeks in the Woods. . . . Transfers tonight.

Le Maire's Affairs, with Miss Sophie Tucker, in the Woods.—A revue by Jack Lait, Andy Rice, and others, with music by Martin Broones, whose American celebrity to-date is that he is the husband of Miss Charlotte Greenwood. The show was performed last week in Detroit. The point of its name is that it is the venture of Rufus Le Maire, who has for some time been an associate of the Messrs. Shubert. Ted Lewis, an idol of the Palace Music-Hall's clientèle, and Lester Allen, who was here in four or five issues of George White's Scandals, are co-eminent with Miss Tucker, among whose other associates are Lou Hascall, John Price Jones, Miss Sally Starr, Miss Nellie Breen, Miss Albertina Vitak, and a corps of dancing-girls trained by Miss Albertina Rasch. . . . Opens tomorrow night.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 1.

"The Great Gatsby," with James Rennie, in the Studebaker.—Owen Davis' dramatization of F. Scott Fitzgerald's like-named novel. The play had a run last season in New-York, where the reporters said it was good.

HER NAME'S UP

MISS SYBILLA BOWHAN

She had the part of the murderous Wanda in the long Chicago run, last year, of "Rose-Marie," wherein she led the totem-pole song-and-dance—a gay and popular stunt neatly placed in the scene following that wherein the squaw killed her husband. And now Miss Bowhan returns as the principal performer in "Frosty," the attributes of which are not at present known to The Tribune, although bulletins on the play say that she will dance in it.

Take Your Choice.

"When does the half-past five train leave?" asked the city man of a country railway porter.

"Five thirty," was the reply.

"Well," continued the questioner, "the church clock is twenty-seven minutes past, the post office clock is twenty-five minutes past, your clock is thirty-two minutes past—now which clock am I to go by?"

"Yer can go by any clock you like," responded the porter, "but yer can't go by the train, for it's gone." U. K.

Old Maid's Wish.

Two old maids were planning for the holidays, and one said, "Anna, would a long stocking hold all you'd want for Christmas?"

"No, Elvira," responded the other, "but a pair of socks would!" M. B. M.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

If you wish your letter printed in this column, please write on one side of the paper only. If you want them answered personally, please inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Some Diatribe!

Dear Miss Tinee: What wailing and gnashing there would have been if I had been the parent of "Blind Goddess." Poor Arthur Train! How he must have suffered at seeing his child absolutely murdered by some cheap continuity writer. Poetic license can be forgiven, but continuity writers should be hung and quartered when they do what was done to such a clever book. I know they have the censors to consider, but why, O why do they have to rob a book of its finest points?

I recall, hazily, that you praised the work of Louise Dresser, and we are agreed on that score. I do not remember what you had to say about Esther Ralston and Jack Holt, but I know what I have to say.

Jack Holt certainly did not depict Hugh Dillon. First of all, he was young—Jack Holt is not; second, he was a dreaming idealist—and who could ever picture that of Jack Holt? There are many who could have played it to greater advantage—Conrad Nagel, for instance. I like Holt, but not in that part.

And my desire for the eternal fitness of things causes a kick against Miss Ralston's Movia, which should have been a fine girl—extremely reserved—one of the secrets of her father's adoration of her. Miss Ralston made her a spiteful, vindictive hoyden.

As a cheap melodrama it would pass, but as a page from life—No! And that was what Mr. Train intended it.

A word of advice to intelligents—check your brains at the box office when going to see the average movie.

Yours truly, ELIZABETH B.

To "the Bunch."

Dear Miss Tinée: I don't like to use your column to tell that bunch what I think of them, but I guess I'll have to.

Now, you fellows! [You must be of the male sex or you would not use such language,] I am going to tell you what I think of you, just like you did with Gloria Swanson. You are poor movie fans, and you ought to be ashamed of yourselves. You certainly don't have any respect for the ladies. I think Miss Swanson and Rudy are both good. Even though you didn't like Miss Swanson, you could have explained your feelings in a more gentlemanlike way. PEANUT.

A Protest.

Dear Mae Tinee: I want to protest against Hal Roach's using that repulsive midget in "Our Gang" comedies. In my opinion, such freaks should not be exploited. My kiddies and I have always enjoyed the Gang so much until this recent addition was made.

I like your peppy reviews and admire your fearless attack on punk pictures. G. M. C.

skowsky (Moscow). The working out of this sonata is lucid and clear. A seeking tragic eloquence pervades the whole. It is perhaps the kind of piano music Schumann would give us if he were living and writing today—in Russia.

Other composers and their works presented were: 'Psalmus Hungaricus,' for mixed chorus, tenor solo, and orchestra, by Zoltan Kodaly (Budapest); 'King David,' Biblical cantata, by Arthur Honegger (Paris); Trio for violin, viola, and cello, Walter Geiser (Bale); Quintet for flute, oboe, clarinet, horn, and bassoon, Arnold Schoenberg (Vienna); 'Le Miroir de Jesus,' for soprano solo, female chorus, string orchestra, and harp, of the late André Caplet (Paris); 'Portsmouth Point,' overture for orchestra, W. T. Walton (London); Concerto for orchestra, Paul Hindemith (Frankfort); Partita for piano and orchestra, Alfred Casella (Rome), Fifth Symphony for violin, trumpet, and orchestra, Ernest Levy (Bale Paris); 'Foules' for orchestra, P. O. Ferroud (Paris); 'Danse de la Sorciere,' Alenander Transman (Warsaw-Paris); Septet for flute, string quartet, soprano, and piano, Arthur Hoerée (Paris); Concerto for violin and wind instruments, Kurt Weill (Berlin).

An Open Letter from Berlin.

The following account comes from Herbert M. Johnson, who is still in Europe in the interests of the Chicago Civic Opera company. The present letter is sent from Berlin:

The cockpit of financial, political, and social change ever since the war, the German capital has now become the pivotal center of controversy between idealism and the coldly practical. And that strife rages over the old Royal opera, now the Stadtische (or state) opera.

For many years that institution has had the unique advantage of possessing two homes—the old Royal opera at the foot of Unter den Linden, where grand opera is sung throughout the colder months, and the Kroll theater, in Koenigsplatz, opposite the reichstag, where activities are transferred during the summer and whenever emergency necessitates. The latter institution is in use at this time, despite the inclement weather, in order to permit the old Royal opera to be rebuilt. It is about the latter that the storm of strife rages so bitterly that the excellence of current offerings is almost lost sight of.

The proposed rehabilitation of the Royal opera is premised on the utilitarian view without particular regard for historic associations. The Prussian ministry of education and fine arts has the work in hand and arrayed against it is the public at large, actuated by deep veneration for the weather beaten group of structures of which the Royal opera is a unit. The people regard these—the old Kaiser Wilhelm palace, the university, the museum, modern palace, the opera, the Catholic cathedral—and the numerous monuments as sacred symbols of the glory was once was Berlin. The squat old opera house with its front of pillars, like an ancient Greek temple, is dearer to them than the comforts, convenience, and greater artistic illusion possible in a modern theater, for does it not stand, in so far as the exterior is concerned, just as built under the royal command of Frederick the Great?

So they have rallied under the banner of idealism to stay the "destroying hand" of the ministry, and the battle rages with all the bitterness that characterizes the warfare between our own fundamentalists and modernists at home, proving that an artistic bone of contention can stir quite as much feeling as a religious subject—at least, over here!

The point has been reached where the controversy has become national, with the result that the Society of German Architects has made public an appeal addressed to President von Hindenburg to prevent "the impending catastrophe."

The Story of Joseph Kroll.

Discernible beneath the smoke of battle and closely connected with the struggle is an eloquent illustration of the manner in which the United States has drawn upon and absorbed Europe's artistic assets. Generations ago one Joseph Kroll conducted at popular prices a garden theater, semi-open, for concert and opera purposes in Breslau. His success attracted the attention of Friedrich Wilhelm IV., who summoned Kroll to Berlin and gave him a plot of ground for the same purpose in what was then the Thiergarten. Thus founded, the Kroll opera developed throughout the life of its originator, passing at his death to his daughter. Rebuilt and given fresh artistic impetus from time to time, the institution passed in 1888 to the third generation of the family, old Kroll's grandson, Joseph Engel, who gave it such an aggressive management that it became recognized competition for the Royal opera. World famous artists sang there. For instance, Mme. Schumann-Heink was long a member of the company, and at a salary of $75 a month!

The competitive thought could not be brooked in the governing circles of the Royal opera; in 1894 the property passed to the king of Prussia, and Engel was on his way to America with William Hohenzollern's draft, covering the price, in his pocket. Thus it came to pass that the ministry of education and fine arts has today a secondary home for its Stadtische opera while battling over the fate of its ancient, more monumental and traditional home.

The late Oscar Hammerstein was waiting with open arms to welcome Engel, with whom he had for some time been negotiating, and that generalissimo of one man unsubsidized opera presentation soon enjoyed the benefits of Engel's skill in stagecraft and economy—both desperate necessities with Hammerstein at the time. The latter has long since gone to his final reward and what remains of the institution he built up is in other hands still employing his trade mark, the Manhattan Opera company, as a prized possession. But that does not end the story by a whole lot, nor terminate the musical consequences incident to Joseph Engel being lured to America.

"Parsifal" in English.

His son, a great-grandson of old Joseph Kroll, was at the time a student at Munich, preparing to carry on the family traditions by assuming the management of the Kroll opera when his turn came. Joseph Engel was not long in New York before Col. Henry W. Savage developed his brilliant idea of producing "Parsifal" in America, and in English. He arranged with Engel to return to Germany to negotiate many difficulties confronting the project, including the recruiting of a number of German artists who were absolutely essential to the performance. When Engel stepped from the gangplank on to American soil with his retinue, his son, Carl, accompanied him.

Before long Cleofonte Campanini, an associate of Engel's Hammerstein days, was whipping into shape the Philadelphia-Chicago organization that was destined ultimately to become the Chicago Civic opera. Campanini, now also gathered to his fathers, drew Engel to his ranks in the capacity of stage manager, making the third important American lyric organization to obtain advantage of the generations of experience personified by the immigrant musician. Mr. Engel, now an old gentleman, steeped in the traditions of opera, still is identified with the Chicago organization, but the trail turns to the following generation, personified by his son, Carl.

The latter never returned to Germany except to complete his studies and for visits. Today he is in charge of the musical division of the congressional library at Washington—the depository of the musical wealth of the United States as the fountain head of copyrights—and administrator of Uncle Sam's only incursion into cultural music. A little recital hall was added to the institution something like a year ago. It was opened with a program of chamber music in which Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, participated, and occasionally a concert is heard there. Aside from this, army and navy bands constitute Uncle Sam's total contribution to musical activity. The immigrant boy—fourth generation from the founder of Kroll's opera—can be said to occupy a position unique, indeed.

THEY WEPT WHEN SHE LEFT ENGLAND

MISS SOPHIE TUCKER

BELIEVE it or don't; but the original of this picture is she who, fifteen years ago, was known in the ads and on the hoardings as "The Mary Garden of Ragtime." That was when Miss Tucker held forth in what was then the American Music-Hall, and is now the Eighth-Street Theater. She first "spoke lines" as Jennie Wimp in "Louisiana Lou," wherein she spent the season of 1911-'12 in the La Salle and the next season on tour. She has since made her way to the top in the varieties, and is today said by the overlords of the two-a-day to be one of the three or four most potent attractions they are able to offer to their patrons. . . . And she's back as the star of Le Maire's Affairs.

Some Thoughts on Summer Vacations

By Burns Mantle.

my being too busy to fix things, and it amounted to within $20 of enough to buy an ensemble something or other. I was practically dumfounded.

Of course, I have always had a theory that if we practice a whole year trying to achieve serenity and a chance to enjoy it that it is rather foolish, when the chance comes, to take all the loose things in two chiffoniers and a couple of clothes closets and move them half way across the continent searching for the very thing you have just achieved at home.

But, as a matter of truth, I don't suppose any of us would know what to do with a serene moment if we were to come upon one. I know we wouldn't in New York. I admit we have never tried. The minute there is any threat of our lives becoming serene we go out and organize something to stir them up again. Usually a conversational bridge.

After I conquer golf for my health I'm going to take up bridge seriously, both to improve my fluency of expression and develop logic in defense of an alibi. I really am quite a player, but somebody always wants to know why I led the queen.

Real Life Farce.

All joking aside, if you can call it joking, vacations are both restful and instructive. Restful even if you don't sleep and instructive if you do no more than casually observe what is going on about you. For example: The young mother across the dining car aisle this morning, brunette and 25 under the skin, gave a demonstration of forcible feeding that will be extremely helpful to all who saw it. Her subject was a small papa's little man of 2 and mamma, grabbing him a little resentfully about the neck with her left arm and forcing open his jaws by pressing her fingers into the corners of his small mouth, would spill therein a dessert spoonful of gruel, immediately closing the mouth and holding it closed until the gruel had either disappeared or strangulation had set in. Following strangulation son would set up such a howl it was all mother could do, try as she did, to outscreech him.

Papa wasn't along. But wherever he is I'll wager he has wished a thousand times if he has wished once that he had followed his natural instinct and demonstrated his preference for blondes. Perhaps he did.

Well, here we are in good old gray Chicago. So long!

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHE'S JUST IT

MISS GRACE HAMPTON

She is the actress of Lady Beekman, who desires the return of a tiara purchased by her husband for Lorelei Lee, in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"; and it doesn't seem to The Tribune that Miss Anita Loos, the author, could reasonably ask for more than Miss Hampton gives to the rôle.

Notes on Music and Musicians

An innovation is to be introduced into the Monday night concerts at Ravinia beginning tomorrow. Heretofore the programs have been concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, with incidental solos. From now on, while the orchestra will still be important, the solo idea is to be developed practically to the point of a recital in connection with the orchestra. That first class soprano, Luella Mellus, will lead off on the new plan tomorrow night. She will sing the "Mignon" Polonaise, by Thomas, then a group of songs in French by Saint-Saëns, Lisat, and Weckerlin, finally a group in English by Wintter Watts, Roland Farley, and Richard Hageman. The orchestra and Mr. DeLamarter will play Goldmark's "In Spring" overture, the waltz from Tschaikowsky's ballet, "The Thorn Rose," Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Spanish Caprice," and the bacchanale from Wagner's "Tannhäuser."

Jeannette Vreeland, soprano, will give a song recital at Fine Arts Recital hall next Thursday afternoon. Groups of Italian, French, German, and English songs are listed.

Sir: While I presume that it is a sort of sacrilege to suggest anything that even remotely resembles criticism of Ravinia, the perfect, would you mind hinting to Mr. Eckstein that the Ravinia repertoire has been pretty much the same year after year? It would be nice if something a bit less familiar, though not less lovely, than the Butterflys and Rigolettos were put on there.

I wish to propose Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" as an opera which ought to go extremely well at Ravinia. I was present at the performance of this work given by a traveling company at the Studebaker one afternoon last winter. My delight in that score and story was shared by a houseful of other people, in spite of a company which, with one or two exceptions, "would have done credit to a first class music school," as Dr. Gunn somewhat cruelly said. The simplicity of the settings on that occasion could well be emulated at Ravinia.

Why not? Sincerely, G. C. B.

CHICAGO'S LARGEST THEATRICAL CIRCUIT

Movie Colony Has Its Matchmakers

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Manuel Reachi and Agnes Ayres (Mrs. Reachi) are well deserving their name of Hollywood's "first aid to lovers." Their connection with Mae Murray's recent marriage is the last of several notable occasions in which they fastened the orange blossoms on a screen couple. When Bert Lytell and Claire Windsor were romantically married last year and Edwin Carewe and Mary Akin with them in Juarez, Mex., Reachi arranged the details of the licenses and the secrecy of the Carewe match through his position as an attaché of the Mexican governmental branch.

Then, when Rudolph Valentino returned from Europe and Pola Negri made an unsuccessful but enthusiastic attempt to meet him at Albuquerque, N. M., Reachi met Rudy's train at San Bernardino, several hours east of Los Angeles. Reachi's mission was to tell Rudy how the land lay and beat Rudy's train by auto back to Los Angeles in time to restrain Pola from a public greeting to Rudy. Incidentally, Manuel and Agnes still are assisting the Rudy and Pola romance, which may or may not end in another screen wedding.

More About Mae's Marriage.

Mae Murray's marriage to Prince David Divani of the province of Georgia in the Caucasus has provided much discussion indeed among the avid gossip hounds of Hollywood. Mae's marriage is regarded by some of Hollywood as a perfectly planned grand gesture on her part to show the world and Bob Leonard, in particular, that she doesn't care a hoot if Bob, her ex-husband, did marry Gertrude Olmsted.

Mae's marriage to Prince David was a Roman Catholic ceremony, performed by special arrangement at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills. Father Michael J. Mullins officiated. The groom was baptized preceding the ceremony, which disclosed that Mae's name really was Maria Adrienne Koenig—something Hollywood did not previously know.

When asked about her three former husbands and divorces in connection with this new marriage, Mae answered that those former marriages were not marriages according to the laws of the Catholic church. "But David and I have agreed that this marriage is the culmination of an ideal," Mae added. "He told me 'this is one marriage that will never be dissolved.'"

Mae gave her age as 33 and David his as 27. That aroused a bit of frenzied arithmetic, inasmuch as her first marriage in 1908 to W. M. Schwenker, who described himself as a "gateman" in Hoboken, showed Mae then admitting to 19 years.

Launched in Pictures.

At the time last year that Mae got her divorce in Paris it was generally believed she and Bob Leonard were still in love and would be remarried. Seemingly Mae leaned to the same idea, for there were many reports to that effect which she did not deny.

As for the tall, blonde, blue eyed, curly haired bridegroom, Pola Negri says he really is a prince, and Mae admits she is going back to Georgia to meet the family and see the ancestral castle, also Serge Divani, father of David, who, Hollywood has been told, was an intimate personal friend of the late Czar Nicholas.

A couple of years ago Prince David came to America, and possibly out of a desire to repair the bolshevik's incursions into the family fortunes he worked in the oil fields in Oklahoma and Texas for several months as a laborer. Better things loom now, for he is launched in pictures.

Cobb Makes Them Laugh.

Hollywood welcomed Irvin S. Cobb to its official arms at a Writers' club dinner recently. Hilarity was intense and prolonged during Cobb's speech.

He opened by telling that as his train drew into the station at Los Angeles it was greeted by loud cries of "Allelujah!" and "Praise the Lord!" from a thronged station.

"At first," said Cobb, "I thought it was merely the southern Californians praising their climate, but as I stepped from the train the cries increased, and I realized that perhaps they had had word of my arrival. What was my surprise to learn that the greetings were for your fellow townsman, Aimee Semple McPherson, who was arriving on my train from a week-end kidnaping party at Santa Alibi."

Other allusions included Cobb's presence at Joyce Hawley's famous bath tub party, as follows:

"I have discovered that the way to get on the front page is to attend parties. For years I have written for papers and magazines, but not till I attended a party did I make the front page. My wife was in Florida at the time of the bath tub incident; since then the world for me has divided itself into two parts: those who mailed marked copies of the papers to me and those who mailed them to my wife.

"Since that party lovely women without number have approached me, taken me by both hands, and just when I have begun to think that my personality and charm are more than I before realized the vision will say, gazing earnestly into my eyes, 'Now, Mr. Cobb, PLEASE tell me all about the bath tub party.'

"The fact is that in my family we had the perhaps unusual convention of taking our baths in private. I have never been unable to shake it off, and realizing that perhaps the poor young lady in the tub might feel the same way, I left to spare her feelings."

Mr. Cobb's remark that he was "one of the honorary pallbearers in New York who received the remains of Michael Arlen after the Hollywood Writers' club had finished with him," was received by the Writers' club with glee.

Marguerite Snow, former wife of James Cruze and first famous in "The Million Dollar Mystery," a CHICAGO TRIBUNE serial story made into a picture, is now the wife of Robert A. Smart, a mining man from Goldfield, Nev. The marriage several days ago created quite a stir in the picture colony, for it generally had been thought that Miss Snow was to marry Neely Edwards, a vaudeville comedian. The marriage was a surprise to Edwards, too; he has left town for a time. James Cruze's daughter, Julie, aged 12, is in the custody of her mother, Miss Snow.

MR. AND MRS. FIXIT

Agnes Ayres and her husband, Manuel Reachi, helped along not only the marriage of Mae Murray and David Divani, but that of Bert Lytell and Claire Windsor and of Edwin Carewe and Mary Akin. They're working on Pola and Rudolph now. (Pacific and Atlantic Photo.)

Hollywood Has a Scotch Village

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—A typical Scotch highland village is being built on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot for Lillian Gish's "Annie Laurie." Many bales of hay are being taken into the studio to make the thatched roofs required. Hobart Bosworth, who is to play the Laird of Glencoe, father of Annie Laurie, is contributing an ancient claymore, a relic of the battle of Glencoe, which he brought back from Scotland in 1889 when on a trip there.

Rivaling the Scotch village is the large Dutch village constructed for "The Red Mill," Marion Davies' new picture. A great concrete reservoir covering several acres has been constructed. Around its edges are quaint Dutch buildings and windmills. Real tulips have been planted by the thousands to give a Holland touch to the landscape.

Hot stuff is reported from the Nevada location where Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky are making "The Winning of Barbara Worth." Colman writes: "It never gets over 130 degrees here because none of our thermometers register any higher. They are good to us, for we have hot food every meal."

While Jack Dempsey is in his Rocky mountain training camp fifteen miles from Colorado Springs, Winfield R. Sheehan, executive of the Fox studio, has kindly sent Jack a projection machine and several reels of Estelle Taylor Dmpsey's old films made at Fox's, among them "While New York Sleeps" and "Blind Wives."

ENGINEERS WILL STUDY PROBLEMS OF BROADCASTING

Seek a "Public Service Solution."

A "public service solution" of the broadcasting problem is sought by the American Engineering council, according to an announcement by the council's president, Dean Dexter S. Kimball of Cornell university.

An investigating committee will be named by the council to examine the whole situation, which, he declared, threatens to create "a radio chaos of inestimable complexity," affecting 20,000,000 listeners.

"Many of the problems," Dean Kimball said, "are fundamentally of an engineering nature, and will be studied by a special committee in an unbiased, broad minded, and comprehensive way, so that accurate conclusions may be made generally available in convincing form."

Annual Sales $500,000,000.

The engineers, he asserted, acted after a preliminary survey had shown that factual studies in radio could be carried on with advantage to the public interest comparable to that attained by the council's investigation of waste under Secretary Hoover and other investigations, covering the world aircraft situation, the problem of coal storage, the three shift day in industry, and the relation of safety to production.

"The annual sales of radio equipment exceed in value $500,000,000," Dean Kimball continued. "It is estimated that there are some 20,000,000 listeners in the United States. Hence radio questions are of almost universal concern and of tremendous commercial significance.

"There is no doubt that they affect the public interest at every point. It is probably fair to state that there is no disinterested agency of national scope which has attacked these problems with the thought of a public service solution.

"It is evident that these problems involve many engineering considerations. The subject appears, therefore, a logical matter for consideration by the engineering profession.

Seek Coöperation.

"The American Engineering council's investigators will seek the coöperation of every interest concerned. The aid of the legal and administrative officials of the department of commerce or of any other radio regulating body that may be established by congress will, it is believed, be readily obtained.

"We feel sure that the trade and commercial questions involved will be adequately and promptly presented by the business interests that are responsible.

"Our survey committee consulted with numerous educators regarding the desirability of such a study being made by the American Engineering council and it appears that such a study by this body would be welcomed by them.

Broadcasters Indifferent.

"The large broadcasting interests have expressed no opposition to an engineering study of radio. Rather they seem indifferent to it, apparently being in doubt as to how such a study could serve any useful purpose.

"In our opinion, however, this indifference results wholly from a lack of appreciation of the usefulness which might be served through having an impartial, judicially minded committee of technical men studying these problems and recommending through the council certain principles for general adoption.

"Factual studies of the radio broadcasting problem will usefully serve the public interest through the application of engineering principles.

"Special attention will be given to an analysis of the relative costs, effectiveness and difficulties of the various methods used in broadcasting educational, religious and like programs.

Many Problems to Solve.

"Another important field of inquiry involves the economic soundness of division of time between expensive stations as contrasted with the use of the multi-studio system with a single broadcasting station.

"Numerous conflicts of interest are arising, and difficulty is increased as the religious, the educational and other fields of broadcasting enlarge their activity. There can be at the present time no generalization made as to the proper solution of these differences. Each local problem must be separately considered and a decision appropriate to the local circumstances reached.

"There are now 540 broadcasting stations, of which at least 200 give regular programs of considerable interest, commanding substantial audiences. There are approximately 600 additional applicants to whom broadcasting licenses have not been granted by the department of commerce."

KOA BROADCASTS MEADOW LARKS' SONGS TO FANS

Denver, Col., July 10.—[Special.]—Feathered virtuosos were given another turn before KOA's microphone here this week when staff members were successful in broadcasting the music of a half dozen meadow larks.

The songsters were perched about the station on nearby telephone and electric poles, unaware of radio eavesdroppers. By placing a microphone in an open window of one of the studios, the bird signals were picked up without difficulty and flashed widespread to radio listeners.

Voices of children at play, clucking domestic fowls and the chirps of sparrows, less than 100 feet away, together with the occasional distant bark of a dog, served as a background to the meadow lark concert.

WLW to Broadcast Charleston Lesson

Some years ago the radio audience heard dance lessons broadcast through WLW in Cincinnati. Since then the style has changed and believing there are a lot of people who would appreciate knowing how to dance or "do" the Charlestonfl arrangements have been made with the Commercial Tribune to supply them, one a week for six weeks. The first lesson was broadcast Monday evening, June 28, and the others follow each week, for six weeks, at 8 o'clock.

Before joining the Metropolitan Opera company he toured the United States, appearing in joint recitals with Geraldine Farrar.

The French composer, Georges Bizet, will be the subject of tonight's discussion in "Our Music Room" at 9 o'clock. The works of this artist are very popular and many of the best known will be presented tonight. Excerpts from his two immortal operas, "Carmen" and "The Pearl Fishers," are among the features of the program. RADIO HELPS, NOT HURTS, CHURCHES, SURVEY SHOWS Broadcasting Makes One Dust Off Pews.

Radio religious programs are filling the churches rather than emptying them. This is the trend indicated by a survey of sacred broadcasting just made by Sears-Roebuck Agricultural foundation.

Returns show that the church which broadcasts is on its mettle when it knows the world is listening in and puts an added zest into the music and service that brings people into the church instead of encouraging them to take their religion in comfortable doses at home.

One church in New Jersey states that since its services have begun to be sent out on the air the gallery pews have been opened up and dusted off for the first time in twenty years.

Other Churches Profit.

The church that does not broadcast, on the other hand, feels the competition and makes every effort to bring its services and sermon up to the standard of the radio churches and this, too, is filling up the empty pews.

One hundred and seventy-eight radio stations from every part of the United States and in Canada from the Saskatchewan to Montreal participated in this survey. One hundred and three of these stations, or 60 per cent, are giving some sort of religious service or sacred music as a part of their regular programs. Four per cent are considering adding this feature and 6 per cent have religious observance only on such occasions as Christmas, Easter and Holy week.

Fourteen Church Owned.

Fourteen of these 103 stations are owned or operated by some church or religious body. The rest simply include these features along with secular programs because they feel their audiences want and appreciate them.

Sunday is the day that 86 of these stations send out their sacred programs while 22 are on week days. The week day programs consist of sacred music or instructional addresses. A number have a brief service every morning somewhere between 7 and 8 o'clock. Actual church services are broadcast in 86 instances, while in 22 cases the religious program is prepared especially for the radio and is sent out direct from the studio.

Forty stations report definite coöperation from the ministers, none report antagonism, while the rest did not mention this angle of the situation. One or two replies told of resentment and jealousy on the part of local clergymen who were not broadcasting because their congregations were apt to stay at home to tune in on the big city churches, but these were notable exceptions.

Many Show Increase.

Only two replies said that a decrease in church attendance could be traced to broadcasting, while 27 stated positively an increase. One clergyman wrote, "Since we have been broadcasting our service our church attendance has grown so rapidly that it is a problem to know how to take care of the crowds." Another pastor wrote that forty persons had recently joined his church, a direct result, he believes, from radio broadcasting.

A large number of the stations not owned or operated by religious bodies have the Sunday service in charge of various local churches in rotation, a plan which seems satisfactory to all of them. Well known hymns are the most popular parts of the program and many letters are received asking for this or that particular old favorite. Prayers are avoided by some ministers as not being suitable for this purpose. Most of them try to keep away from specific doctrines and to avoid anything that might be offensive to a listener of another faith.

THIRD SHERWOOD MUSIC HOUR ON WLS TUESDAY

The third Sherwood music hour will be heard from WLS on Tuesday evening beginning at 8:05. This program will include selections by the Sherwood Symphony orchestra, under the direction of P. Marinus Paulson. Loretta Liedell, soprano, will be the soloist of the evening.

The instrumental program includes Carmen Fantasie by Bizet, Four Oriental Sketches, composed by Mr. Paulson, director, and Dances to Henry VIII. by German.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

TO ALL OF you who remember the genuine pleasure that used to be imparted by the weekly "band concert" in the old home town there must be a little shiver of enjoyment in the increasing number of bands now to be heard on the radio.

Every Sunday afternoon the two-hour band concerts which the Lincoln park commissioners donate to the park visitors are broadcast by W-G-N; in New York the Goldman band concerts, on the New York university campus, and the New York Philharmonic society concerts, in the Lewissohn stadium, are put on the air; and from Washington come the United States Marine and Army band concerts to the radio listeners.

It must be pleasant indeed to sit out-of-doors, on the porch or the lawn, and hear a band concert that is being broadcast from the outdoors, too. In the Lincoln park broadcasts you get the outdoors-y feeling; you can hear occasionally the laughter of children playing on the lawns around the bandstand, the putt-putt of motor boats in the lagoon, and the hum of the autos mooching along on the roadway.

It takes you back to evenings with the "silver cornet band," when everybody drove teams in to town to cluster about the "city park," remaining in the buggies to listen to the weekly outburst of the home talent.

SOMEBODY ASKED, "What has become of the little boys who used to come out on the stage of the vaudeville show to change the sign telling that the next act would be the performing seals?" And somebody answered, "They're now radio announcers."

A FIELD THAT is as yet almost untouched by radio is the reënacting of history. The "Old Time Prize Fights" done last spring proved that historical events can be reproduced convincingly and successfully, with the announcer describing the spectacle as though he were actually witnessing it, while the sundry sounds of the happenings and incidental music fill in a background.

Last Sunday we experimented with another phase of history on the radio, presenting famous addresses of past Presidents of the United States—Roosevelt, Wilson, Taft and Harding—three of them now passed on. The Presidents were pictured as appearing in a sort of phantom procession across a balcony of the Capitol building and speaking to an inauguration day multitude. By the use of phonograph records the familiar voices of the chief magistrates were heard again, as from the tomb.

Here is a new ally of the radio in the reproduction of history. The voices of dead statesmen, great artists and entertainers—Bryan, Caruso, Bert Williams—may be heard in one evening by thousands who never heard them while they were on this earth.

Arthur Brisbane, in his column, "Today," syndicated to newspapers across the country, wrote on the following morning, "At 11:15 o'clock last night the voices of four former United States Presidents were carried through the air to millions of listeners and three of them—Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Harding—are dead. Mr. Taft is the only one of the four living.

"Those three voices of the dead, recorded on talking machine cylinders and now heard through the microphone, prove that with the aid of science men can do whatever they imagine. For 100,000 years men have imagined hearing voices from the dead. Now they actually hear them."

THIS WEEK'S hot weather award of a hatpin for the most unforgettable song heard on the radio goes to "My Mother Who Welcomes Me Home," published by the composer, L. H. Wagner, of Mill River, Mass. It waltzes itself around thus:

O, how lonely tonight
In the golden twilight,
The sun hiding low in the west,
And my thoughts, how they fly
Through the beautiful sky,
Back home to my dear childhood nest.
The old cottage I see,
And the same maple tree,
While there, in the pathway alone,
When my eyes turn to meet,
And so fondly I greet
My mother who welcomes me home.

[Chorus]:
My mother, dear mother, who welcomes me home,
No more from your side shall I roam,
When in fancy I see,
Just as real as can be,
My mother who welcomes me home.

I am tramping again
Through the green shady lane,
In bliss I continue to dream.
And once more in the dell
I will drink from the well
'Neath the willow beside the stream.
O, sweet nature aglow,
Is a picture I know,
That can touch the heart of a stone.
To caress and to hold,
In my arms gently fold,
My mother who welcomes me home.

RADIO AMATEURS ARE REWARDED AFTER 3 YEARS

New York July 10.—[Special.]—With the recent award of the first Radio Conspicuous Service medal to two radio amateurs, Harry Drew of Fargo, N. D., and George Reynolds of Manitoba, Canada, public recognition is bestowed, after a lapse of three years, upon two young men who, under adverse conditions, and with but meager equipment, waged a battle over the other lanes to get a doctor to an expectant mother.

In 1923 the condition of the wife of the mill superintendent at Selkirk Mines, a lonely outpost in northern Manitoba, took a sudden turn for the worse, and it became apparent that a doctor would have to be called in immediately. But with the nearest physician at Winnipueg, nearly two hundred miles to the south across frozen lakes and snow-swept trails, and with no telegraph or telephone connections of any sort between Winnipeg and the Mines, the outlook was anything but encouraging.

4 Day Trip with Dogs.

Apparently, the only means of communication was a trip by dog sledge, and with the condition of the trails at that time to contend with this would mean a four day jouney at least.

It was at this point that the services of Reynolds, a radio amateur working at the Mines, were solicited, and shortly afterwards, working under the Canadian amateur call 4AG, he was broadcasting the call for help. For a day he tried patiently with his hastily constructed apparatus to get an answer, but with no success. Finally, on the second day, communication was established with American amateur station 9EBT, operated by Harry Drew, at Fargo, N. D., and shortly afterward the details of the emergency were being flashed by telegraph from Fargo to the mine company's offices at Winnipeg.

This information arrived just in time to secure the services of a doctor who was starting for another region in the north. Immediately changing his plans, and traveling day and night, he arrived at the Mines in time to save the mother's life.

Amateurs Get Medals.

At the time the two amateurs, both members of the American Radio Relay league, reported the incident to league headquarters as merely another instance in which amateur radio had rendered a public service and then promptly forgot the whole matter. It was not until the award committee of the Conspicuous Service medal made an investigation this year to locate cases in which citizen radio had been employed to save human life that the matter was brought to the public's attention.

Most Radio Per Dollar

A Surprise In Your Favor

WHEN you see the King 61, you'll say the price is $100.00. When you know it's a 6-tube set, you'll agree it must be $125.00. When you hear it, you'll say it surely is not less than $150.00. And when you ask the price, you'll find it's only $65.00 without accessories. "Amazing!" you will say. Yet it is typical of the whole King Line. Today King truly gives you "The Most Radio per Dollar!" Get a demonstration and prove it to your pocketbook.

2,000 EXPECTED AT ANNUAL RADIO INDUSTRY DINNER

The third annual Radio Industries banquet will be held in New York on Wednesday, Sept. 15, according to announcement by Paul B. Klugh, chairman of the committee, after the first meeting of the banquet committee held in New York last week.

More than fourteen hundred attended the second annual banquet held during the radio shows last year, Mr. Klugh announced, while an attendance of two thousand is forecast for the coming affair.

Mr. Klugh, who was reëlected chairman of the banquet committee, heads a committee of representatives of eighteen radio trade bodies who are coöperating in the movement, which officially opens the radio season for the year, coming in the middle of the week of the New York radio show.

A special program of entertainment for radio listeners is being worked out which bids fair to surpass the program of last year's affair, which was one of the most interesting of the year.

EUROPEAN SETS TO BE SHOWN IN CHICAGO AND N. Y.

LONDON, July 10.—A gold medal from England, in addition to the Radio World's fair medal and other awards, will go to the winner of the international amateur set contest, to be held at the Radio World's fair in Madison Square Garden, New York City, Sept. 13-18. The prize is offered by the Wireless Magazine. An elimination contest is now being held to determine the sets to be sent to New York to compete with the receivers built by Americans as well as a number from France, Belgium, Italy, Spain, and Australia, in this, the first big contest of its kind.

Sets of exceedingly novel construction and those of proven extraordinary efficiency will be judged in New York. The winning sets in all classes will be given places of honor, too, at the Fifth Annual Radio show in Chicago.

Fans to Hear About "The House That Jazz Built"

Friday evening Paul Ash and his musical gang will present their radio version of their current attraction, "The House That Jazz Built," glorifying syncopation in the home, in their regular weekly program from W-G-N. There'll be lots of hot jazz, with Milton Watson, tenor, and Arthur Cluth, the singing newsboy, as extra attractions.

WBBM Solves Problem of Summer Vacationists

Where to go? The "eternal question" of the summer vacationists. Many of them are solving their problems by listening in to "Billy" Spears, internationally known travel authority, whose "See America First" travelogues are a regular weekly feature of WBBM.

W-G-N TO BROADCAST WEATHER REPORTS FOR BALLOONISTS IN RACE

Special weather reports covering all atmospheric and meteorological conditions in the mid-west will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, next Tuesday and Wednesday, for the benefit of contestants in the national balloon race.

The balloons start their jaunt from Grant park Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and it is of vital importance that their pilots know at all times the weather conditions in those areas through which the big bags are likely to float. The officials of the race have named a group of mid-west stations situated in various key cities, including Chicago, St. Louis, and Memphis, to broadcast the reports. W-G-N is the only Chicago station to put them on the air.

W-G-N will make its first report for the balloonists at 11 o'clock Tuesday night (10 o'clock central standard time). Each report will be repeated twice, in order to give contestants plenty of time to tune in perfectly. At 11 o'clock Wednesday morning another report will be broadcast, and a third at 11 o'clock Wednesday night.

CLAIM FRENCH ENGINEER WAS 1ST BROADCASTER

New York, July 10.—[Special.]—Raymond Braillard, president of the technical commission of the Union Internationale de Radiophonie, was the world's first regular broadcaster of entertainment by wireless telephony, according to Arthur R. Burrows, secretary general of the union.

M. Braillard in his experiments as a radio engineer, transmitted concerts weekly from a station at Laeken near Brussels, beginning in the summer of 1913 and continuing until the voluntary destruction of the station on Aug. 20, 1914 [probably by reason of the opening of the war.]

"The transmissions took place," Mr. Burrows says, "with the employment of what is known in French as an 'arc humide.' The necessary oscillation was secured by the influence of a film of water passing between a rotating cylinder of copper and a fixed copper electrode. The transmissions were received on crystal receivers as far distant as Paris."

Coast Station Duplicates Famous London Chimes

San Francisco, Cal., July 10.—[Special.]—A set of chimes, duplicating in tone the famous Westminister chimes of London, has been added to the equipment of Station KPO. The chimes will be rung three times each day, at 8 a. m., 6 p. m. and 8 p. m. on week days and at 6, 8 and 10 p. m. on Sundays.

NOW IS TIME TO LOOK OVER YOUR ANTENNA

Nov is the time to look over the antenna installation.

This is the best period of the year in which to make improvements in the antenna system—for the purpose of getting good results throughout the summer and bettering your usual records in the fall and winter when the signals from distant points are stronger.

Why not try shifting the direction of the aerial just to compare results? Sometimes this change makes quite a difference—and the comparison of results will be very interesting.

When you are overhauling your antenna system, be sure to clean off the insulator. The grime with which your insulators are fairly sure to be covered is a high resistance conductor of electrical currents, consisting essentially of carbon. This means that some current, at least, is leaking across the insulators if they are dirty. If this is the case, and it probably is, your antenna system cannot approach its normal efficiency, because some of the energy which it absorbs is being carried away from it to the antenna support and so leaking into the ground instead of traveling down the lead-in wire to your set. If the antenna wire is badly corroded it should be replaced.

It's here!

The Radio Surprise of 1926

when you slip this new radio tube in the detector socket of your receiver and hear with your own ears the remarkable improvement in clarity and volume on local and distant reception.

Enjoy undistorted music

YOUR aerial picks radio waves out of the ether in their true form. The instant they enter the set they encounter resistance, which distorts them to a greater or less degree, and are so amplified.

The easiest way to avoid such distortion and so insure natural, rounded tones coming from your loud speaker is to use a "B" battery with low internal resistance.

Ray-O-Vac dry batteries have an internal resistance of from only one-sixth to one-third that of any other source of "B" current! That is why with Ray-O-Vac batteries you can enjoy music undistorted.

And you will find Ray-O-Vacs the most economical "B" current, too, because these batteries have staying power. They endure summer idleness and winter activity as no other batteries can.

Ask for Ray-O-Vacs by name and identify them by the carton shown below.

JULY 11, 1926.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Another National Explosion Subsides

By Mme. X.

Is there anything more exhausting than a three day holiday such as the one hundred and more million citizens of this broad land of ours enjoyed last week-end? Your scribe lives on what is without question one of the most noisily patriotic streets in the U. S. A., Westminster avenue, Lake Forest. By July 5 the ceaseless bombardment of giant firecrackers and dynamite torpedoes, which began several days before the glorious fourth, produced in her a profound regret that those signers of the Declaration of Independence—among whom were two of her ancestors—knew how to write. A Tory great-great-grandfather who was exiled to Canada because of his pro-British sympathies was thought of more kindly than ever before. Other nations celebrate their historic and patriotic events with as much ardor, but not so explosively, and with not so much danger to life and limb. I doubt if the famous fourteenth of July costs any Frenchman or woman an eye or an arm, much less a life.

Like the Ancient Vandals.

As a people, when on pleasure bent, we're not very considerate of the rights of others. We've not much to learn from studying the manners and customs of the ancient Goths and Vandals. I don't believe the latter on their holiday incursions over the Alps and into northern Italy left along their trail such a trail of food fragments, eggshells, paper bags and other unattractive debris as does the American holiday maker today. Parks, roadsides, woods, public and private domains are made unsightly by our countrymen to a degree unknown in any other civilized land. Nor do they respect the rights of private citizens.

Getting Out the Padlocks.

A well known Chicago magnate who has a stately and beautifully kept country estate on Milwaukee road, near Libertyville, has to have his entrance gate padlocked in order to keep out disorderly and inconsiderate motorists. The latter made it a habit to drive in and picnic on his grounds, leaving unsightly reminders of their feasts scattered on his well kept lawns. Finding such a party one day on the point of departure from a ravaged and littered space, he suggested that as they had, unasked, made themselves at home on his property they might at least pick up their debris. A burly member of the festive group growled: "To h—— with you! Pick it up yourself."

His only reply was the institution of the padlocked gates which have to be unlocked and relocked every time any one passes in or out.

Protecting the Public.

Apropos of motoring, why hasn't this state laws such as prevail in other commonwealths designed to protect the public? In Rhode Island, for instance, no one is allowed to drive a car who hasn't a license. No one not of legal age can get a license and those applicants who are of legal age have to pass a careful examination to qualify for this right to drive a car. Having made this preliminary restriction, Rhode Island speed laws are few and laxly administered. California and, I think, Massachusetts also require licenses before permitting a man or woman to operate our modern death-dealing vehicles along public thoroughfares.

Furthermore, any one caught driving a car while he or she is intoxicated should forfeit the right to this license. Of course, there's always that unanswered question as to what constitutes drunkenness. When the condition of the driver of an automobile is in question there should be little latitude in this interpretation.

Our recent guests, the crown prince and crown princess of Sweden, came to this country with a great amount of luggage, but not all of it was for their personal belongings. They brought boxes and boxes full of gifts which they distributed in the different households in which they were guests. When the time of their departure came they asked to have the domestic staff called together and gave to each one a souvenir of their stay. They also gave handsome mementos, such as silver framed and signed photographs of themselves, to their hosts.

Royal Family Trees.

The Swedish crown princess is the second wife of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, his first wife having died a few years ago, leaving three children. The present crown princess is a great-granddaughter of Queen Victoria. Her father was Prince Louis of Battenberg, who was admiral of the British fleet at the outbreak of the world war in 1914. He resigned, fearing that his German name and origin would impair his usefulness, although he was a devoted British subject. To sever himself from his German origin he changed the family name to Mountbatten. He was a son of Prince Henry of Battenberg, who married Queen Victoria's youngest daughter, Princess Beatrice. She, according to the report of the time, was so devoted to her royal mamma that she refused various opportunities to marry and waited until she was 35 before undertaking matrimony.

The English royal stock is more German than English. This added a special poignancy to the great struggle. The Swedish royal stock, in spite of its French origin, is also strongly tinctured with German blood. The mother and grandmother of the present heir to the throne were of pure German origin.

Touring the World.

Their royal highnesses are on a tour of the globe. If they carry out their plans from here they go to Japan and China, thence to the Malay peninsula and India, and then to Egypt, up the Nile, and so on. It's a good education for the heirs to a kingdom. Their entire suite of twelve, however, does not accompany them further than the western coast of this country. There an aid, Count Posse, and Mr. Henriksson, councilor of the Swedish foreign office, leave their royal hosts and return to Sweden by a Swedish ship that sails from San Francisco via the Panama canal to Goteborg. It's a five or six weeks' voyage and gives the tourists a varied outlook of tropics, subtropics, semi-tropics, and northerly waters.

It would be interesting to know what this courteous, well mannered, traveling party thought of our easy going democracy. Perhaps some of them will write a book about us wherein those of us who can read Swedish can see ourselves as others see us.

In a Great Hurry.

I wonder if any of them will comment on our lack of observance of even the primer of etiquette. One of the first rules of social procedure is that when an entertainment is given in honor of some special guest it isn't polite to leave the party until the guest of honor has said adieu. Yet at the two luncheons given for the royal guests the first two days of their sojourn I saw Chicago folk who were invited to meet them going away before the crown prince and princess had departed. As the latter only made the briefest possible stop after the luncheons, their programs being cram-full, this quick getaway of our local gentry wasn't really necessary and made an unfortunate impression on some onlookers.

An Evening at Ravinia.

Beautiful as is the district lying north of Chicago along the shore and on the bluffs overhanging the lake, it is not for its radiant gardens, its charmingly cozy small dwellings and its stately palaces that it is attracting a fame that will go down in history. It is because in the groves of Ravinia park, half way between Evanston and Lake Bluff, is the "Opera House in the Woods," where is given the loveliest grand opera ever offered to music loving mortals. A fine summer evening there is one of life's most delicious experiences. As one sits in that great pavilion open on all sides, except where the stage occupies the east end, one can at this season watch the sunset fade from the western sky, while shadows come creeping out from the nearby woods and shrubbery. The air is soft and fragrant, and there is a sense of exquisite well-being as the Chinese lanterns away in the semi-darkness overhead at the touch of the night wind and an occasional agreeable whiff shows that some one near by is enjoying a cigar or cigarette. A soft summer night, a good cigar, a melodious and well known opera sung by great artists—what more can a man ask in the way of deep delight?

Were this wonderful combination offered in any European community, music lovers all over the world would talk about it. Pilgrimages would be made to it. It would be an event of a lifetime to attend it.

Brilliant grand opera is an accepted embellishment to great and rich cities. It is the most royal adornment an important metropolis can establish. It speaks of wealth, taste, society, display and financial power. What we get at Ravinia is the exquisite essence of this product of art, money and social elegance, and under conditions that add enormously to one's powers of enjoyment.

The flower laden open air, the soft twilight, the ride to and from the opera through the sweet summer night where the automobile's powerful lights turn our simple, candid wayside into a thrilling jungle, all contribute to make an evening at Ravinia the summer's most delectable treat.

Nothing Like It Elsewhere.

The artists themselves are said to delight in their surroundings and many of them have turned down more financially advantageous propositions to come here. They like the enthusiasm of their summer audiences. The stars from the Metropolitan Opera in New York—and we have their best—say they never get anything like it elsewhere. And nothing makes a great singer sing so well as the sense that his or her audience is heartily enjoying the performance. It brings out the voice, makes it true, and sends it throbbing to each listener's heart.

Of the quality of the singers, the orchestra and the musical directors gathered there by Louis Eckstein, it is not necessary for me to speak. They are the best the operatic profession has today, and that means that they are superlative. Mediocre opera doesn't pay in this country. Either we are not musical enough or are too musical to put up with anything but great singers and finished productions. It must be conceded that stars of the first magnitude are required to put opera over in this country. The musical composition itself is not half so important as the way it is presented.

Some Regular Attendants.

Among the regular attendants at Ravina opera are: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Poole, Mr and Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. John V. Farwell, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schweppe, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mrs. Leverett Thompson, Mrs. Clyde M. Carr, Mrs. Louis Laflin, Mrs. Sisson Thompson, Mrs. Russell Lord, Miss Gwethalyn Jones, Arthur Aldis and Russell Tyson.

Ours is a lovely summer climate, but a tricky one. Still, that very quality makes it a sporting proposition to give a garden party, and who doesn't love a gamble, even if it's with nature? So, here's hoping that the stars will shine on a dance that Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dick are giving for their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Matthews Dick of Washington, on the terrace of the senior Dicks' place at Lake Forest next Saturday evening. A dance platform is being built out under the stars and the ample grounds will be lit with softly shining lanterns. No winter ball can compare with the loveliness of such a summer dance.

Last Chance to See Gardens.

Next Saturday is positively the last chance for a flower-loving, wayfaring public to see some of those famous north shore gardens. On that day Mrs. Charles Schweppe, Mrs. Louis Laflin, Mrs. A. A. Carpenter and Mrs. DeForest Huiburd, all of Lake Forest, are opening their places to those who enjoy seeing beautiful gardens and correct landscape design. This ends a set of Saturdays which has drawn a larger concourse of visitors than in any previous season.

Each year the art of garden making becomes more widespread, as is manifested by the increasing beauty of the gardens, large and small, that line so many of the highways radiating out from Chicago. Just to grow flowers indiscriminately no longer satisfies the sapient. There must be form, color, design, and these are just as important and attainable in a small place as in a large one.

"WHAT TO DO"

"I didn't think I could afford your quality. I came near not looking here, as I didn't wish to see furniture I couldn't have."

Such was a remark overheard on the sales floor the other day.

Needless to say, the young lady, who was making her first purchases, was delightfully surprised that real quality goods cost little or no more than the "cheap." She had "just so much" to buy with, but she was able to buy furniture of taste and quality.

Another advantage in shopping!

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Des Plaines Camp Meeting Begins

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

NEXT Friday evening the sixty-seventh annual camp meeting under the auspices of the Chicago districts of the Rock River annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will begin at the Des Plaines camp ground near the village of Des Plaines, Ill., sixteen miles northwest of Chicago on the Wisconsin division of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad.

The Rev. H. Clifford Northcott, pastor of the Euclid Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Oak Park, chairman of the program committee, will preside. The Rev. James O'May, pastor of the Sheridan Road church, secretary of the Rock River conference, will lead the union young people's service at 7 p. m., and the Rev. J. Hastie Odgers, superintendent of the Chicago northern district, will speak at 8 p. m.

Saturday will be all nations day. The Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the Chicago temple, will preside. The Rev. F. F. Farmilee will lead the Bible hour at 9:30 a. m. At 1:30 there will be a lecture on church music by Prof. Earl Harper, and at 2:30 addresses by the Rev. W. J. Schuerman, the Rev. N. D. Shambergner, the Rev. W. B. O'Neil, and the Rev. Warren Clark, representing various nationalities.

The chief speakers next Sunday will be Dr. King D. Beach, minister elect of St. James Methodist Episcopal church, and Dr. Charles A. Tindley, pastor of Calvary church, Philadelphia. The camp meeting continues to Sunday, July 25. Prominent speakers during the week and the closing Sunday will include Bishop Charles E. Locke, St. Paul; Bishop Frederick B. Fisher, Calcutta, India; Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, Chicago, and Dr. Merton S. Rice, Metropolitan church, Detroit, Mich.

An invitation has been sent by Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational church, Washington, D. C., to persons outside of Washington who are interested in the erection of a new First Church at the National capitol, to become associate members of the church. It is asserted four persons from the country at large to one of its own membership are being served by the church.

Recently the church building was pronounced unsafe by Washington authorities and the congregation has been obliged to hold its services in the Washington auditorium which seats 6,000. Associate members assume no financial obligations for the erection of the new building or the running expenses of maintenance, but are expected to make an annual voluntary contribution.

The new church will be erected partly by subscriptions obtained in Washington and partly by gifts from all sections of the nation. This is the church of which President and Mrs. Coolidge are members.

Prof. Herbert L. Willett of the university will be the preacher today at 11 a. m. in Mandell hall, the University of Chicago. On Sunday, Aug. 1, the speaker will be Dr. Josiah Sibley, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church, Pasadena, Cal., formerly pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Chicago.

THE REV. HENRY HEPBURN, D.D.
[Montfort Studio Photo.]

Dr. Hepburn, since 1909 pastor of the Buena Memorial Presbyterian church at Sheridan road and Broadway, will preach today for the last time until near the close of October. He has been granted a vacation for the purpose of visiting Palestine and Europe, and will leave Chicago this week, taking a boat directly to the Holy Land. A farewell dinner was given him at the Edgewater Beach hotel recently. Dr. John Timothy Stone and others made congratulatory addresses concerning Dr. Hepburn's unusually successful pastorate in building up one of the largest memberships in Chicago and erecting a church edifice at a cost of $600,000. He was then presented with a purse of $1,000.

Dr. Hepburn came to Buena Memorial church when the organization was but four years old, with an enrollment of 170 members and less than 100 in the Sunday school. Three years ago, when the new building was dedicated, the membership had grown to 1,685 members, with 1,700 in the Sunday school. There has been a large increase since.

The Chicago Church federation, through its publicity commission, has decided to coöperate with associated church publicity and the Illinois Lithographing company of Chicago in a campaign of poster publicity for the purpose of increasing church attendance.

The eighth annual church publicity conference will be held in Chicago, Oct. 25. The Rev. Charles Steizle, who was elected chairman of the church publicity department of the World's Associated Advertising Clubs at its last convention, will be the principal speaker. Other speakers with a knowledge of church publicity are being invited.

The parish choir of the Episcopal Church of the Atonement, Edgewater, will leave tomorrow for their annual encampment at Lake Ripley, Wis.

The Cedar Lake, Ind., conference began a week ago and will continue until Sept. 6. Addresses on foreign missions, which began the conference, will continue this week. Among the speakers will be the Rev. R. H. Glover, M. D., F. R. G. S., director of the missionary course in Moody Bible institute; the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Hockman, Hudson Taylor school, China; the Rev. Emil Pearson, South Africa; the Rev. and Mrs. Benton Opper, Ceylon and India, and the Rev. Isaac Page, China Inland mission.

From July 13-25 there will be a conference of the Disciples of Christ of the Calumet Christian missionary board. From July 25-Aug. 8 there will be a conference of the brethren. From Aug. 9-15 the conference will be conducted under the auspices of the Moody Bible institute. From Aug. 16-22 the Rev. Harry Lindblom, pastor of the Lake View Swedish Free church and teacher in the Free Church Bible school, affiliated with the Moody Bible institue, will hold a series of meetings. From Aug. 30-Sept. 29 the Illinois Christian Fundamentalists' association, in coöperation with the Chicago Fundamentalist Ministers' union, will hold its Bible conference.

The Rev. George H. Fickes, for the last three years director of religious education in the Presbytery of Chicago, has accepted the position of associate professor of religious education and personnel officer at Lafayette college, Easton, Pa. He will take up his new work in September. He is a graduate of Lafayette in the class of 1905 and of Princeton Theological seminary in 1908. The work of religious education in Chicago has embraced the work among boys and girls, older boys and girls, and the 75 daily vacation Bible schools at Camp Garry near Saugatuck, Mich.

Perseverence Presbyterian church, Keeler and Ainslie avenues, the Rev. William McInnes pastor, has been given new foundations, a new room, new decorations, and the yard has been graded, seeded, and planted with new shrubbery.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer of London, one of the world's most noted preachers, evangelists and authors, will speak in the North Shore Congregational church, Sheridan road and Wilson avenue from Aug. 1-5. Dr. Meyer has visited America several times in the past where he had a large following in army churches of various denominations. He is a Baptist and was for a long time the president of the Federation of Free Churches of Great Britain.

My Idea of a Real Vacation

What is your notion of the ideal vacation? A fishing jaunt, an ocean trip, or a lake voyage, a stay at a fashionable resort, a stretch of lazy idleness in the woods, a long motor tour—or what? Write us your idea of the ideal vacation. We'll pay $1 for every letter we print. Address Vacations, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Mother's Notion.

If I could go to a hotel
And live in style and ease,
And sleep till any hour,
And do just as I please,

Have people wait upon me
And fill my every need,
Just eat, and sleep, and lounge around,
'Twould be a rest indeed.

With no alarm clock ringing,
No babies' cries to hush,
No washing, scrubbing, cooking,
And not a constant rush,

A week would be sufficient
From cares and worries free;
Then I'd come back to "Home, Sweet Home"
And very happy be.

Mrs. C. M. P.

Teacher's Idea.

I am a teacher and my idea of an ideal vacation would fall far short of that of a great many folks. I have a wife and little 12 year old girl. Of course, my vacation idea includes them.

I would like to buy a good used flivver and spend about two of my three vacation months touring the New England states. I would want to tour leisurely, visiting the many interesting and famous places of this noted part of our country. I would want to be able to carry all the necessary equipment for putting up just where we felt we wanted to. What a wonderful trip of pleasure and rest that would be, and what a wealth of information I could bring to my classroom when school opened in September!

So far, however, on my limited salary, we've found it impossible to lay by enough for such a vacation. This doesn't mean we have given up the idea of such an outing. We're hoping that some day, in the future, we'll be able to take this, for us, ideal vacation. R. W. C.

In the Open.

First of all, an ideal vacation is one which affords a change both physical and mental. Therefore come with me for even one week to a wooded point, one just across the bay from Duluth and Superior, and yet far enough away to enjoy a complete change.

What restful nights spent in the unpretentious cabin among the pines! No wonder Stevenson said, "O, for a night in the pines." He realized what a tonic it is to be lulled to sleep by the swaying of these branches. In addition to this the swishing of the waves as they splash against the shore is so soothing.

To get up in the morning, don a bathing suit and take a plunge in Lake Superior, followed by a foot race on the beach is great fun. Then gather the drift wood to make the fire and returning, stop for a few moments, and pick some of these luscious blackberries. Arrive just in time to partake of a delicious breakfast. How peppy and hungry we feel! What an appetite! How good everything tastes and how cheerful everybody is!

After spending several days you return to your work full of vim and vigor and you feel one hundred per cent healthier and happier. S. D.

Rejuvenating.

For two summers my husband and I have spent what to us were ideal vacations in the wilds of Minnesota.

We parked our children and our worries, took tent, cots, cooking utensils, and magazines and started out.

We went by train to a town where we got our grocery supply, then by boat to a portage, and finally to a lake where we packed our provisions into a boat and started out to hunt a camp site. The experience of making camp and cooking the first meal out of doors is one never to be forgotten.

For five wonderful weeks we fished, read, explored, watched glorious sunrises and gorgeous sunsets, had a splendid chance to observe wild life, were thrilled by the storms, grew tanned and healthy.

To any one who has a love for nature but feels, because of troubles and too much living with people that life doesn't amount to much, after all—let him try this kind of vacation. It is rejuvenating for mind, as well as body. H. W.

Some Quiet Place.

We have an old logging camp in Wisconsin which we use as our summer home. The house and barn are situated in a clearing made by the logmen. The house contains fourteen rooms entirely furnished with rustic furniture. The barn is a huge structure made of logs.

I spend most of my time tramping through the pine forest which covers most of the land or lying on the banks of the lake listening to the music of the rippling water.

In the evenings it is a pleasure to go rowing or to find some shadowed nook and watch the deer come to drink. They seem to have adopted the place for they stay there the year 'round, finding ample shelter in the barn during the long and severe winters.

My idea of a real vacation, you see, is to go to some quiet place in the great open air. I am sure there are others who agree with me. E. B.

Insurance Against Hi Cost of Twins

LONDON.—[United Press.]—The birth of twins or arrest by mistake can now be insured against in England. General insurance companies, particularly Lloyd's, have broadened their scope of "risks coverable" to include practically every demand of their clients.

The latest insurance curiosity is the case of a rather unusual looking man who, fearing that he might be arrested instead of a criminal he said resembled him, applied to Lloyd's for coverage against mistaken identity. He was accepted.

Married couples expecting the birth of a child have taken out policies against twins.

Novelties have also been introduced in business insurance, covering some unusual risks. Early last winter a

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give one a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant tase.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Surprise Weddings Are Much in Vogue

By Howard White.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Surprise weddings are getting to be the ultra-smart thing in exclusive circles these days. Not the pre-war kind, in which there was a runaway match with a dash to a Gretna Green, a hurried ceremony by a sleepy-eyed justice of the peace, a short, sweet honeymoon with paternal forgiveness as the finale, may be. No, indeed. These exciting excursions belong to a past and hold no thrills for modern society. Nowadays they just go and get married, step into the car, and whisk away to Europe, South America, or wherever fancy dictates.

First it was the former Mrs. Margaret Fahnestock Stokes, who unexpectedly became the bride of Lieut. Benjamin Royll Holcolmbe, U. S. N., at her Newport villa. Then the former Mrs. Oliver Carley Harriman, suddenly was married to Alexander T. Baldwin at Mount Kisco, N. Y.

Harrison Williams Marries.

Now Harrison Williams, internationally known financier and backer of exploring expeditions, has taken a wife unto himself without telling his friends. The marriage of Mr. Williams to Mrs. Mona Strader Bush occurred—and this is strictly the word to use in connection with the event, because of its abruptness—at his home, 777 Madison avenue. There were no attendants. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Benjamin F. Sazon. The couple sailed away immediately afterward on Mr. Williams' yacht, the Warrior, with no special destination in view.

Both the bride and bridegroom are interesting figures in the social world. Mrs. Williams was Mona Strader, daughter of a Louisville horseman. Her first husband was H. J. Schlesinger of Milwaukee, from whom she obtained a divorce. Later she was married to James I. Bush, vice president of the Equitable Trust company. She divorced him in Paris.

Mr. Williams, who is a widower, has had a colorful career. His first wife was Katherine Gordon Breed, who died in 1915. Members of the smart set here and in Washington well recalled the furore which was created last year when his engagement was suddenly announced to Mrs. J. F. Curtis, a divorcee, which was followed a few days later by the news that she had rewed her former husband. After that Mr. Williams withdrew from the executive positions he held with large financial interests.

Was Host to Prince of Wales.

Mr. Williams, who has been identified with prominent society for years, was born in Avon, O., in 1873. He has made his home with his sister, Miss Zella Williams, at the Madison avenue address.

On the occasion of the Prince of Wales' visit to this country Mr. Williams was his host several times, and the prince passed much of his time at the Williams estate at Doseris Valley, Glen Cove.

He is a member of the Metropolitan, City Midday, Recess, Automobile, Riding and Hunt of Washington, Piping Rock, National Golf, the Creek, Sleepy Hollow, and Morris County Golf clubs.

True Friendliness.

The lack of rivalry which exists among the leading social powers at Newport is well illustrated by an incident which occurred during the recent visit of the New York Yacht club fleet at that resort. As a mark of welcome to the yachtsmen it was announced that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt would give a dinner and dance at the Breakers in their honor, but before doing so she consulted with Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, whose name is writ large on the top of the social calendar, and who had planned a similar entertainment on the same evening. While society at large was wondering just what would happen, the situation was solved without even a ripple of excitement. Mrs. James merged her affair into the fete for the yachtsmen by taking her guests to the Breakers.

Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt certainly are setting a brilliant pace by their Newport entertaining this year. Beginning with a dinner in honor of the crown prince and princess of Sweden, they have kept the doors of the magnificent villa ajar and have a long program of affairs to be completed before the early frosts put an end to summer at the seashore.

Among other notable events at Newport, recently, was the surprise dinner and dance given by Mrs. A. B. Widener of Philadelphia at the Clambake club on her husband's birthday. Those who attended included Countess Salm Von Hoogstraeten, Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, and Mrs. Widener Leddy.

When the famous casino at Narragansett Pier opened the other night under the name of Le Toquet, there was another revival of social glory, for this spot which has been known the world over for many years. Within the glass enclosed interior directly on the ocean, at least half a hundred dinner parties were held to celebrate the occasion. It is predicted that Le Touquet will equal any of the triumphs of former decades during this season.

Inland vs. Seaside Resorts.

The lure of the inland resorts has proved greater than the seaside places, according to the 1926 summer edition of the Social Register, which has just been issued. Cottages have been rented, hotel reservations have been made, and the unsettled society devotees who cannot be fashionable and stay long in any one place are for the moment installed with a summer address. Yachts are in commission, and arrivals from abroad are beginning to equal departures for the other side.

Last summer inland resorts were more popular than seaside, for 7,162 addresses were listed inland, against 5,216 at the seashore. This year the register records 7,167 inland addresses, with 5,782 at the seashore. The Summer Social Register, as its name implies, gives the summer or foreign address of the families in New York and twenty-five other cities when they aren't to be found at their winter address which appear in the previous issues of the year.

ART AND ARTISTS

In Between Season at the Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE is a between season in all things. Just at present the exhibition galleries of the Art institute are suffering from the drought, the school exhibit having come down last week and the new shows not being ready for presentation until next Thursday. However, as long as the museum has permanent collections to be enjoyed there is little fear of boredom to the visitor that braves the twin lions on guard at the doorway.

A distinctly new feature is the room that has been set aside on the first floor of the building to shelter the recent acquisitions of the institute and also to act as a platform from which to display those pieces the museum would like to own, but so far does not. There are paintings, groups of sculpture, textiles and prints, a motley array of fascinating objects making of the room an art center of unique charm.

Two of the most interesting pieces in the room are marble fragments from the collection owned by Dr. Jacob Hirsch of Geneva and these, it is hoped, some friend of the Art institute may purchase and present to the museum. One is a high relief of a young fighting warrior, a Greek work of the second century B. C. While the sculpture was modeled during that period, the sculptor took his model from a period earlier by 500 years. The Hellenistic period was, in a sense, a revival or renaissance of the art of the sixth century B. C., with its more or less archaic forms.

Reminders of Grecian Glory.

The treatment of the marble fragment of the young soldier shows the head to be slightly archaic, but the tunic is in the style of the new naturalistic manner. The other marble is much more finished. It represents a bearded warrior with shield adjusted in place on his left arm, the right arm is upraised, but the forearm is missing. The expression is that of a thinker, a philosopher, rather than a soldier of fortune. It is, frankly, a work of great merit of the period just preceding the great age of sculpture.

Both fragments were found in the harbor of the port of Salamis, and show clearly the erosion of water and also, not a particular advantage, but a rather curious fact, to each there cling a number of sea shells which have become so firmly attached to the marble that they appear to have been chiseled there by the original unknown sculptor.

Two pieces of Greek sculpture in the room, which do belong to the institute through purchase from the Waller fund, are a splendid marble torso of the Praxitelean school and a head dating about the sixth century B. C.

Interestingly Modern.

Upstairs there is the Helen Birch Bartlett Memorial collection of modern paintings which, in their white frames, are a distinctive, cooling array of extraordinary pictures. Familiarity rather weakens the shock that a first careful inspection is apt to cause one. They do not seem so horrible when we are accustomed to their ghoulish greens and distorted figures. The Seurat, the famous "Grande Jatte," becomes like a print from an old book of fashions. The Van Gogh nurse shrinks from a spiteful witch woman to a commonplace, hard-headed caretaker of howling infants. The Matisse ladies acquire humor with bulk.

As some one has pointed out, it seems rather odd that in this collection of modern paintings modern American artists are missing. Mr. Bartlett explains his omission by the statement that he believed that by making a collection of modern continental art he would best supplement the resources of the Art institute since the "Friends of American Art," in his opinion, cover the American field, and since, at the time he was first forming his collection, the institute had no fund for the purchase of foreign modern art.

"Tqddie," by Frances Cranmer Greenman, to be found in the first of the summer shows which opened last Thursday at the Art institute. This first exhibit will be followed by a general opening of summer exhibits on July 15. The exhibits will run through September.

In Memory of Marquette.

On Tuesday morning, July 20, at 11 o'clock, the dedication of the monument to Father Marquette, the French Jesuit priest who was among the first of the great men to exercise civilizing influences on the American continent, will take place. The sculptured group is by Herman A. McNeill.

Cyrus McCormick Jr. will preside and officially present the monument to the west park commissioners. Dr. John Dill Robertson will accept the monument on behalf of the board. The principal address will be given by Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The monument is being put in place by Holabird & Roche, architects, at Marshall boulevard and Twenty-fourth street. It is just across from the Harrison Technical High school.

Notes of Art and Artists.

The death of Mabel Key, a sad occurrence of last week, means the loss of one of our greatest women flower painters. Her bold and decorative canvases made a high light in every exhibition of importance held at the Art institute during recent years. She contributed to the Arts club exhibits and had one man shows here and in other cities. Her painting was distinctive and always she was sure of herself. There was no fumbling for line or color. Miss Key was an able painter, one of our best. Her death is a great loss to art circles.

The Provincetown Art association announces its twelfth annual exhibit of oil paintings, water colors, pastels, etchings, drawings, and block prints from July 12 to Aug. 16.

A bronze drinking fountain, the decorative work by John Paulding, a resident sculptor of Park Ridge, is a recent gift to that suburb from William H. Malone.

At the Dunbar galleries there is to be found a prepublication print of Warren Davis' latest dry point, "The Butterfly," a delicate and graceful, wistful nude holding out a cajoling hand to an inquisitive butterfly.

The Newberry library supplements, but only in a fashion, the activities of the Chicago Historical society. It also deals, though with less vigor, in things relative to Chicago's past. Just at present it offers an interesting exhibit to the student of prints and maps of early voyages, prints and books on early gardens, and herbals and husbandry.

Pauline Palmer, the well known Chicago painter, will leave shortly for her summer home in Provincetown, not to return till late in the fall.

At the Thurber galleries are portraits by Robert W. Grafton and a group of American and foreign paintings.

Guy Wiggins, whose snowstorms and streets after a snowfall will probably always flash before the eye at a mention of his name, is spending the summer painting in Glacier National park.

Water colors by Frank W. Benson, whose ducks and outdoor scenes are always matters for rejoicing; Charles H. Woodbury, whose colors flew more swiftly than colors from other brushes, and A. L. Ripley are on exhibtion at the Carson, Pirie, Scott galleries.

Tennessee Mitchell Anderson, whose sculpture is proving a delight wherever it is exhibited, has recently bought a clever modern painting by Charles Bateman. It hangs in Mrs. Anderson's Lake Forest studio and shows a window seat with a cup, book and plate perched on a table and through the window a glimpse of a Noah's ark landscape, arranged in exact pattern, a modernistic trick that never grows old.

Among the summer exhibitions which will open next Thursday at the Art institute are sculpture by John David Brein, paintings by Irving K. Manoir, William S. Schwartz, Glen Mitchell, Birger Sandzen, Frances Cranmer Greenman, Flora Schoenfeld and Elmer E. Forsberg. The exhibits will close the middle or end of September.

The woman who thinks she must still drudge over the dishpan hasn't kept pace with the times

Man alive
—let HER read TOO*!*

To women who are sick of washing dishes

AT LAST a device to wash the dishes!

ENTIRELY AUTOMATIC, leaves nothing to do by hand.

YOU NEED NOT even put a hand in the water. Lay the soiled dishes in the washer—and press the button.

IN THREE MINUTES they are cleaned!

THIS INVENTION disposes of a most disagreeable problem. It does all the work of washing every plate and platter; every cup and saucer; all the silver and pots and pans. And does a far better job than the most patient pair of hands. Each piece is thoroughly washed, rinsed, sterilized and dried.

AND the quiet, gentle action of this wonderful little machine! The most fragile china is safer in this washer than when ever-so-carefully washed by hand. No fear that anything will break, or even nick. But what will most appeal to you is how beautifully clean everything emerges. Cleaner than is possible for any woman to accomplish at the sink. Even the machine itself shines like a new dish. The Conover is the only electric dishwasher ever invented that is entirely self-cleaning.

The exclusive vitreous enamel glass finish tank, patented water action and cleansing soap suds give the Conover this wonderful advantage.

THE COST of this household boon is a pleasant surprise. A ten-dollar bill puts it in your home! Monthly payments for those many families who pay for home comforts that way.

And the electric current it uses really costs nothing at all. For it is less than it takes to light the kitchen while you toil an hour or more over the dishes from the evening meal! No longer need a "nice" woman try to hide her hands from company. For she need never put her hands in dishwater. No longer does she fear the unexpected guest seeing a stack of dirty dishes. Nor does she worry about the maid leaving in a huff because of a big party.

EVERY HOME is bound to come to this enlightened way of doing the dishes. For washing dishes is not a woman's work. It is a menial task which even servants should no longer be asked to do. Why let another Sunday find dishrags and dishmops in your kitchen?

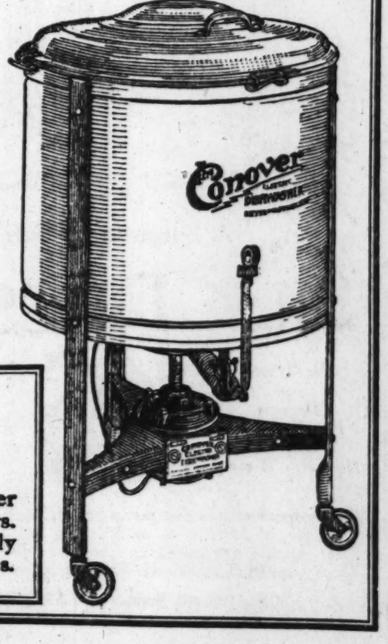
A FREE TRIAL of this mechanical marvel for the asking. Your own local dealer will gladly make the demonstration. He won't urge you to keep the washer. He won't have to! Possibly he cannot let you have one of these first machines he has received. But the quicker you act, the higher-up you are on his list for delivery.

PHONE YOUR DEALER if his name is below. If not, tear off the coupon in the corner.

The Conover Man Is Coming

During the following week special Conover demonstrators will call at certain selected homes in Chicago and vicinity. When the Conover man rings your door-bell, admit him. He has a vital message to tell you.

Count yourself fortunate if your home is selected as one of the first to be called upon. Not all homes will be reached next week. Only those who have been selected. If, however, you wish to be among the first to see this mechanical marvel wash dishes without putting your hands in water, phone Harrison 0913 and a man will be sent.



$10.00

—and this wonderful Conover Electric Dish Washer is yours. Then small convenient monthly payments, you'll hardly miss.

12 DIFFERENT DESIGNS OF THE MOST ATTRACTIVE BUNGALOWS EVER OFFERED BY ROBERT VOLK

4-5-6 ROOMS.

These residences were built under the supervision of three architects employed for the purpose of developing this row of buildings into beautiful and attractive types. The buildings are set back 30 feet from the street and are set up on terraces, with lawns beautifully graded and sodded. These homes are not crowded together, but occupy large lots. The buildings, which are of solid steel, concrete and pressed brick construction, contain all of the newest and most modern features which delight the eye of all prospective home seekers. Parlors and dining rooms in all of these houses are marbleized to imitate the most antique of decoration. All plumbing fixtures are of the Kohler type, the bath rooms being a delightful display of mosaic tile and based white enamel. Nearly all the bedrooms have exposures from two sides. All kitchens are airy, large, and decorated in the most charming manner. The prices of these buildings are most unusually low for a set ground having been purchased at one-half of its present value and the material for the buildings having been shipped direct from the mills in carload lots to the jobs. Sewer, water, gas, electric lights and sidewalks are all in and paid for. Transportation is of the very finest in Chicago. Eighty trains going to and from the Loop daily on the Rock Island line from 22 to 35 minutes' service. Surface car lines are Vincennes-av., Racine-av. and Ashland-av. 91st-st. is now served, giving tenants with automobiles direct access to their residences. To secure a fine room house at as low as $6,950 is the most attractive row it is to make an investment which cannot help but return to the investor a most happy life and most surely a handsome money profit should he at any time wish to sell. A $10 deposit will reserve any one of these houses for your considering on until July 18, at which time we will either return your deposit at your request or close the sale on terms to suit a careful budget plan.

PRICES RANGE FROM $6,553 TO $7,990.

The WITCH'S HAT By Douglas Newton

Was Never a Stranger Errand than the One That Sent Mark Stonor Roaming the Southern Seas, Searching for a Green Island and a Silver Strand

A woman came from the interior . . . and stopped, with a gasp.

ON THAT evening in July when everyone seemed talking of Mark Stonor's brilliance in saving Jerome Brann from imprisonment for fraud, Old Burdon, who had briefed the young barrister, was saying: "But the ball is at your feet, Mark; to go off for a long sea voyage—why, it's sheer folly."

Mark Stonor, staring out at the lovely dinginess of the temple, answered without turning around: "O, I don't know. The courts will be up in a week or two and I'll have the whole of the long vacation before me."

"You haven't," said Old Burdon. "You'll have people tumbling over each other to secure you for the Michaelmas sittings. Don't you realize that you are on the verge of fame, that now or never is your chance?"

"I know," said Mark, turning a troubled face to the solicitor. "But—I've got to go."

"It's flaunting fortune," cried Old Burdon. "Even a man of your ability mustn't run away from his opportunity like this. There'll be work in chambers, for instance."

"I'm sorry, sir," said Mark Stonor, "but I've told you before how it is—I just seem to have to go."

Old Burdon frowned. As Mark indicated, this was not the first time he had gone off in this queer, strange way. It gave him another line of attack.

"Even apart from missing work," he said, "what are people going to think of a barrister, however able, who goes off when the whim moves him on such mad vagabondage? What possesses you, my boy?"

"I don't know," said Mark Stonor, frowning and reddening. "I call myself a fool, too, and yet I go. . . . I sometimes think it is in my blood. I think my father must have been a sailor, sir."

The older man shot a quick look at the fine, clear cut face.

"I should have argued your father was a lawyer," he said. "Your gifts suggest that is in your blood, too."

He seemed to be trying to find out something as he spoke, but Mark was too concerned with his own strange emotions to notice. He said slowly: "That, too. I seem to be the prey of two obsessions—the law and the sea. Nearly always the law is the stronger and seems to command my whole life. But then the sea begins to pull, and it is more powerful. It's a sort of fever, a command to go off—somewhere. I try to fight it, but I can't. It comes between me and everything. When I lost you the Lemoin case last year, that was through trying to beat it under. I had made up my mind that this going off was ridiculous and this time I would not go. But all the time I should have been fighting for Lemoin the tug was at me; I could think of nothing else—and I made a hash of that case."

He walked to the window again, and stared out. Old Burdon's keen eyes watched him sympathetically. He knew the boy's history.

Mark went on: "I must go. . . . I can't explain it well, but it's as though I did wrong by not going. It's as though I shall miss something, leave something undone by not going. . . . And I'm afraid of missing something. . . ."

"What?" asked Old Burdon, sharply.

"I don't know . . . it's only a feeling, you know. . . . Just the queer pull to go out there to—something. Perhaps it's nothing, after all; a memory of my forgotten childhood, a strain inherited from my lost father. . . . It's absurd; it plays the deuce with my career. But I've got to go."

"What does your stepfather say?" asked Old Burdon.

"O, he thinks I'm foolish, too, but he has become resigned to my idiocy. And then he—he half understands my impulse. He feels that I am searching for my parents and that one day I might pick up facts about them."

"But you never have?" said the old solicitor, watching him closely.

"No, sir, not a thing. Perhaps I never shall—still, it may be the instinct to find out who I really am that is driving me on. I might find out something some day."

"You might," said Old Burdon, slowly, and he sat back and stared out of the window himself. Then he said, in a determinedly light tone: "You might find something to make you stay down there, where you were found, and I should be robbed of the most promising junior I'd ever briefed, so before you go I think I'd better get as much out of you as possible." He pulled out a drawer. "You might look into these three cases and give me your opinion on them. O, and here's another, an old matter—Whillon vs. Clavell. We lost that case many years ago, but some new evidence has lately come to hand. Look through it and see if it is worth reopening."

Mark Stonor left Old Burdon's office, genuinely sorry that he should seem to fail the great lawyer who had done so much for him, yet elated that soon he would be on the sea again and away—away down to the warm seas that so strangely called him. All through his life this queer pull had commanded him and forced him to obey; all through his short life his career had been threatened with shipwreck because, at an impulse and at short notice, he had packed up, left everything, and set out for those strange sunlit waters that called and called to him with a strange imperativeness.

During boyhood this tugging at his heartstrings had been a meaningless torment until one day the man he called father, Roger Stonor, had explained much to him. He was not really Roger Stonor's son, but a castaway. He had been the only white survivor of some wreck in the South seas. Roger Stonor had been making a journey from Australia to California with his wife in the ship that effected the rescue. This ship had been forced out of its course by the storms that must have wrecked the vessel the child, now Mark Stonor, had sailed in.

One day a small group of atolls had been sighted and would have been ignored, for they were charted as uninhabited, only smoke was seen rising from one of them. A boat putting ashore found three Kanakas in an advanced state of exhaustion, and a native woman who was expending the last remnants of her strength in the care of a very sickly white infant.

These were taken back to the ship, and the nurse died in the course of the next day and one of the Kanakas a few days later. The two remaining Kanakas had practically nothing to say about the white child.

They had been the deckhands of an interisland trading schooner. They had been beating up toward the constellations during a stiff blow when they sighted a cutter making very heavy weather. This cutter followed them into Lagoon inlet, which is the only good harbor of the Constellations, and a boat came off from her. It brought aboard a tall, thin white man, an old Chinaman, his body servant, the native woman nurse, and the white child, who was very ill. This white man had bargained with the captain of the schooner to carry them quickly to a nearby port so that a doctor could attend to the child. The little cutter was too dangerous a craft for such weather.

The man's price must have been good, for the master of the schooner put out against the barometer and a day later was caught in the bad weather, which wrecked him. He, his mate, and the thin white man were drowned when the schooner went down in deep water. Four Kanakas got ashore with the woman and Chinaman, both badly hurt, and the child. They had been on the island more than a week before being picked up, during which time one Kanaka and, later, the old Chinaman died.

Before she died the native nurse had been unable to speak, and the surviving natives could tell nothing about the child, its name, or from where it came. The woman and the Chinaman seemed to have been curiously secretive, and dwelt apart with the child on the atoll. They had learned that the white man was not the father of the child but the brother of the mother, but whether the mother and father were alive, and, if so, where they lived, had not been discovered. The Kanakas had never before seen the cutter that appeared so mysteriously out of the sea, and the cutter had added to the mystery by being nameless. There was nothing on the baby to help identification.

APART from an insufficiently maternal stewardess, Roger Stonor's wife was the only woman on the rescuing ship, and she, with the aid of a doctor going on leave, saved the baby's life.

By the time San Francisco was reached he had become a fine, healthy boy of between three and four years old. And something else had happened. He had endeared himself to the childless Stonors, to Roger quite as much as to his wife, and they had made up their minds to adopt him, if possible. It proved only too possible. The child's parents were never found, though Roger Stonor, a rich solicitor, had done all that was humanly possible by lawyer and advertisement to trace them. It was, in time, decided that the mother and father must have gone down with the cutter in the rough weather and that the child must be an orphan. He was therefore given the name of Mark Stonor and brought up as their child.

This revelation, though leaving Mark with a certain blank, served to explain a great deal. It explained what he had thought were his queer dreams. They had been strange dreams for one who lived in cities. There had been ships in them and the lilt and swing of the sea. Some had the throb and the heave and the sense of stuffiness of a small steamer cabin, with the face of a woman bending over him. That was probably Mrs. Stonor, nursing him back to life on the small ship that rescued him. The vast swinging deck of a liner was undoubtedly that one which carried them all from America to England.

But the other dreams had wanted some placing. The dream of a small kicking deck and sails that swung clattering above his head, of a black man snatching him up in his arms because somehow the swing of that sail had meant danger to him, of seas coming with a flounce and a crash over the bows of a small ship, and his game at being frightened at these seas. And half naked brown men who had laughed with a great display of bright teeth at his pretense of fright.

He had never been able to understand how the heave and rush of that small sailing ship had got into his dreams before Roger Stonor explained. Nor the wonderful brightness of the days through which that ship sailed, nor the miraculous blueness of the sea about her, nor the little fairylands of green islands that shyly crept by them at times. Only when Stonor spoke of his hidden past did he realize that he must have sailed on that small vessel—the cutter, perhaps, or a schooner—and sailed on it for a long time.

His father, he came to think, must have been the master of that vessel. From amid his glittering dreams he disentangled a tall, somber man with a beard.

There was another white man, too; tall, this one, undoubtedly the uncle who had been drowned on the interisland schooner. And there had been a woman, a dear woman. She carried him and played with him a lot. She was, he felt, his real mother.

The house on land was by a thundering blue sea. It was set against dancing green palms on the edge of a beach of silver. He remembered that sand with glamour. The feet slipped back in it as one walked. Also it had a glorious hot tickling effect if let escape from the hands on to the bare legs. The whole of the memory of this place was exquisite, its color, its jewel-like flowers, the clear, warm wonder of its sunlight, the vision of the small sailing ship anchored off shore and looking like a lovely toy, and finally the queer, single hill away to the right, which somehow came to his memory as the Witch's Hat. It was always in the picture, that queer, sharp hill that rose so abruptly out of a mat of greenery that seemed to make its brim. But why he called it the Witch's Hat he did not know. Had the woman made up a story about it?

The loveliness of this place, the thunder of the sea on the silver-white beach, the heave and dip of the sea under the small dancing vessel, the memory of the dear woman, had wrung him all during his boyhood, dragged at him with a strange and powerful allure. Roger Stonor did not know of this, nor had he spoken of Mark's past, save from some mention of the fact that they had traveled in his boyhood. It was only when Mark, after a delicious, agonizing spell of such dreams and longings, had said that on the whole he thought he wouldn't be a lawyer as he had planned, but would become a sailor, that Roger Stonor told him about his rescue from the atoll.

Roger Stonor told him in the hope of settling his mind. He had noted that the boy (he was in his middle teens then) had been vague, dreamy, disturbed, and his brilliant school work had fallen off in consequence. When Mark spoke of his desire to go to sea Roger Stonor felt he understood the pull of the blood. He told the story, emphasizing the fact that the boy's father and mother had probably been lost at sea. He wanted to make Mark feel the cruelty of the sea, to make him hostile to it as the murderer of his parents.

The lawyer in Roger Stonor was delighted to observe that all the tendencies of his adopted son were toward the law. By the time he went up to Cambridge it was already plain that Mark was a born lawyer, that indeed there might be, as Old Burdon had argued, something in his blood that gave him outstanding qualities in pleading. He swept the board at Cambridge, though he gave Roger Stonor a period of panic. In his second year he threw over all his plans for the long vacation and went off on a vagabondage in the South seas.

He didn't attempt to explain himself, he just said he felt he had to go. The curious tug had come to him again.

Roger Stonor let him go and spent many anxious months. He saw all his hopes of Mark ruined and the boy a wandering sailor among the islands. But Mark came back in time. He had traveled Malaysia and did not like it. There were too many biting insects in Borneo; Java was hot, uncomfortable, and noisy; the other islands did not appeal to him. He found life on small steamers monotonous, and the schooners were cramped and sometimes dirty. Queer, there had been none of the glamour of dreams in actuality, and he was glad to be back in town. He had learned nothing at all about himself, except, as he told Roger Stonor, "that I definitely haven't a love of sailoring in me."

He was certain of that. Roger Stonor, lately a widower and fearful that Mark would leave him, rejoiced. He watched Mark's career at Cambridge end gloriously, saw him brilliantly begin his studies for the bar.

There was no doubt from the first that Mark had exceptional talents for the criminal law. He was an outstanding student in an outstanding year. And not only had he great gifts, he had great luck. Sir Henry Burdon, a bencher of his inn, picked him out at a big dinner one night. During that meal Mark Stonor had noticed this old man staring at him with a strangely searching look. A companion at table had told him that this was Old Burdon of Burdon, Predell & Burdon; "one of the mandarins before whom we mere barristers bow," the man said. "If a Nabob like that briefs the likes of us, then the future is all motors and glory."

Mark was fascinated by the great solicitor, but astounded when Old Burdon sought him out after dinner and demanded his name. Mark told it and wondered why Old Burdon stared. Mark said, "I'm the son, or rather adopted son, of Roger Stonor, whom you may know, sir."

"Adopted son!" echoed Old Burdon, and stared harder, and then began to talk of other things, drawing Mark out with a good deal of cleverness. Mark thought no more of this, but a week later Roger Stonor told him that Old Burdon had called on him and shown a great interest in Mark, so great an interest that he foresaw a career already in the making for his adopted son.

He was justified, though Mark himself threatened to wreck it. Old Burdon seemed to make a point of being intimate with Roger Stonor for the sake of Mark. He became a friend of the family, he was enthusiastic about the young man's cleverness, and when Mark passed to the full status of barrister he was ready with the first brief.

And Mark refused it—to go off again on a sea vagabondage.

Mark knew it was folly. He knew he was endangering a career, he knew he had been disillusioned before. But he had to go. The strange, commanding force was too strong. He felt that somewhere, down there on the wine colored seas and under the gold of the sun, was—something. He must go. He dared not resist.

Roger Stonor in a panic talked to Old Burdon, asked him to persuade the boy and to suggest other holidays. Old Burdon tried, and yet it was Old Burdon who sent him off. He looked strangely at Mark for some minutes, then he said, "Let him go. We won't hold him while this is on him. And perhaps he ought to go."

THIS time Mark wandered the islands from the Ladrones to the Sporades—and then came back. He was not so dissatisfied with things this time. He had seen beauty, if schooner sailing was still cramped and rather dirty. He came back because the pull had dwindled and gone, leaving him once more pure lawyer and a denizen of cities. On this trip he had tried to find out something about himself, about a trading captain of twenty-two years ago who sailed with his wife on a cutter. He tried to find out about an island with a hill like a witch's hat on it. He found nothing.

For the next two years he steadily built up a career and a reputation, justifying all Roger Stonor's and Old Burdon's hopes of him. He was certainly the most promising junior at the criminal bar, and his extraordinary flair and thoroughness in defense suggested that the day was not far off when he would be wearing silk and when he would be a leader in all the greatest cases of the day.

For two years he demonstrated his astonishing natural genius for law, then the old strange urge came to him once more. The command to be off and wandering on the warm seas assaulted him in the middle of his work. He fought it, and in doing so turned his mind into a turmoil that lost him the Lemoin case. His reputation suffered a little over that, for he had already shown that he should win his verdict, and his failure startled people. Old Burdon readily agreed to let him go off on a holiday, for he thought the young man was overworked. And Mark had spent months in Australasian waters, wandering and asking questions, and trying to find out if there was such an island as that which had a hill like a witch's hat.

He had returned, obliterated every doubt about him the Lemoin business had called up in a single dazzling case, and had stepped out on to the highway of fame. For more than twelve months he marched along that highway with an assurance that was almost aweing. His reputation began to spread beyond the courts. The great public began to realize that when Mark Stonor's name appeared as counsel for the defense it quite frequently meant that he was the counsel who got the verdict.

Finally he had been briefed as leader in the cause celebre of the day: he had defended Jerome Brann, the great financier, against a charge of fraud. Public opinion had made up its mind that Brann was going to jail. But Brann not only did not go to jail, but by the time Mark Stonor had finished with the case Brann was almost a popular figure as a much wronged man. Mark Stonor was more than popular. He had become decisively the one man to get, by hook or by crook, when a big case had to be defended.

He knew that Old Burdon knew it. . . . Old Burdon, Roger Stonor, and he himself had worked for this day. And yet now that the day was here he was going off again, going off on a strange, reasonless vagabondage that might lose him the position he had so laboriously attained.

He fulfilled his obligations to Old Burdon and gave his opinion on the cases handed to him. Of the case of Whillon vs. Clavell he said: "An interesting case, that. I don't know why you lost it, sir, even on the old evidence. It seems obvious to me that the solicitor, Clavell, was acting under the instructions of the trustee. The new evidence you have gathered confirms this. I should certainly reopen it. That poor wretch Clavell should be cleared. . . . If—if you could hold it over till I return I'd like to see him. After an interview I feel I might almost guarantee a verdict."

MARK STONOR went down to the South Seas. He went straight through to Australia, meaning to catch a boat from Hobart to some southern islands. He had to wait three days for a connection, and, bored and impatient, got on to a tramp running up to the Fijis instead. He was uncomfortable. He was anxious about his work in England; he was cursing himself for a fool for coming upon this senseless trip. The heat was not glorious; it was intolerable, and fairy islands standing out of sparkling seas become monotonous with familiarity.

Quite suddenly his mood had changed. He would have done with this foolish tramping around. He would not stay away even as long as he intended, but go straight home at his first chance.

At New Caledonia he left the ship. The captain tried to entice him on with stories of Fiji, but he was sick of wonder and beauty, and the call of the courts was powerful in his ears. He acted so hastily that again he was stranded, this time in Noumea, waiting for a boat.

It is just at such moments that fate shows what a fickle jade she can be. With his traps packed, ready for the boat which would sail next day, Mark Stonor spent the evening at a club by the beach, and, to pass that evening, submitted to the talk of a queer old man of uncertain nationality. During that talk the old man said: "You are a lawyer, eh? These seas are full of victims who have escaped you. I have seen many. Very many." He told of a number, but Mark listened very little until the old fellow said: "And I remember some others of your own race, sir. I remember an Englishman and his wife, and another Englishman with them, a long, thin fellow, not bearded like the husband. He was the brother of the wife. I remember these particularly because they came off a Marseilles boat and tried to be French; because, also, they did not want to land here but had to. Yes, had to. Nature takes no heed of flight.

"The lady—they were all people of breeding—had a little son born here. She was only landed just in time. How those runaways fretted at being kept, especially the one with the beard, which was a new beard, as one could tell by the curiosity with which his hand yet felt it. And they were off so quickly. They bought a little cutter in the harbor and hired a master and mate.

"The master was my good friend Hibeau, of this town still, and off they sailed before the lady was really fit. I remember the women saying that her going was suicidal, but she went and she was willing. She was afraid for that gentleman with a beard. Hibeau, when he came back, said they were queer ones. They had talked to him about nothing but lonely islands, the lonelier the better, and when they had gotten all they wanted they paid him off and put him ashore at the Marshalls and took the cutter on alone. I remember them well, the woman was so good to look at, and they were intelligent people, too, not mere clumsy bolting thieves."

He hired a schooner and sailed the long slant to Futa-Huoa.

Four things stood out in that humdrum narrative—the man with a beard, the wife, the thin man, her brother, and the cutter. These were figures of Mark Stonor's dreams and his story. He asked, with a dry throat: "And when did this happen?"

"Oh, a long time ago. It was the year that French Jew bought the black pearl in the Low Archipelago. That was in 189——"

In 189——; that was twenty-eight years ago, and as far as Mark Stonor knew he was twenty-eight or nine himself. He felt queerly calm and queerly certain that a clue to his parents had come to him at last. He cut short the old man's memories to find out where Hibeau, the old shipmaster, lived, and he went to him. Hibeau was old, over seventy, but his memories were alert. Mark Stonor gave him no opportunity for garrulity. He said: "They tell me you have a wonderful knowledge of out-of-the-way islands. Can you tell me any island that has a hill like that?" He sketched on a piece of paper the outline of a witch's hat.

"It looks like the landfall of Futa-Huoa, a little place north of the Manihiki. It's uninhabited."

"You're sure?" said Mark Stonor, in dismay.

"No," grinned the old skipper. "Things happen, and I haven't been there for thirty years, but it was then. It's a lovely spot."

"Could you take me there?" asked Mark, but the old man said he was past that, though he recommended a younger man. He was not very satisfactory, on the whole. He remembered the bearded man, and the wife, and the young baby, and the uncle of twenty-eight years ago, when Mark probed his memory, but that was about all. He had nothing more to offer.

Mark Stonor hired a schooner and sailed the long slant to Futa-Huoa. At first he was excited, and then his senses dulled. He remembered that the old gossip in Noumea had declared that these people he hoped to find on the island with the witch's hat were fugitives from the law. He tried to tell himself that this was rubbish, that if they were his parents it couldn't possibly be so. But the thought stuck, and chilled his eagerness. What if, after all, this strange obsession, this strange search, had led him to a disgraced name? It seemed likely. Why did they choose a lonely island if not to hide?

They made Futa-Huoa in the very early morning, while Mark was still asleep. They were entering the bay when he came on deck, and, being close in like that, the sight of the witch's hat came as a shock. It was his witch's hat. What he had thought a dream was only the memory of somewhere under two or three. He stood, trembling, on the deck, staring at the place. It was smaller, but in this bay he had lived. He saw the great breakers tumbling on the sand, and they were the breakers he had remembered. He saw the sand, and it was the fine and glowing silver of his dreams. He saw the house set back against the green of palms. It was not quite the same, but that was because creepers had covered it with a riot of flowers—and he knew it.

A man at his elbow told him that breakfast was served. He said: "No—I'm going ashore now."

The Kanakas took him skillfully through the surf and he landed on the silver beach. His heart was pounding and he was dizzy with his feelings. It was the same, unaltered. He lifted some of the sand in his hand. It was hot and slipped away with a queer, tickling sensation. Walking up to the house was like walking up a mountain, so deeply did he feel the strain. He supposed the room of the house was the same, but it was so small now, so very small, where it had been bright and vast to a baby. He stood in the veranda, staring in through the door, wondering who lived here now, and as he did a woman came from the interior of the house, and said: "Nearly ready ——" and stopped, with a gasp.

Then she cried, hand on heart, "John"—and then again — "John, you've cut off——" Then she seemed to realize it was some one stranger, and — younger. For she stood, trembling, her sweet, pitiful face looking at him in mystification and —yes, anguish.

He saw a woman a little beyond the middle fifties, graying hair, but figure still neat and alert despite home made clothes. He saw a face that was perhaps older, but which had never changed. He took an involuntary step forward, his eyes fixed on hers, both their eyes recognizing and understanding, it seemed. He could see her hand working in agitation at her breast. She choked, cried huskily:

"John! . . . Johnny! . . ."

"Was that my name?" he said simply.

She gave a sob, cried out: "It can't be?"

He went towards her, "It is," he said shakily. "You know I'm your son, don't you, mother?"

She was in his arms crying, crying. . . . And how tight her thin arms held him.

He began to tell Roger Stonor's story of his rescue, though he felt that he was the one to be told. In the middle of his telling she sprang up from the settee on which she had drawn him, clapped her hands, and even before the answering Kanaka boy was in the room was crying out: "Go fetch the master. Tell him something wonderful has happened. Tell him some one has come ashore from the schooner in the bay. Tell him to prepare for something big. Go on, Johnny! Go on, dear!"

MARK STONOR went on with his story. She stared at him with a tremendous hunger, touched him as though she could not believe yet, caught his hands and fondled them. She was vivid with excitement. Again she broke into his narrative. "You were rescued by those dear people, they looked after you. How good they were. . . . O, we thought you dead. You were so ill. We could not make you well here. We thought you would die without a doctor. So Robert, Robert was my brother, your uncle, Johnny, went off in the cutter with your nurse and the Chinese servant. Went off, and the cutter never came back. . . . There were storms, and it was an old cutter. We thought all of you had been drowned. You see, we could never hear anything, cut off here. And I wished I'd gone, too, and been drowned, too. I wanted to go." Suddenly she was still, rigid, looking at him with a strange fear. She said, as though in agony, "But I could not go. Tell me, Johnny, all about your life in England; what have you become?"

He told her. She listened, not with excitement now, not fondling him, but with a queer stiffness and fear, her hands tightly clasped in her lap. He could see she was trembling, but for another reason than joy. When he told her his profession she gasped and cried, "A lawyer," and looked at him almost in misery. And when he had finished she repeated her words: "A lawyer, a great lawyer at the criminal bar!"

"And Burdon briefs you," said a strained voice from the door, and both turned with a start to see a man standing there.

He was a tall man, a year or so older than the woman, with gray hair and a big gray beard. Mark would not have recognized him but for the eyes and nose and forehead he had seen so often in his own mirror. It was his father, he knew, and was awed and pained by the austerity and suffering he saw in that face. His mother gave a little sob, cried: "John, this is——"

His father held up a hand. It shook, but he was master of his voice. He said, "This is a lawyer, I heard him say, Mary. A rising young lawyer, a protege of Henry Burdon's. A young man of promise."

"I am also your son, sir," said Mark steadily.

"My son was drowned as a baby," said his father steadily. "Have you taken silk yet, sir?"

"Not yet," said Mark, bewildered. "It will come, and does it matter? I am your son, sir." The man made no response. "Won't you acknowledge me?"

"You are a lawyer," the man said stiffly. "Did you ever hear of the Clavell case?"

Mark stiffened, amazed. "What?" he cried.

"I see you have," said the man. "I am John Clavell."

Mark stared, amazed. Then he almost shouted: "So that's why Old Burdon picked me out! That's why he interested himself in me!"

His father started, began to tremble. "Henry Burdon picked you out, interested himself in you? I don't understand."

"But it's simple," cried Mark. "He acted for you—by Jove, don't I know that! And he knew all along you were innocent. Then when he saw my face, which is your face, sir, without a beard, and heard my foster father's story, he put two and two together and befriended me—for your sake, sir."

"Befriended you for my sake. . . . I don't understand, boy," said his father, shakily, and he felt for and dropped into a chair.

But Mark saw, he saw it all. He saw the whole fineness of Old Burdon in befriending the son of a colleague. He even saw Old Burdon's friendly guile in getting him to give an opinion on the old case, Whillon vs. Clavell. Old Burdon had felt that one day Mark would trace his real parents, and, having traced them, would discover his father's real identity, and had taken care to assure him of his father's innocence in advance. And there was no doubt of that innocence. When his father cried: "But how can you say I am innocent? The case went against me? . . ."

"I know," laughed Mark. "Why, Old Burdon gave me all the material, with new matter, just before I sailed. He may have had an intuition I should find you; he may have wanted to prepare for any eventuality. You must have had a poor defending counsel, sir; I guarantee I'd have got a verdict for you, even on the old material. But with the new! Charles Whillon is dead now, you know, sir. His diaries make it plain that he gave you verbal instructions to convert those trust funds. He was a coward and a weakling, though. He funked facing the music when the crash came and the funds vanished into thin air. Perhaps he thought he had risked jail, too, in ordering you to sell out safe stock and buy that risky stuff. That's why he took refuge behind the fact that there was no evidence of his order and lied in court. But now—why, proving your innocence is going to be child's play. But—but why did you abscond on bail and hide away here, sir?"

"I was a coward," said his father hoarsely.

"No," said his mother. "He did it for me—and you, Johnny. You were coming, you know, and the case seemed hopeless. Whillon had won his way, and there was no evidence on our side once Whillon had lied. It meant prison for your father. He thought of me and the shame and shock to me in my condition, and he thought of you, born with a convict for a father. . . . So he sank his determination to face it out and came away for our sakes.

"We had determined to start with a new name in a new world for your sake, Johnny. My brother, who was surety, was agreeable. In fact, he came with us. We crossed into France, caught a boat for the South seas at Marseilles, and reached Noumea just in time for you to be born. We had to get away from there quickly, because even in such a place word had got out about our flight. We bought a cutter and hired a captain and mate to take us sailing over the South seas. Your uncle, who was a yachtsman, got the captain to tell him about all the lonely islands he could think of, and when we had put him ashore in the Marshalls we set out in search of a likely place. We spent almost two years going from place to place before we came here. You practically lived on the sea, Johnny."

"I know; I remember some of it. It helped to bring me out here," said Mark.

"We decided to settle here; it was the most cut off of all places," went on his mother. "We hired natives from the Marquesas and they built this house. We planted as best we could and lived as best we could. Your uncle did a little trading with the cutter, and when that was lost with him we had to make do with a big canoe. We've been homesick, but happy. . . . Very homesick of late, my dear, because we missed you as well as home."

"And now you've got me—and I'm taking you home."

"You can't, as a rising young lawyer, take John Clavell, an absconding lawyer, home, my boy," said his father thickly.

"Can't I?" laughed Mark. "For wasn't it the John Clavell, lawyer, in my blood that has made me the lawyer I am? It is your blood in me, sir, that will prove you innocent."

His father hid his face in his hands and Mark rose and walked to the window. He saw the Witch's Hat towering above the trees as it had always towered in his dreams.

"You made up a story about that hill, didn't you, mother?" he said.

"Do you remember that, my dear?" she said, coming softly to his side. "It was a silly little story about that being the hat of the witch who protected and looked after us always."

"It wasn't silly, and you were right about her," he smiled. "For she brought me here. The memory of her hat stuck in my mind, though I forget the story."

"Would you like to hear it again, Johnny?" she said softly, so very softly.

"Yes, dear," he said, putting his arm about her thin shoulders, "tell me now, as we look at it for the last time, for I feel that none of us is going to see it again."

CROSSED WIRES BY John T. McCutcheon

THE STORY SO FAR:

A WEALTHY American family, the Craytons, meet a worthless Frenchman, Pierre de Barsac, in Paris. He tries to win Virginia, the daughter. The mother favors him because he calls himself a count, but Mr. Clayton is suspicious. He arranges to have a young American, Rasher, accompany them back to America. Virginia becomes interested in Rasher, but is shocked to learn he has been a truck driver. Her father hires him as a chauffeur. In New York Virginia invites De Barsac to accompany them on the motor trip home. Rasher's real name is Bacon, and he is extremely rich. The trip begins with Rasher driving. They are held up by three men. Rasher is wounded trying to protect Virginia. She visits him at a hospital and finds she loves him. Looking out the hospital window she sees De Barsac walking with her maid, Celeste. Rasher tells her the pair are old friends. Mrs. Crayton wants to move on and leave Rasher in the hospital, but De Barsac urges against her desire when he finds Virginia will not leave the "chauffeur." In despair, called by Rasher to take his place, arrives by airplane. At Rasher's request Wellborne, alias Dick Wells, feigns car trouble to delay the Craytons. Virginia intimates that she is willing to stay with Rasher, but he tells her he wishes her to go. Mr. Crayton is threatened with financial disaster. His wife offers to save him with her own fortune, but only if he will consent to Virginia's marriage to De Barsac. Virginia receives the same ultimatum. Mr. Crayton leaves dinner abruptly on reading a mysterious message.

"I'm glad you notice an improvement, sir," he said.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

Mr. Crayton's Miracle.

THE telegram that sent the profoundly agitated Mr. Crayton from the table, followed by the startled eyes of his wife and daughter, was brief and to the point:

"A further credit of six hundred thousand, subject to immediate use, has been arranged at this bank. Please acknowledge receipt of this wire."

It was incredible! Once clear of the dining room, he reread it, fearful that his senses were tricking him. But no, there were those laconic words, definite and unequivocal. Some mysterious influence had operated at the eleventh hour to provide the means to finance his battle. There was now hope that ruin could be turned to triumph. His fortune, instead of being swept away, might now be greatly increased.

Again he became the man of action. He must at once get into long distance touch with the New York bankers, as well as his associates at home. First of all, the message must be verified.

Within two hours he was at the telephone.

He decided not to attempt a connection on the hotel wire, where privacy could not be assured, but instead to motor to the nearest large city, sixty miles away, and make his phone connections there.

"Send for my chauffeur and tell him to have my car here immediately. If the car isn't in condition, tell him to get another."

When he came down the car was standing at the door. In the darkness he caught only a glimpse of the chauffeur, whose collar was turned up, well hiding his features. He gave a brief order and the car noiselessly glided off through the drizzle and darkness of the deserted streets.

Mr. Crayton settled back. So far so good. He had left no message for his wife. It would be just as well that she remain in ignorance of this sudden change in his fortunes. She was convinced that he was financially ruined and that she, with her private fortune, could compel him to consent to Virginia's marriage to Count de Barsac. Very well, let her think so. She would have a sudden awakening.

Within two hours he was at the telephone and, after a long delay, he secured a connection with the New York banker at his club.

"Yes, it's true that a credit of six hundred thousand has been arranged," said the banker. "I was informed just before I left the office."

Beyond this confirmation, which was all Mr. Crayton really wished, the banker was either in ignorance or was purposely evading the source of this credit. Mr. Crayton assumed that his associate back home had by some miracle succeeded in arranging it. All efforts to get the latter on the wire were in vain. His house reported that he was out and was not expected home until later.

Mr. Crayton, instead of returning to Edgemoor to rejoin his wife and daughter, decided to catch a night train for home.

The chauffeur could take the car back and explain to Mrs. Crayton that her husband had gone on by train. He then was driven to the railway station.

Up to this time he had not caught a good look at the chauffeur. If he gave any thought to him, it was a fleeting impression that the man's clothes were much tidier than those he had been wearing. Even this did not prepare him for the surprise he now experienced.

The man, immaculately washed and divested of his coating of grease and oil, wearing a trim uniform instead of the grimy overalls, was a revelation. "Why, Good Lord," thought Mr. Crayton, "this man is positively handsome."

Aloud he remarked dryly: "I wouldn't have known you, Wells. As I recall you from our previous meetings, you were about the greasiest, oiliest, most untidy man I'd ever seen. I didn't even know whether you were white or black."

Wells smiled pleasantly, revealing very white and regular teeth.

"I'm glad you notice an improvement, sir," he said. "You saw me when I was working on the car. Now that the repairs are done, I've had time to devote some attention to myself. I hope you like the effect."

MR. CRAYTON smiled grimly and nodded. "Yes, the effect is all I could wish—more, in fact," he added to himself. He had just gotten rid of one attractive chauffeur who had intrigued his daughter's fancy; now here was another who, in point of manly pulchritude, was well nigh irresistible. He wondered what effect her association with this Adonis would have on Virginia's capricious fancy. He reflected that Mrs. Crayton, having got rid of one of the count's rivals, would now have another thrust upon her. The thought gave him considerable satisfaction.

"Return to Edgemoor," he instructed, "and if Mrs. Crayton is still awake tell her that I've gone home by train. She will possibly want you to follow with them in the morning."

Dick Wells, alias Richard Wellborne, Harvard, '22, touched his cap. Having at the request of Rasher sent to the New York bank the telegram that arranged a credit for Mr. Crayton, he was able to guess that Mr. Crayton's good humor was due to that financial godsend. As he drove away, he called out cheerily, "Good-by, Mr. Crayton. I hope your financial troubles are now over."

An instant later he was out of earshot, leaving the gaping, astounded Mr. Crayton rooted to the sidewalk.

"Now, what the devil does he know about my troubles? I haven't breathed a word of it to him."

It was about one-thirty when Wells returned to Edgemoor. Except for a dim light in the office, where the night clerk was dozing, the hotel was in darkness. As he did not know that Mr. Crayton had left without notifying his wife, it seemed unnecessary to arouse her at this hour. So he turned in, pleasantly cheered by the part he was playing in this little drama. He assumed that Rasher's princely aid to Mr. Crayton was due to the fact that Rasher was in love with Virginia, although nothing to that effect had been said.

Believing this, he felt that his future course was to guard Rasher's interests and circumvent the fortune hunting count. In every possible way he would seek to divert the girl's thoughts from the Frenchman, even to the point of making love to her himself. But always, he vowed, with loyal regard to his friend Rasher.

Then he drifted off to healthy slumber, blissfully unaware that others in the hotel were tossing sleeplessly on their pillows.

Mrs. Crayton had not slept a wink. Her husband's mysterious departure worried her greatly. She had sat up until midnight awaiting his return, and had then gone to bed. She was genuinely sorry for him; but, nevertheless, she found a certain grim satisfaction in the conviction that now she held the winning cards in her hand and that Virginia's marriage to the count was assured. Countess de Barsac! It was a pleasant thought. How the people back home would be impressed! She even saw herself an honored guest at the ancient chateau of the Barsacs, with obsequious peasantry bowing and scraping whenever she appeared.

Virginia, equally sleepless, was trying to devise some means of saving her father from financial ruin without yielding to this odious match with De Barsac, but no other solution appeared. In reckless despair, she thought she might as well consent and have it over with.

In another room in the hotel a cigaret glowed in the darkness. There lay Pierre de Barsac, debating the course to follow. A heavy odor of dead tobacco smoke hung in the air, for the windows were tightly closed. Here in this stuffy room he and the maid Celeste had sat for hours, smoking countless cigarets and talking tensely in low voices. Their discussion concerned the financial crisis confronting Mr. Crayton.

THE BLACK ABBOT by Edgar Wallace

THE STORY THUS FAR:

HARRY, LORD CHELFORD, occupies Fossaway Manor with his half-brother, Dick. Lord Chelford is engaged to Leslie Gwyn, whose brother, Arthur, is his solicitor. Dick engages a detective, Puttler, to investigate the rumored appearance of the Black Abbot, supposed to haunt the ruins of an old abbey. Someone fires several shots at Leslie as she walks the grounds. The hidden Chelford treasure is sought by Gwyn and by his clerk, Fabrian Gilder. Gilder and Gwyn engage in a fist fight when they meet at night in their search. Gwyn discharges Gilder. The latter, writing with invisible ink, promises to marry Mary Wenner, Chelford's former secretary, if she will lead him to the treasure. The girl restores the letter to legibility after it fades. A masked figure frightens Gilder and Mary from the treasure room in the abbey. Later Gilder finds the cylinders supposedly filled with gold have been removed, except one, which contains an art treasure, a priceless missal. Leslie, in love with Dick, breaks off her engagement to Chelford. Thomas, a footman and an ex-convict, is discharged when detected in theft. Gwyn has gambled away Leslie's fortune of 250,000 pounds and 50,000 pounds in securities from the estate of Chelford's mother. Thomas learns by eavesdropping of Arthur's predicament and reveals it to Gilder, who has enlisted the ex-convict's aid. Gilder proposes to Leslie, offering to square Arthur's accounts. Dick, for love of Leslie, attempts vainly to raise money to cover the defalcations.

INSTALLMENT XIII.

Murder.

MONKEY PUTTLER met Dick at the station, and had a piece of news to impart: "I've found the rifle.'"

"Where did you find it?" asked Dick, quickly.

"Up against the river. Some one must have thrown it in, but didn't throw hard enough. There were three or four cartridges still in the magazine."

"Have you seen Harry?'"

"I saw him this afternoon," said the cheerful Puttler. "He worked that chesil gag on me, but I didn't give him my views."

In spite of his anxiety Dick smiled.

"Have you any views on chesils?"

"Yes, sir," said the other, confidently. "He thinks chesil is an instrument. He doesn't seem to realize that in Elizabethan times 'chesil' meant 'gravel' or 'shingle'."

Dick stopped and stared at him.

"Is that so?" he asked.

"Why, the word isn't even obsolete; you'll find it in any dictionary. The new 'chesil' that is spoken of in the diary is a load of shingle he got from Brighthelmstone. That's Brighton. Now, why did the old bird want shingle? Obviously to put in some kind of concrete or mortar."

"For heaven's sake don't start on the treasure, or I shall go mad!" groaned Dick. "At any rate, you don't believe in its existence, thank goodness!"

"I do," said the surprising man, emphatically. "I'm as sure that those thousand bars of gold are in existence as I'm certain you and I are walking up this road."

"Then where are they?" asked Dick in exasperation.

"Ask me before I go," replied the other, cryptically.

A DOZEN letters were written and burnt in the fireplace of her bedroom before Leslie composed the one that was eventually placed in an envelope and addressed to "Fabrian Gilder, Esq., 35 Regency Mansions, London":

"Dear Mr. Gilder: I agree to your terms. The money or equivalent shares must be deposited in the Horsham branch of the Southern and Midland Bank, in the name of Leslie Gilder, so that I may have control of the account from the moment I am married. Will you please make arrangements for the ceremony, and tell me when and where I am to meet you?

"Very sincerely, Leslie Gwyn."

The last post was collected by a motorcyclist postman at ten o'clock from a little wall box not a hundred yards from the house. There was an earlier collection, but somehow she could not bring herself to post the letter until the very last moment.

What would Dick say? She screwed up her eyes tightly, as though to hide the vision of him, and her lips trembled.

"No weakness, Danton!" It was a favorite quotation of her childhood, and had been the slogan at all moments when tears were near at hand.

The hands of the clock moved slowly and inexorably round. Nine o'clock—a quarter after—twenty minutes before ten. She set her teeth and got up from the little table where she had been trying to vain to concentrate her mind upon a game of patience, went upstairs and put on her hat and coat, and, with the letter tightly gripped in her hand, stole down across the hall, opened the door, and went out.

It was very dark; she could scarcely see her way down the drive. Clear of the overhanging trees, her eyes, grown accustomed to the darkness, made out the road. A few minutes' walk brought her to the pillar box, and here she waited. A big spot of rain fell upon her hand; she heard the sough of the wind through the trees; and then, far away, she saw a tiny star of light and heard the faint clank of the postman's cycle. She thrust the letter into the box and turned to retrace her steps.

Then it occurred to her that the postman would pass her, and she did not wish to see him. Which way should she go? Her heart and inclinations beckoned to Fossaway Manor. Dick—she must see Dick. She fought against the madness; the postman's light grew brighter. Then she ran down towards the cut road, through the gate, and up past the abbey ruins.

She was half way across the long meadow when she stopped. Fear was clutching at her heart; she could feel the flesh creep on her neck, and, turning, looked back. Somebody was following her. Consciously she had heard no sound, but to her heart flashed a warning signal that set it racing.

Once she looked back and thought she saw a moving shape. She quickened her steps; broke into a gentle run. She must not allow blind panic to overcome her, she told herself.

Nearer and nearer she came to the house, and then, of a sudden, she whipped round. Somebody was behind her; she was sure of it now. She heard feet upon the graveled road.

"Who is there?" she called.

There was no answer, but the footsteps stopped. They might be walking on the grassy verge, she thought, and, turning, ran up the drive. Whoever followed was running, too. She heard a sibilant whisper, and her blood turned cold. Then, as she emerged from the trees, she saw a figure against the gray sheen of the round pond, saw the shape of it—the long habit and the heavy cowl. With a scream she flew.

The drive continuing past the window would bring her to Dick's study. She saw with a gasp of relief that the door was open, and a light shining inside. Over her shoulder she saw the queer shape again, and screamed.

IN an instant Dick was out of the study and had caught her in his arms.

He listened to her breathless story, then, almost carrying her to his room, he put her in a chair and ran out into the night. In a few minutes he came back.

"I saw nothing," he said. "It was the Black Abbot, you say?"

"I don't know; something in a cowl and habit; I'm sure of that."

It was a bad introduction to the story she had to tell; indeed, in her terror, she almost forgot the object of her visit.

"Dick, I know," were the first words she said when she had recovered her breath.

"You know what?"

"About Lady Chelford's money."

She saw his face change.

"Did he tell you?" he asked, the red coming into his face.

"Not Arthur, no. It was Gilder."

"Mr. Gilder told you? Was that why he came?"

She nodded.

"For nothing else?"

"Yes; he came to offer me the money."

She saw his eyes narrow.

"He did? At a price, of course?"

She nodded.

"You agreed?"

She nodded again.

"I've just posted the letter to him," she said.

She saw him bite his lip, and a red spot of blood showed.

"O, Dick, Dick!" She was sobbing on his breast, and his arms were about her, comforting her.

"You can't do it, my dear. Anything is better than that."

She pushed herself gently away from him, and dried her eyes.

"I must, Dick; I have given my word. I cannot trick him. The last thing I said to him was, 'If I tell you I will marry you, you can make the arrangements about the money—I will not fail you.'"

His face was drawn and haggard.

"This can't be!" he said.

He paused.

"What's that?" she gasped, terrified.

From somewhere in the grounds came a shrill shriek that was hardly human. Again it came: a sobbing, blubbering shriek that turned her heart to ice.

"Stay here," said Dick, as he made for the open window, but she flung herself upon him.

"You shan't go! You mustn't go!" she cried, wildly. "Dick, something dreadful is happening. O, God! listen, Dick!"

This time the shriek was shriller, and died away into a thin wail of sound.

He pushed her aside, and ran out onto the lawn.

"Let me come with you—do, please do!" she begged. "I dare not be left alone."

He hesitated.

"Come," he said, roughly, and took her arm with a grip that made her wince.

Together they ran toward Elm drive, and then he stopped.

"Go back and get my hand lamp. It's on my writing table," he said. "I will wait here for you."

SHE fled back to the room, took up the lamp with fingers that trembled so violently that she could scarcely hold it, and rejoined him.

He turned on the light, swinging its rays over the ground before him and going ahead of her. Presently she saw him stop and a circle of light focus on something brown that lay huddled on the grass.

"Stay where you are," he commanded, "and turn your back."

A voice halted him in the distance; it was Puttler, and, guided by the lamp, he came on the scene.

At Dick's feet was the huddled figure of a man. He was lying on his face and was attired from head to foot in a long black habit around which a rope was girdled.

"The Black Abbot?" said Puttler, incredulously. "Is he dead?"

"Look," said Dick, and pointed to the wet shoulder and the horror of the throat.

Puttler knelt down, and, putting his arms under the figure, turned it on its back.

The face was covered by a black cowl, and this he gently raised.

"Merciful God!" said Dick, in a hushed voice.

He was looking into the gray face of Thomas, the footman.

"Thomas—the Black Abbot!"

Dick looked at the pitiable thing, bewildered; and then he remembered the girl. They walked back without a word to his room. He rang the bell, and, to the footman who answered:

"Ask Mr. Glover to come to me," he said.

The old butler came apprehensively. All the servants had heard the scream in the park.

"Where is his lordship?"

"He went up to bed about five minutes ago, Mr. Alford."

"Had he heard—anything?"

"No, sir. He's so particular about our talking of the Black Abbot——"

"How do you know it was the Black Abbot?" asked Dick sharply, and the butler explained that somebody had seen the figure in the grounds.

"He was trying to open a window. One of the maids looking out of her window saw him walking on the paved path below and raised an alarm."

Dick drew the butler out into the hall and closed the door behind him.

"A man has been found in the grounds in the dress of a black abbot—and he is dead—murdered!"

"Good Lord, sir!" said the startled servant. "Is it anybody we know?"

"Thomas," said Dick laconically, and the old man staggered back against the paneled wall.

"Not our Thomas? Thomas Luck, the man who was dismissed?"

Dick nodded.

"Get the servants to bed. Tell them that the scream came from somebody who was skylarking and that we caught him—anything you like."

He went back to the girl.

"As for you, young lady," he said, with a grim smile, "I seem to spend my life taking you back to your home."

At that moment the telephone bell rang and he took up the instrument.

"Is that Lord Chelford's house?" said an unfamiliar voice.

"Yes," said Dick shortly.

"I'm speaking from the subpostoffice. That isn't Lord Chelford speaking?"

"No; it's Mr. Alford," said Dick.

"Well, listen, Mr. Alford. Have you sent anything very important from the local post box?"

"Why?" asked Dick quickly.

"Because our roundsman reported that the box had been tampered with. He couldn't get in his key, so the letters that had been posted between six and ten have not yet been collected."

Dick uttered an exclamation.

"Right! When it's cleared will you ask the postman to bring the letters up to the hall? There are one or two that I want to withdraw."

The man at the other end of the wire hesitated.

"Why, in the special circumstances, yes," he said, and Dick hung up the receiver and turned slowly to the girl.

"The letter box hasn't been cleared."

Slowly the significance of the words dawned upon her.

"What shall I do?" she whispered.

"Give me authority to withdraw your letter to Gilder. There are six more days."

She held her breath. For a second a vision of her brother in convict's garb came to her eyes, and then she looked at the man before her. Something of his vitality, his confidence passed to her soul.

"I will do as you tell me," she said in a voice little above a whisper. "But, Dick, what will happen?"

"I am going to do my duty," said Dick.

And all that sleepless night, as she tossed from side to side in her bed, she pondered those words, but could find no solution to their mystery.

* * * * * * *

Puttler, unshaven and weary eyed, dragged himself to the study and poured out a large cup of tea that the butler had brought in and drank it at a gulp.

"Scotland Yard has given me charge of this case, for which you may thank your stars!" he said. "Considering we've had to do all our work between eleven and four, I think I've set up a record in investigation. Thomas' monkish attire was hired, as you thought, from a theatrical costumer's in Wardour street——"

"I saw him coming out with a bundle under his arm and wondered what use he could find for fancy dress," interrupted Dick.

"That is fact No. 1," counted Puttler. "Fact No. 2 is that he was making ready for a getaway. He even tried to open your local letter box, probbly earlier in the evening. Do you send money by post?"

She saw a figure against the gray sheen of the lily pond.

"My brother does frequently. It's a habit I've tried to cure, without success."

"That is fact No. 2," said Puttler. "He couldn't open the box, but we found the key on him. He had moved everything of value from Gilder's house. I found his portmanteau packed and cached in the field where you say Gilder parks his car. And obviously he was coming to relieve your brother of any loose cash he might find in the library. I found his tools scattered on the flower bed under one of the library windows."

They talked till the sleepy eyed Mr. Glover staggered in and asked permission to go to bed, and then they walked out into the cold morning and joined the party of police that were searching the grounds.

"I suppose the best thing we can do is to go to bed also," said Dick, and at that instant Puttler stooped and picked something from the long grass.

It was a long dagger, its steel hilt black with age, the blade coated with something that was still wet. They looked at each other.

"Do you know this?"

Dick nodded.

"It is the dagger that once belonged to Hubert of Redruth—the Black Abbot!"

The man's jaw dropped.

"Where does it come from?".

Dick shook his head.

"The last time I saw it," he said slowly, "it was hanging in the hall of Arthur Gwyn's house."

"Curiouser and curiouser," said Puttler, who had literary leanings.

Dick heard his name shouted in an agitated voice, and, looking round, saw the butler running towards him, no longer sleepy eyed, but very alert and white.

"What is the matter, Glover?"

"The maid . . . foolish girl, only just told me . . . frightened!" gasped the old man, and pointed to the open study windows.

DICK walked quickly back, followed by Puttler. Drooping in his study chair was a plain looking girl, wearing over her coarse night dress a man's overcoat; her lank hair falling over her shoulders, she presented a sight which at any other time would have moved Dick Alford to laughter.

"Now, Alice, tell Mr. Alford what you told me," said the old butler, beside himself with anxiety.

It was some time before she could speak coherently, and then she told her amazing story. She had gone to bed in the servants' quarters soon after eleven with a sick headache. She had heard nothing of the scream, but at some time, which she placed with accuracy, having an alarm clock with a phosphorescent dial by her bedside, at 1:45, she heard "a terrible commotion" downstairs. Her room was immediately above Lord Chelford's. She heard shouts and screams, the smashing of glass, and the sounds of a struggle.

"Hurry, hurry, woman!" said Dick, frantic with anxiety. "Downstairs, in his lordship's room—are you sure?"

"Yes, sir," whimpered the girl. "I simply dared not get up for fear I was murdered. I simply lay there and fainted and come to again. . . ."

Before she had finished Dick was across the hall and running up the stairs two at a time. He tried the door of Harry's room, but it was bolted. He called him by name, and hammered on the panels, but there was no answer.

"We'd better break in the door," said Puttler. "Have you got an ax?"

Mr. Glover went downstairs in search of the tool and returned with an ax and a case opener. In a second the panel of the door was smashed and Dick peered in.

All the blinds save one were drawn, and the exception afforded sufficient light to enable him to examine the room. He gave one glance and his heart sank. The room was in hopeless confusion; the bedclothes were thrown on the floor, two mirrors, one a cheval glass, had been smashed; the uncurtained window was open. Dick put his hand through the hole in the panel and unbolted the door, and the two men ran in.

Puttler glanced at the bed. The mattress had been half dragged to the floor, but the pillows were still in their place, and one of these and a part of the under sheet were smothered with blood.

Dick examined the open window. Three or four of the leaded panes were broken, and the steel rod that kept the windows open was bent as though a heavy weight had rested upon it. The ground was about fifteen feet below, and immediately under the window a large rhododendron bush had been broken as though by some heavy weight thrown upon it. Without hesitation, Dick threw his legs across the window sill, poised himself a moment, and dropped to the ground. There was blood on the leaves of the bush; he could find no footprints.

By this time Puttler, who had chosen a more sedate method of descent, had joined him, and the two men went on, keeping to the paved path, and searched the ground for a further trail.

The paving ended abruptly and was continued with a rolled gravel path, and there were marks here of something heavy being dragged along. These ceased as suddenly as the paving.

"Wait," said Dick, as the solution dawned upon him.

He ran back along the wall of the wing, turned the corner, and stopped before the first of the library windows. It was open, and, drawing himself up, he dropped into the darkened room and pulled back the curtains. So far he had not examined the library; his practiced eye, familiar with almost every book on the shelves, told him that somebody had been here. One section of the shelves had been almost cleared. A drawer in Harry's desk had been broken open, and on the floor he found an empty cash box.

He made a brief and hurried survey and then rejoined the detective.

Beyond the graveled path and the dragging marks, all trace of Harry was lost. An hour's search brought them no nearer to discovery, and Dick went back to his room to find the first of the disheveled reporters stepping from his hired car.

MR. GILDER rose at six o'clock that morning. He had spent a restless night and welcomed the dawn.

The first post did not arrive until eight o'clock, and he met the postman at the door. There were half a dozen letters for him, and he carried them into his room and examined them eagerly. Only one bore a familiar postmark and that was in a hand which he recognized. He tore it open and found a few scrawled lines:

"If I don't see you again, thank you for your kindness, and don't think too badly of your old friend."

So Thomas had gone! With a curse he threw the letter into the fireplace and went back, accosting the postman as he descended from the upper floors of the apartments.

"No, sir, there's no other letter." The man went through his bundle carefully. "There is another post at half past nine. The country post doesn't usually get into town in time for the first delivery."

Gilder slammed the door and went back to sulk in his room. By this time his servants were about. At nine o'clock they called him to breakfast, but a glance at the contents of the dishes did not tempt him.

His newspapers were placed folded at his hand. He opened the first, and on the center page a paragraph arrested his eye:

"Strange Happening at Haunted Manor House."

"By telephone, Chelfordbury, 2 a. m."

"There has been a tragic sequel to the appearance of the Black Abbot in the grounds of Fossaway Manor. At eleven o'clock last night Mr. Richard Alford, hearing screams, ran out from the house and discovered the dead body of a man in the habit of a monk. He had been terribly injured, there being no less than nine wounds. The man has been identified as Thomas Luck, a former footman in the employ of the Earl of Chelford."

Gilder uttered an exclamation and put down the paper. Thomas! His first thought was for himself. Suppose it were known that this man was staying at his cottage, he would be dragged into the affair; inquiries would be made, and he would figure at a coroner's inquest, if not in a murder trial. Cold bloodedly he cursed the dead man for his folly.

For the time being, all thought of the expected letter went out of his mind. But as the tragedy became familiar to him, his thoughts went back to Leslie Gwyn. The country post would bring the letter, and he would act generously, munificently. There should be no higgling, no bargaining, no balancing of accounts to the last penny. Her word would be sufficient. Over night he had written his letter, prepared the grand gesture which should break down the last barrier of mental resistance; and, with his knowledge of women, he did not doubt what form the reaction would take.

He went into the little library where he did his work, opened a combination wall safe and took out the letter. He had read it again and again after it had been written, and with every reading he had the warm glow of complacency which men derive from the contemplation of their own generosity.

"My dear Leslie: Thank you for your letter. I did not doubt that you would keep your word. My answer you will find enclosed herewith—a blank check. I make no stipulations, I extract no conditions. Draw the check for as much money as your brother requires to clear himself from his dreadful situation. I have given instructions to the bank that the check is to be honored without question. Fabrian."

It would have been a simple matter to have filled in the form for the amount required, but there was a certain nobility, a magnificence, in the blank check. It was a carte blanche upon his fortune.

At the back of his mind there was still a great uneasiness about the tragedy at Chelfordbury. He sent his maid out to get a copy of the sporting editions, but they had not arrived at Regent's Park, and he decided to take a taxi to Piccadilly Circus, and, if necessary, to Fleet street, to get an early copy. Such a journey would serve the purpose of filling in the time until the country post arrived.

It was at Oxford Circus that he saw the first newspaper contents bill. The first said "Terrible Tragedy in Sussex Village"; the second made him sit bolt upright in the car. "Well Known Earl Kidnaped and Murdered."

Gilder stopped the taxi and, springing out, grabbed at a paper. A flaring headline met his eye.

"LORD CHELFORD CARRIED OFF BY UNKNOWN MURDERER. FEARED DOUBLE TRAGEDY IN A SUSSEX VILLAGE."

There were other sub-headings, but his eye ran down to the story:

"At 11 o'clock last night screams were heard in the grounds of Fossaway Manor, the fine old Tudor mansion which has been the country seat of the Earls of Chelford for hundreds of years. The Hon. Richard Alford, the only brother of Lord Chelford, ran out, accompanied by Detective Sergeant Puttler, who was staying at the Manor as Mr. Alford's guest. They were horrified to discover, lying on the grass, the dead body of a man dressed in the habit of the famous Black Abbot. The local police were immediately called in, and hardly had their investigations begun when, unknown to them, a second tragedy occurred. A maid in the employ of the Earl of Chelford, Alice Barter, who sleeps in a room over that occupied by Lord Chelford, states that at one o'clock in the morning she heard sounds of a terrific struggle in his lordship's room. In terror, she did not report the occurrence till four in the morning. Lord Chelford's door was broken open and a terrible scene met the eyes of the police officers. The room was in confusion; mirrors and furniture were smashed; and it was evident from the indications that a terrible struggle had taken place, and, either stunned or killed, Lord Chelford was pulled to the window and thrown out. A search of the grounds left no doubt that his body was dragged for some distance along the ground. At the moment of telephoning, says our correspondent, no trace of the body has been found."

The newsboy was still waiting for payment. Mr. Gilder put his hand in his pocket mechanically and, giving him a shilling, directed the driver to take him to Regency Mansions.

And then came a thunderbolt.

"Mr. Arthur Gwyn is waiting for you in the library," said the maid who awaited him.

STUART'S
DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

WE MODERNS — NERVES — By W. E. HILL

Margie, the beautiful typist, has an attack of the dismals. Feels very much abused and ill used. Steel riveting is going on across the street, and a strawberry sundae with maple nut trimmings is carrying on inside her.

Just three nervous women on the back seat of a sedan watching a stray chicken cross in front of the car.

Telephone nerves. "Now, don't you sass me back, operator! If you put a wrong number on here again I'll report you!"

Too much family. Hark to Tessie, the home girl, airing her troubles to a friend. "They get on my nerves asking me questions about where I've been and who I went with. And if I want any privacy in that apartment, I have to get in the bathtub!"

No nerves at all. This, dear reader, is the guy with the healthy nerves, who is very irritating to nervous people. He whistles off key, drums on the table, and slams doors with impunity.

Nothing is more upsetting to the nerves than terrible sights and sounds. For instance, the sight of a young man in a bathing suit, absently peeling off sunburned skin, has been known to cause many a nervous breakdown.

Nerves in the family. You can't argue with nerves. They get the best of it every time. "I don't want to argue with you, William," William's mother is saying, "you've made mamma's head ache dreadfully!"

Some people enjoy nervous upsets. Meet Mrs. Winkle, who, to use her own words, is "a bundle of neurotic nerves." Always on the verge of a breakdown. "I have," she explains, "no resistance. Absolutely no resistance at all!"

The nervous dyspeptic. Poor Mr. Grouch! His nervous reactions are like "sweet bells jangled out of tune." Says Mrs. Grouch, who has no poetry in her soul, "He's a regular old bear, growling all the time!"

Too much coffee. Benny is lying awake thinking and thinking. Worrying over all the terrible things that might possibly happen, but probably won't, down at the office.

You wouldn't think Harriet had nerves, now, would you? But she has, as her dear mistress is going to find out presently, if she keeps on fiddling around in the ice box wondering out loud where the rest of that boiled ham is!

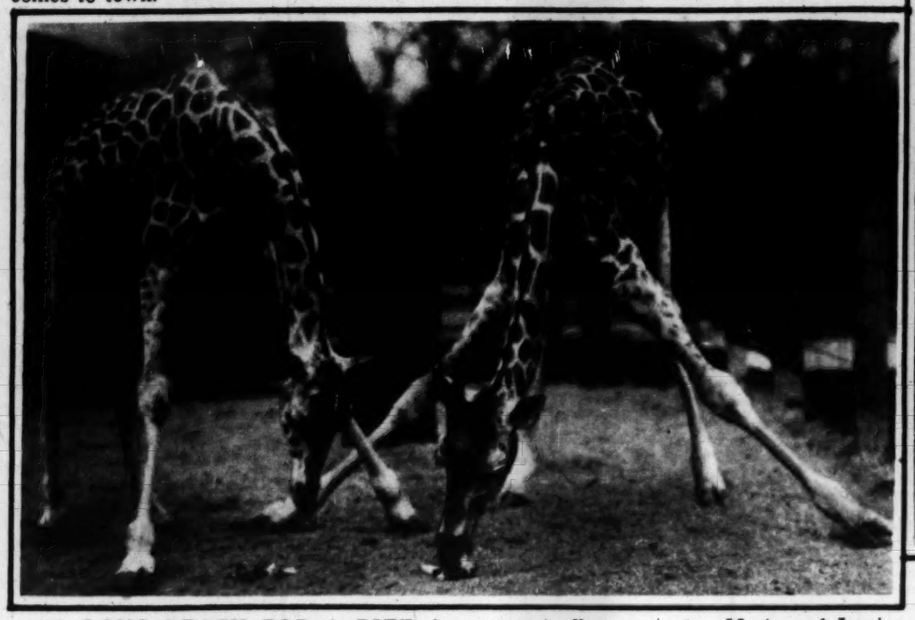
'Ray! The Circus Is Comin'!

JUST LIKE LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE'S PETS, these trick elephants are experts at head stands and such stunts. The big 'uns will perform in Grant park for nine days beginning next Saturday, July 17, when Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey's circus comes to town.



A LONG REACH FOR A BITE, but even giraffes must eat. Marie and Louise are twin sisters with the big show.

"I HAVE FOUND that by adding three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to my daily diet I am able to keep in perfect physical trim and ready for action on the hottest of Texas summer days. Fleischmann's Yeast eliminates all impurities from the blood and is a safeguard against constipation. I recommend Fleischmann's Yeast as an excellent addition to the diet to give any person pep and endurance. As a result of my personal experience many of the boys on the team also eat Yeast regularly."

J. P. ("Snipe") Conley, Dallas, Texas

"I USED TO HAVE PIMPLES all over my face and shoulders. I didn't like to wear an evening dress and was always embarrassed when I was with a group. I was absolutely lifeless all the time; I had no energy. I tried many remedies to no avail. One day I read an advertisement in the paper about Fleischmann's Yeast. I took two cakes a day for three months and was entirely rid of my skin trouble."

Frances Shaw, Richmond, Va.

"A YEAR AGO I was anaemic, could not sleep, and was losing weight. I tried in vain one remedy after another. Then someone suggested that I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I did so, and grew better so quickly that I kept on with it. My color came back and my nerves became more steady. Now I am in sound health."

Stephana Lee, Chicago, Ill.

"LAST YEAR my physician told me that my stomach was bad and that I should find an outside position. . . . I decided to try Fleischmann's Yeast. I used three cakes daily dissolved in water for about seven months. Then feeling better, I stopped eating Yeast. Some time later the same trouble returned. I began eating Fleischmann's Yeast as before. I know now that a bad stomach was the basis of my trouble. For, thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast, I am again feeling fine."

These letters tell of constipation conquered—skin and stomach disorders corrected—through one fresh food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

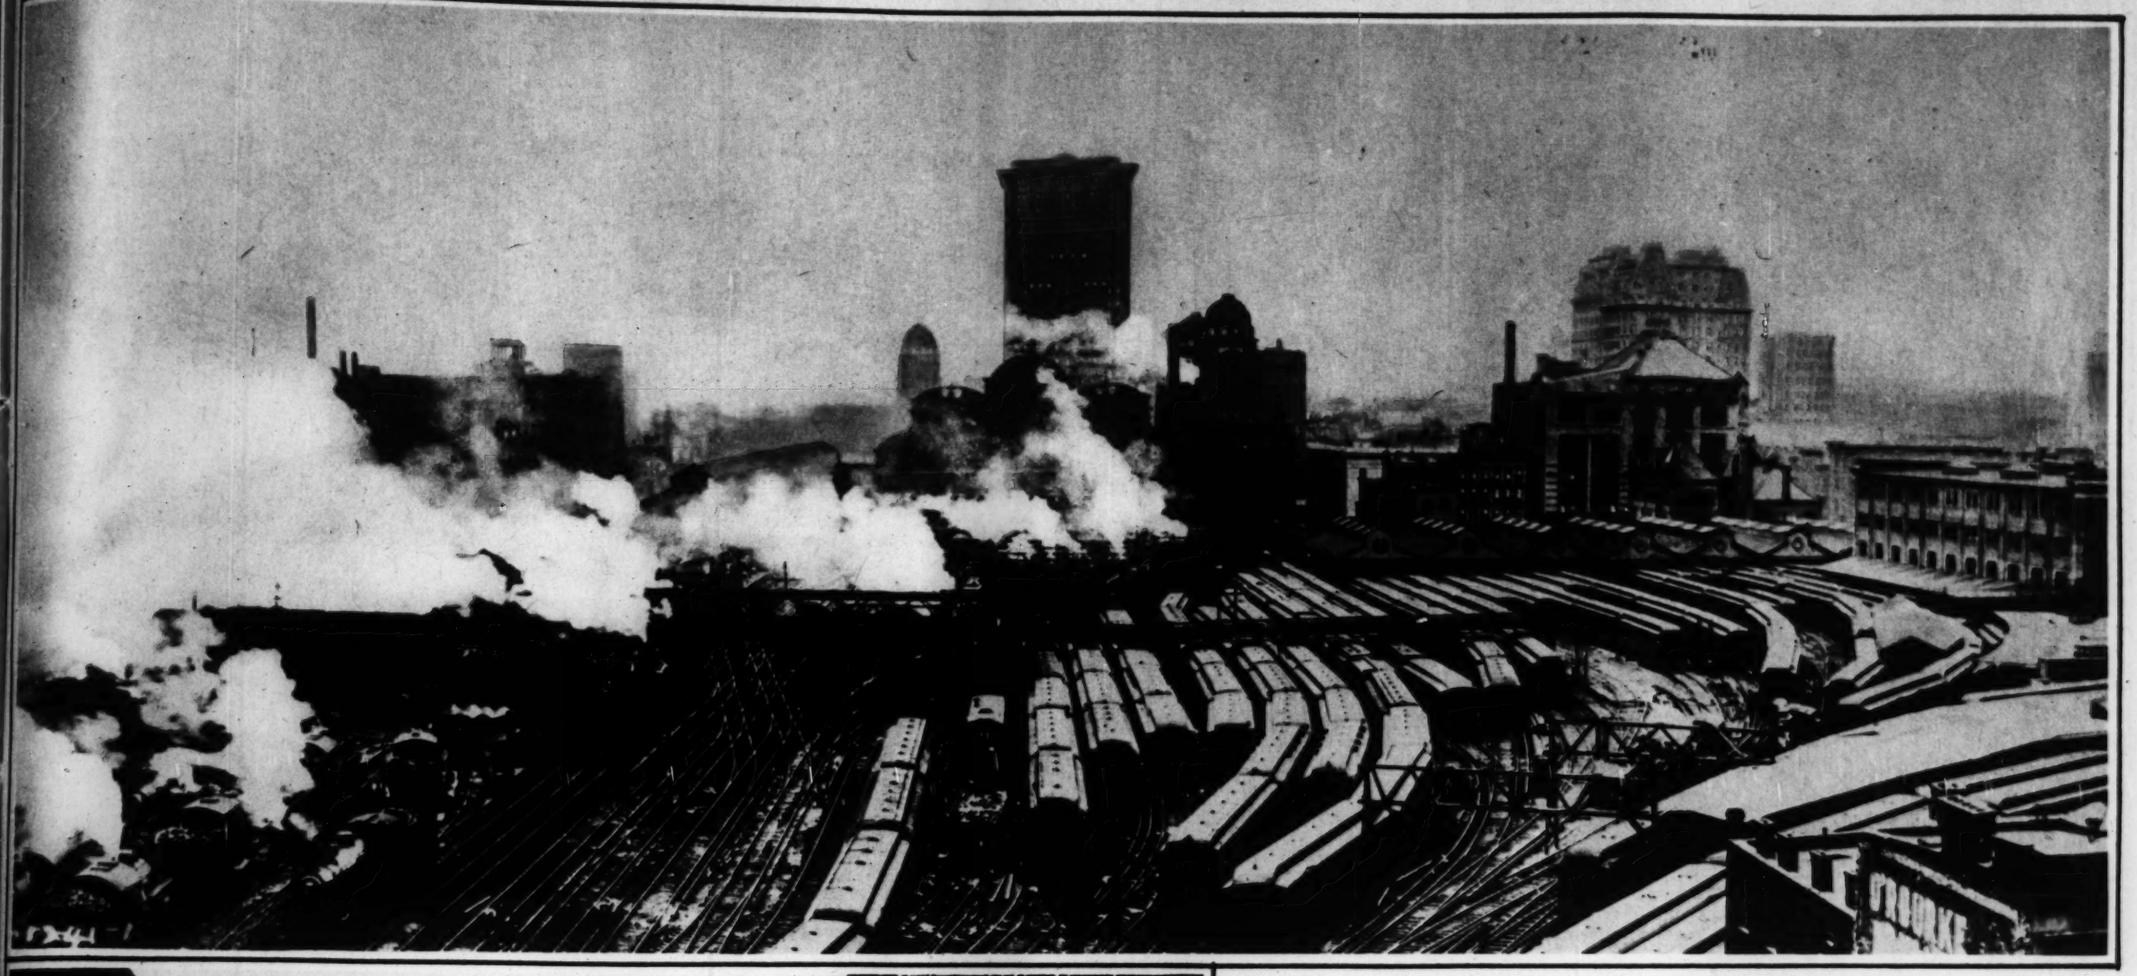
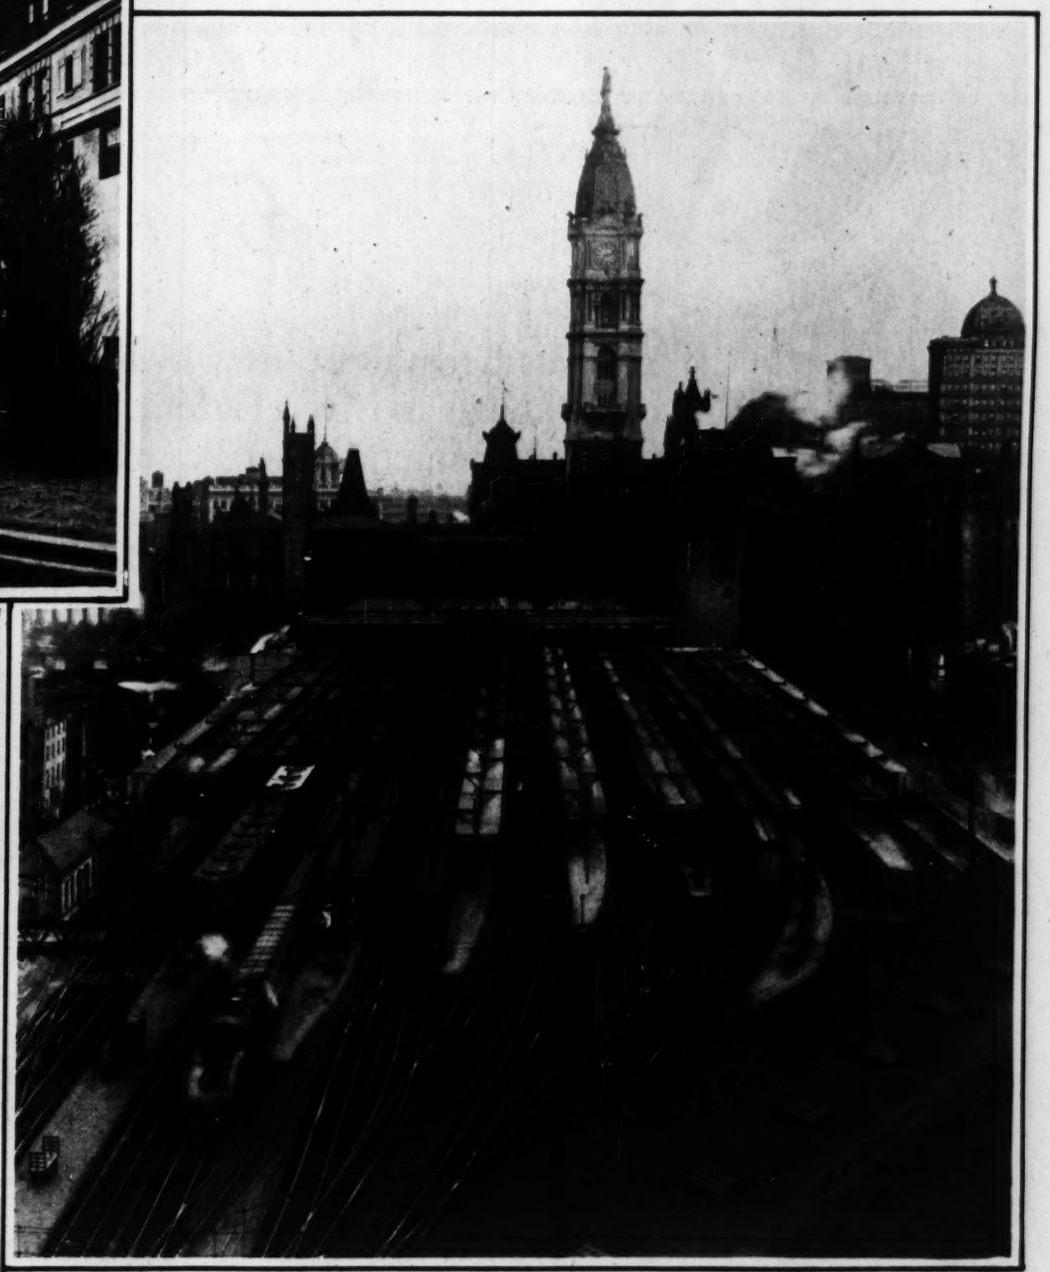
Why Railroad Terminals Should Be Electrified



LESS THAN TWENTY YEARS AGO the black, belching, fiery furnace pictured above was what you passed through when you came to New York via the New York Central. It extended from 45th street on the south to 50th street on the north and covered the larger part of the area from the rear of Madison avenue on the west to Lexington avenue on the east. It was a combination of broiling gridiron and steaming cauldron, and it menaced life and ruined property values. It was an economic and civic tragedy. Then citizens and railroad wrought out a gigantic achievement in safety and beauty.

TODAY the scene at the left replaces the inferno shown above. There are residential and commercial palaces, avenues, esplanades, and court yards musical with fountains and fragrant with flowers. Far beneath are the cool, clean tunnels and subways by which you now enter New York via the New York Central lines. Some of the residential palaces contain apartments that rent for $30,000 a year each, and in the commercial structures office floor space brings an annual rental of $5 a square foot. Since the improvement land values in this zone have increased 255 per cent and the value of its structures 932 per cent. Electrification of trains, with the consequent feasibility of covering tracks and building over them, did it all.



PHILADELPHIA'S STORY—The picture above shows the notorious "Chinese Wall," for half a century a curse to Philadelphia. It carries sixteen railroad tracks into the choicest business district. It diffuses smoke, soot, and clamor, congests traffic, and arrests development. Down it is to go within four years as a result of the Pennsylvania railroad's sixty million dollar program for immediate terminal electrification, which will make possible the lowering and covering of tracks and the utilization of air rights above them. Estimates of the value of those rights to the railroad company range from sixty million to one hundred and sixty million dollars. Thus the improvement will more than pay for itself.

TOMORROW the noble vista of monumental buildings shown at the lower left of this page will replace the "Chinese Wall" in Philadelphia. The Pennsylvania's new main station will rise on the west bank of the Schuylkill river and from it a new boulevard will extend to the city hall. This colossal improvement, with its fundamental of lowered and covered tracks for suburban traffic into the heart of the city, would be impossible without electrification.

A SMILING CHAMPION is this Pete Latzo, pictured here with his wife, who seems equally joyous. Pete was a miner at Scranton, Pa., when he knocked Mickey Walker from the welterweight throne and took the seat himself.

MEN! try this—

Note how quickly it works

You fellows who smoke a lot needn't worry about tobacco stains on your teeth. Simply use a little more Colgate's than usual. Keep some in your desk. Vigorous brushing three times a day and, presto! teeth as white as ever.

* * *

Colgate's penetrates every place where it is possible for stains and food particles to collect. It loosens impurities at once. Then it washes them away, leaving your teeth and gums absolutely clean. Germs can't lurk in the warm, dark interior of your mouth when you use Colgate's regularly.

Colgate's polishes and whitens teeth naturally. That's why more people in Chicago use Colgate's than they do any other dental cream.

And you'll like the taste . . . priced right, too.

Aladdin Thermalware Jar

Keeps Food or Liquids Hot or Cold

Holds a Gallon

Was $5.00 Now $3.75

Real Aladdins never become "Musty"

A genuine Aladdin never acquires a "musty" odor, for these reasons: Stopper is of silvered glass—no cork to mold. Inside of jar is glassy smooth—no rough places for food to catch and decay. Inner jar is vitrified, like porcelain, and, therefore, non-porous—liquids cannot seep into its walls to decompose.

Neck-seal is guaranteed leak proof—no putty or plaster to crack and allow liquids to leak into insulation. Only an Aladdin is rustproof and everlastingly sanitary. Also keeps contents hot or cold for more hours.

Twelve exclusive features make Aladdins the recognized best. Insist on real Aladdins.

Green enameled, steel jacketed Aladdin Jar—non-porous porcelain-like inner, $3.75. Polished aluminum jacketed, heavy ovenware glass-lined Aladdin "De Luxe" models: Gallon, $8.50; 2-quart, $7.50. Booklet on request.

CLARA BOW, screendom's demon flapper, is working on "Mantrap," from the story by Sinclair Lewis. Percy Marmont and Ernest Torrence will also be in the cast. Can't say whether they're trapped or not.

RUTH HIATT and the little MARY ANN JACKSON are important members of the casts to play in the Smith Family comedies Mack Sennett is making for Pathe. Miss Hiatt, we guess, has to do with the romance of the skits, and Miss Ma'yann with the mischief.

GLADYS McCONNELL, announced by Fox as a new "find," is to be starred in that company's next season productions. A winsome little lady, isn't she?

Here's coolness for these torrid nights . . . an aid to restful sleep

You will welcome a sparkling, bubbling glass of "Canada Dry" at almost any hour of the day, but there is no one time when it brings such blessed relief as before retiring.

It is so cooling! So refreshing! So genuinely good for you!

A glass of "Canada Dry" at bedtime will help you to forget the heat and worry of the day and invite the peaceful calm that leads to restful sleep.

Leaning back in your chair and half closing your eyes as you drink in the piquancy of its wonderful flavor, you will realize why this fine old ginger ale has been famous for so many years in Canada and why it has become, in four years, the sensation of the U.S.A.

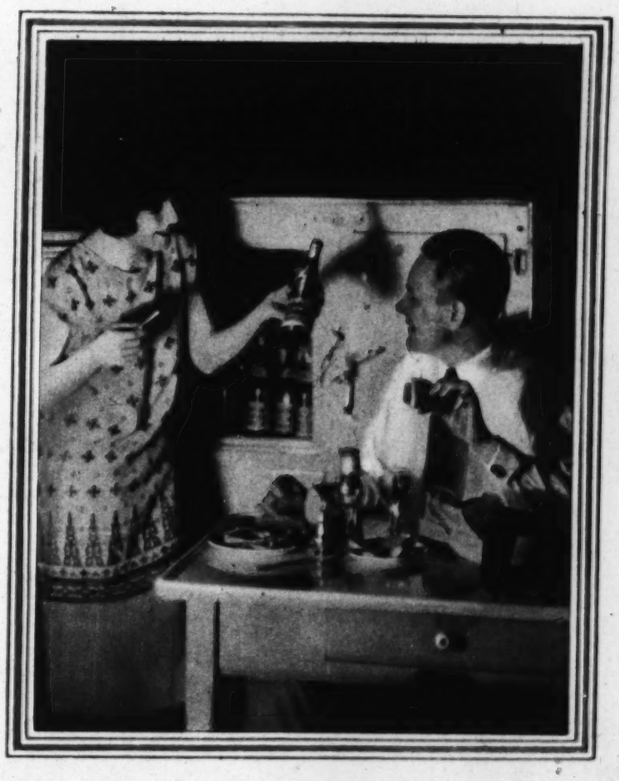
There never has been another ginger ale like it and there never will be. For the secret of the matchless flavor of "Canada Dry" is known to only three men in all the world and it cannot be purchased at any price. This secret is handed down from father to son like the lore of the wine-makers of ancient France.

Especially in summer you want a beverage that you know is good and pure and you get just that when you buy "Canada Dry."

It is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form.

That is why it is served in leading hospitals in Canada and in this country. That is why it is prescribed by physicians! That is why it is so cooling and refreshing on hot summer days.

Try it soon at dinner or before retiring. You will never forget the wonderful flavor.



TRY THIS DELICIOUS DOZEN

A new way of packing "Canada Dry." Ideal for home use. Twelve bottles in a substantial carton. You will be especially glad to have it handy when friends drop in unexpectedly, for dinner, for a refreshing bedtime snack. This Special Hostess Package is sold by all "Canada Dry" dealers.

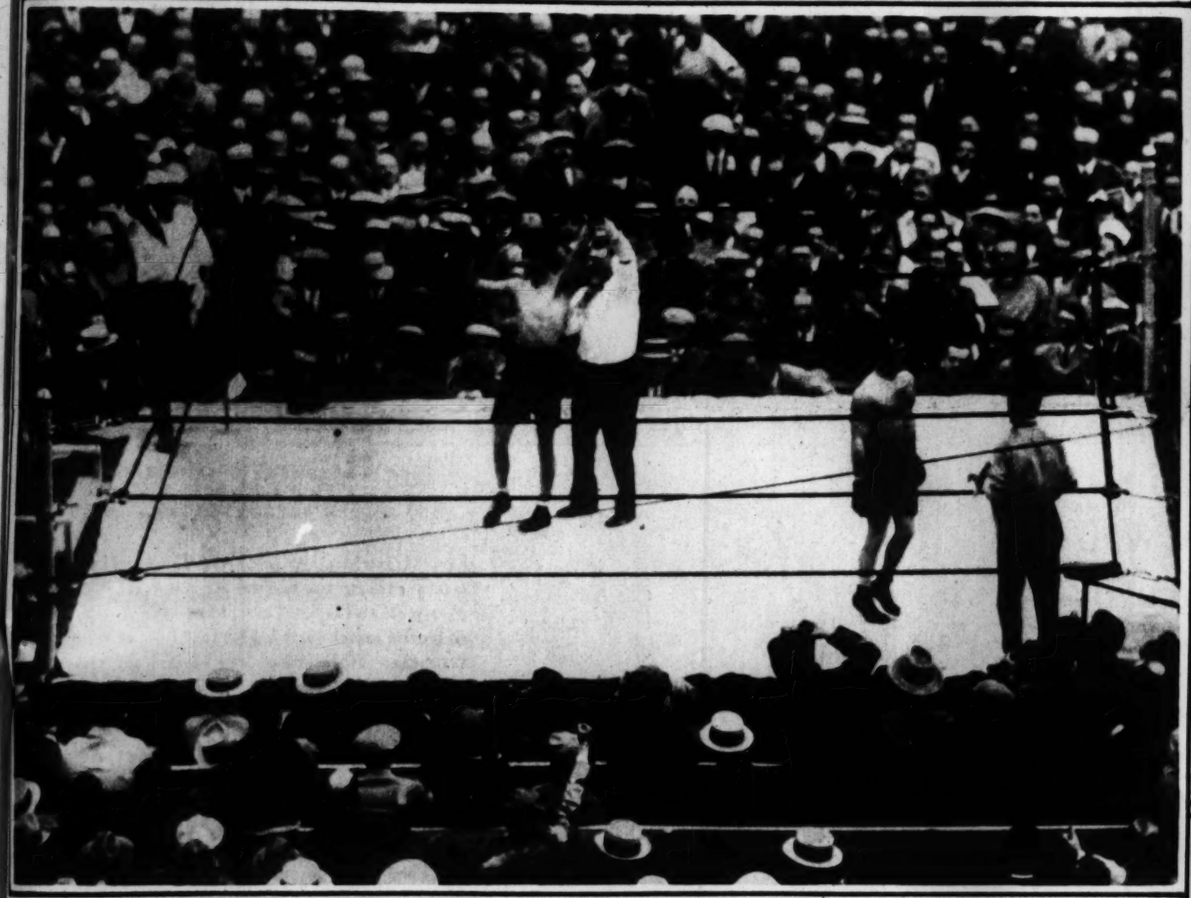
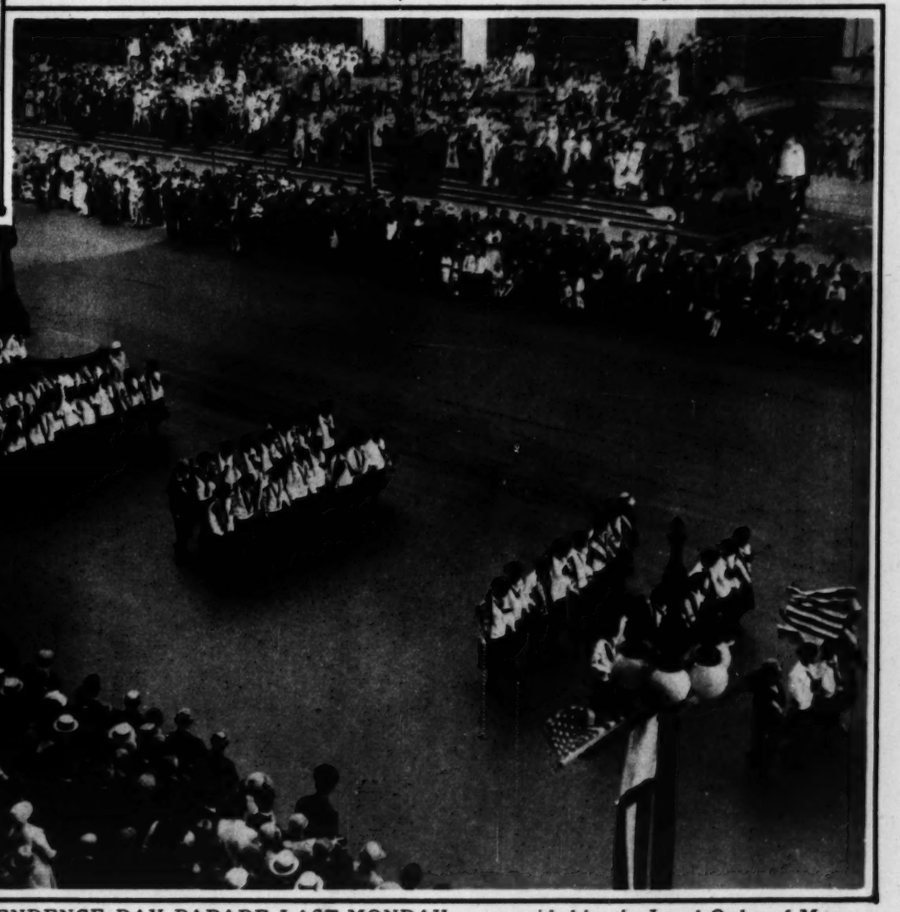
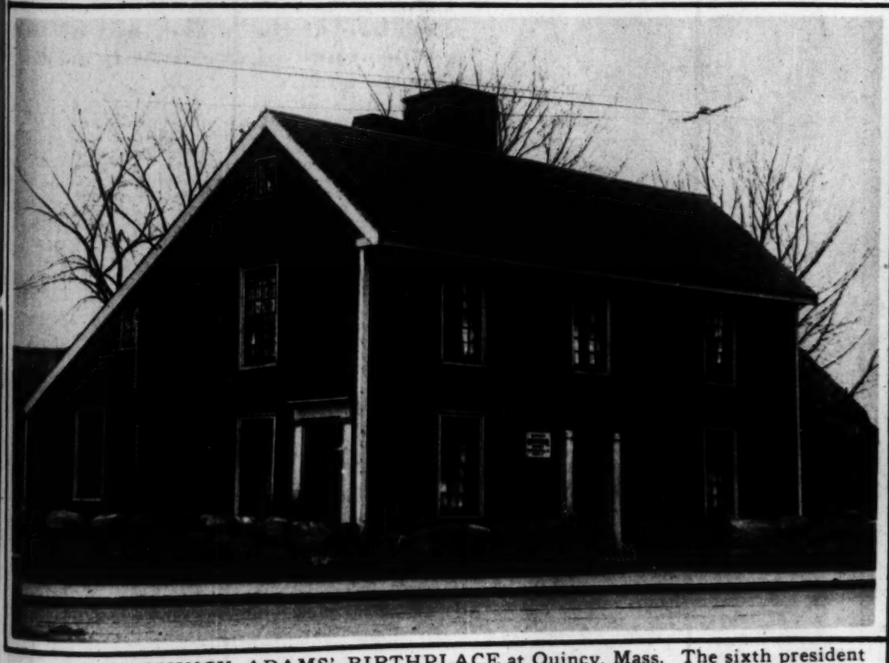
THE WORLD'S GREATEST GOLFER, Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Ga. The fiery young American attained the pinacle of golfing fame when he won the recent British open championship at St. Anne's with a magnificent score of 291. He is the first American amateur to win this tournament, which is considered the ultimate test of a golfer's game and his gameness. On his return from England Bobby was hailed as a conquering hero at New York, with parades and speeches and dinners and all that sort of thing. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



BOXING COMES BACK TO CHICAGO with the making of a new champion. Referee Phil Collins is shown raising Sammy Mandell's arm in token of his victory over Rocky Kansas after their ten round battle at Comiskey park. The decision gave the lightweight championship to Mandell, who hails from Rockford, Ill. This was the first legal boxing show held in Chicago in twenty-five years. Kansas, the dethroned champ, is at the right, walking sadly to his corner. (Tribune photograph.)





JOHN QUINCY ADAMS' BIRTHPLACE at Quincy, Mass. The sixth president of the United States (1825-1829) was born here 159 years ago today, on July 11, 1767. Quincy at that time was part of the town of Braintree, Mass. He was the son of John Adams, our country's second president, and was the only president whose father also held the highest office in the gift of the nation. From 1831 until his death at Washington on Feb. 23, 1848, John Quincy Adams represented his district in Congress. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

CHICAGO'S INDEPENDENCE DAY PARADE LAST MONDAY was provided by the Loyal Order of Moose as a feature of their great national convention here. Our picture shows a woman's division marching past the Art institute in Michigan avenue. Thousands of Chicagoans lined the boulevard to cheer the colorful pageant. Expert estimators say the Moose convention brought perhaps 150,000 visitors to Chicago. (Tribune photograph.)

JOHN D. HAD A BIRTHDAY last Thursday, July 8, and to celebrate the occasion he posed for this new picture. John Davison Rockefeller, capitalist and philanthropist, was born July 8, 1839, at Richford, N. Y. That makes him 87 years old now.

GOOD QUEEN BESS COMES TO LIFE at an historical pageant near Runnymede, where King John sealed the Magna Carta, which is the basis of English liberty. The dress and jewels worn here by the Hon. Mrs. Montague are said to have been owned by Queen Elizabeth herself. Young Brian Montague is clad as a page of the Elizabethan period. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

Again— if you want the truth—

CHILDREN are peculiarly honest. You know the phrases "Out of the mouths of babes"; and "if you want the truth, go to a child."

Well, this was the case here. And it hit the mother like a thunderbolt.

"Mother," she said, "your breath——"

It was the first time anyone had ever told her the truth about this.

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It puts you on the safe and polite side. Moreover, in using Listerine to combat halitosis, you are quite sure to avoid sore throat and those more serious illnesses that start with throat infections.

Listerine halts food fermentation in the mouth and leaves the breath sweet, fresh and clean. Not by substituting some other odor but by really removing the old one. The Listerine odor itself quickly disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are four sizes: 14 ounce, 7 ounce, 3 ounce and 1¼ ounce. Buy the large size for economy.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. S. A.

The Beauty of the Hair is Permanent, Too

Its flowing grace of line, its easy naturalness have been only partly responsible for the preference smart and thoughtful women hold for the Eugène Method of permanent waving.

The gentleness of its handling of the hair's delicate texture and sheen has really been its most eloquent advocate.

For, instead of first wetting the hair, then baking it dry, the Eugène Method winds the hair dry, just as it naturally is. Then tiny jets of clean white steam induce it to assume the wave.

An assurance not only of the permanence of the wave, but of the permanence of the beauty of the hair as well.

May we give you a little booklet which tells you more about the Eugène Method? Perhaps, too, we may be able to direct you to a shop where you may inquire first-hand about it. Just drop us a note or a post card, and we shall forward the booklet to you at once.

THE FAMOUS TENNIS COURTS OF WIMBLEDON as seen from the air. World's championship titles are conceded to the winners in the major tournament held here each year. Minor matches are decided on the courts outside the great bowl at the left. The headliners of the tennis world stage their final battles on the courts inside the bowl, with row upon row of spectators surrounding them on all sides. Wimbledon's show this year was a jubilee affair, celebrating the fiftieth year of the great tournament. (Photograph from Herbert Photos, Inc)

SEVEN QUEENS OF THE COURTS trip arm-in-arm across the pleasant green lawns of Wimbledon. Left to right in this international array are Miss Elizabeth Ryan of America; Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen of France, queen of queens in tennis; Mlle. Didi Vlasto, another star from France; Mrs. Lambert Chambers of England; Miss Joan Fry, the famous girl wonder of England; Miss de Alvarez of Spain; and Mrs. Godfree of England. YALE'S GREAT VARSITY CREW OF '86 holds a reunion in New York on the eve of the annual Yale-Harvard race. These men led Harvard's eight home by eleven lengths or so over the Thames course. Those seated are Clifford W. Hartridge, No. 7, in the '86 shell, now a New York lawyer; George W. Woodruff, No. 5, attorney general of Pennsylvania; Lewis E. Cadwell, coxswain, a realtor of Sarasota, Fla.; and Joseph W. Middlebrook, No. 3, a New York lawyer. Standing are Robert Appleton, bow, a New York publisher; Alfred Cowles of Chicago, No. 6 and captain of the '86 crew; and Dr. John Rogers, a New York surgeon. Three members of the famous eight were unable to attend the reunion, Frederic A. Stevenson, No. 4, vice president of the Bell Telephone company; Ernest L. Caldwell, stroke, of Newton Centre, Mass.; and E. L. Burke, substitute, of Omaha, Neb. The reunion was arranged by Mr. Cowles. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

WHEN QUEEN MEETS QUEEN King George of England stands back respectfully, tapping his cane. No doubt you recognize George in the white iron hat. Queen Mary was more than gracious in her reception of Suzanne Lenglen at the Wimbledon tournament. And the tennis queen of France seems delighted, too, as she bows her agile knee. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood)

WHO WON THE WAR?—It's hard for a thirsty Yankee to think Germany was beaten when he views this gay scene at a German beach. Fine beer with great tempting collars and loads of inviting food on the tables mark the opening of the season at the resorts near Berlin. (Photograph from Wide World)
